

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN DIVISION

IN RE:

Case No. 13-53846

CITY OF DETROIT, MICHIGAN,

Chapter 9

Debtor.

Judge Thomas J. Tucker

ORDER REGARDING FURTHER PROCEEDINGS ON THE CITY OF DETROIT'S OBJECTION TO CLAIM NO. 3232
OF STEVEN WOLAK, AS PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE OF THE ESTATE OF CHRISTOPHER WOLAK, DECEASED

This case came before the Court for a hearing on November 16, 2016, on the claim objection entitled "City of Detroit's Objection to Claim No. 3232" (Docket # 11620, the "Claim Objection"). For the reasons stated by the Court on the record during the hearing,

IT IS ORDERED that:

1. The Court will hold a further, non-evidentiary hearing on the Claim Objection on January 25, 2017 at 1:30 p.m.
2. The claimant, Steven Wolak, as Personal Representative of the Estate of Christopher Wolak, Deceased ("Wolak"), may file a supplement in support of his response to the Claim Objection, in the form of a supplemental brief and exhibits containing any evidentiary materials (affidavits, documentary evidence), no later than December 16, 2016. Wolak's supplement must be limited to any argument(s) Wolak wishes to make as to why the pre-petition settlement agreement between Wolak and the City should be avoided rather than enforced (e.g., an argument that Wolak was fraudulently induced by the City to enter into the settlement agreement).¹
3. Karen Evangelista, the Chapter 7 Trustee in the pending bankruptcy case filed by Steven Wolak and Francine Wolak (Case No. 15-58342), may file a response to any supplement filed by Steven Wolak. The Chapter 7 Trustee's response must be filed no later than December 27, 2016.
4. The City of Detroit may file a response to the supplement filed by Steven Wolak, and to the Chapter 7 Trustee's response to that supplement, including any supplemental brief and any exhibits, no later than January 17, 2017.

As promised during the November 16, 2016 hearing, the Court attaches to this Order, for reference by the parties, excerpts from the transcript of the Court's April 29, 2015 bench opinion given in the case of Collins v. Deshikachar, Adv. No. 14-4318 (Docket # 133), relating to principles regarding enforcement and interpretation of settlement agreements, and possible grounds for avoiding enforcement of a settlement agreement, under Michigan law.

1 The Plaintiff contends that the -- there is a
2 valid enforceable settlement agreement, which this Court
3 should enforce, between the Plaintiff and the Defendant, 4 which the material terms of which are all stated, according 5 to Plaintiff, in the terms sheet, Docket 83, Exhibit B.

6 The Defendant disagrees with that argument and 7 disputes that. And there are a number of issues to be 8 discussed on that with respect to that dispute between 9 these parties.

10 The -- I'm going to talk a little bit about the 11 law that applies to the issues at hand with respect to this 12 motion and the dispute between the parties reading this 13 motion.

14 First of all, some general principles that apply 15 here. As stated by the United States District Court for 16 this District in the 2010 decision of McCormick v.
17 Brzezinski, B-r-z-e-z-i-n-s-k-i, a decision of the District 18 Court for this District from April 13, 2010 that is 19 reported at 2010 WL 1463176, the Court stated the following 20 principles, all of which I agree with and apply to this 21 case regarding enforcement of settlement agreements. First 22 the Court said:

23 "It is well established that courts retain the 24 inherent power to enforce agreements entered into in 25 settlement of litigation pending before them."

1 And by the way, in quoting from this opinion and 2 other opinions, I'm omitting citations. There are numerous 3 citations to case laws cited in these opinions that I'm 4 going to be quoting from supporting the propositions 5 stated.

6 The Court went on in the McCormick case to say 7 that, and this is at West Law page 2, by the way, all of 8 this, the Court went on to say that, quote:

9 "The district court's power to summarily enforce 10 settlements extends to cases where the parties have 11 not reduced their agreements to writing. This 12 inherent power derives from 'the policy favoring the 13 settlement of disputes and the avoidance of costly and 14 time-consuming litigation.'"

15 A little later on page 2 in the McCormick opinion, 16 the District Court stated, quote:

17 "'To enforce a settlement, a district court must 18 conclude that agreement has been reached on all 19 material terms. [W]hether [a settlement agreement] is 20 a valid contract between the parties is determined by 21 reference to state substantive law governing contracts
22 generally.' Thus, the court will apply Michigan
23 contract law to determine whether a valid settlement 24 agreement was reached."

25 A little later in the opinion the Court went on to

1 say the following, quote:

2 "Under Michigan law, in order to form a valid 3 contract, there must be a meeting of the minds, or 4 mutual assent, with respect to all material terms of 5 the contract. Further, '[a] meeting of the minds is 6 judged by an objective standard, looking to the 7 express words of the parties and their visible acts, 8 not their subjective states of mind.'"

9 Again, that's from West Law page 2 of the 10 McCormick opinion.

11 A further statement of some general principles
12 that apply here was stated by the Michigan Court of Appeals
13 in the case of Dezaak, D-e-z-a-a-k, Management, Inc. v.
14 Auto Owners Insurance Company, reported at 2012 WL 5258304,
15 a decision of the Michigan Court of Appeals from October 16 23, 2012. At West Law page 2 the Michigan Court of Appeals
17 stated the following propositions of Michigan law, quote:

18 "An agreement between parties to settle a pending 19 lawsuit constitutes a contract and is governed by the 20 legal principles that are applicable to the 21 interpretation of contracts. Unambiguous agreements 22 must be enforced according to their plain terms. In 23 the absence of duress, fraud, mutual mistake, severe
24 stress, or unconscionable advantage taken by one party
25 over the opposing party, courts are bound to enforce

1 settlement agreements." Unquote.

2 And again, I'm omitting citations to authorities
3 that appear in the Michigan Court of Appeals opinion when 4 I'm quoting from it.

5 A little bit later in the opinion, still at West
6 Law page 2, the Michigan Court of Appeals went on to say,
7 quote:

8 "[S]ettlement agreements should not normally be 9 set aside and...once a settlement agreement is reached
10 a party cannot disavow it merely because he has had a 11 'change of heart.'" Unquote.

12 Next, I want to note a holding of the Michigan
13 Court of Appeals in the case of Shuster, S-h-u-s-t-e-r, v.
14 Daimler Chrysler Corporation, a decision from March 1, 2005
15 in the Michigan Court of Appeals, which is reported at 2005
16 WL 474009, and this is from West Law page 1 of the Court's 17 opinion. There the Michigan Court of Appeals said, quote:

18 "An agreement to settle a pending lawsuit is a 19 contract governed by the legal principles applicable
20 to the construction and interpretation of contracts.
21 There must be a meeting of the minds, i.e. mutual 22 assent, on all the material facts in order to form a 23 valid agreement, and whether such a meeting of the 24 minds occurred is judged by an objective, rather than 25 subjective, standard, looking to the express words of 1 diminished by the fact that the parties have yet to 2 memorialize the agreement. When parties have agreed 3 on the essential terms of a settlement, and all that 4 remains is to memorialize the agreement in writing, 5 the parties are bound by the terms of the oral 6 agreement."

7 The Sixth Circuit held these same things in the 8 case of Michigan Regional Council of Carpenters v. New 9 Century Bancorp, Inc., reported at 99 Fed.Appx 15 2004 WL
10 771255. The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth
11 Circuit decision from April 8, 2004, in particular at West 12 Law pages 7 and 8.

13 And finally the Sixth Circuit, I would cite the 14 Sixth Circuit case of Brock v. Scheuner, S-c-h-e-u-n-e-r, 15 Corporation, 841 F.2d 151 at page 154, a Sixth Circuit 16 decision from 1988 in which the Sixth Circuit held as 17 follows, and again, I'm omitting citations. This is at 18 page 154. Quote:

19 "It is well established that courts retain the 20 inherent power to enforce agreements entered into in 21 settlement of litigation pending before them. A 22 federal court possesses this power 'even if that 23 agreement has not been reduced to writing.' Before 24 enforcing settlement, the district court must conclude 25 that agreement has been reached on all material terms.

1 The court must enforce the settlement as agreed to by 2 the parties and is not permitted to alter the terms of 3 the agreement." Unquote.

4 Now, in this case, the terms sheet, what I've been 5 referring to as the terms sheet, that was signed by the 6 Plaintiff and the Defendant on January 30, on its face is 7 complete. It contains all the material terms of the 8 parties' agreement to settle this adversary proceeding, 9 such that in the Court's view there can be no genuine 10 dispute that the terms sheet. The terms stated in the 11 terms sheet constitute an enforceable settlement agreement 12 between the parties as a written signed agreement 13 containing all the material terms of the parties' agreed 14 settlement, unless one of the defenses, arguments in the 15 nature of a defense that the Defendant has made, such as 16 duress or mistake of fact, which I'll talk about a little 17 bit more in a minute, has been -- is demonstrated.

18 The Defendant's arguments that the terms sheet
19 does not contain all the material or essential elements, 20 material elements of the settlement of a settlement between 21 the parties, which the Defendant's counsel has -- has 22 stated today essentially as an argument that the terms
23 sheet contains some of the terms but not all the material 24 terms of the settlement, is in my view without merit as a 25 matter of law based on the undisputed facts and the content

1 amount to or demonstrate, even if accepted as true, any 2 proper or valid defense to against enforcement of the 3 settlement agreement that I have found was made by the 4 parties in the terms sheet.

5 As I noted earlier in quoting from the Michigan 6 Court of Appeals decision in Dezaak Management v. Auto
7 Owners Insurance Company case, under Michigan law:

8 "A settlement agreement must be enforced in the 9 absence of duress, fraud, mutual mistake, severe
10 stress, or unconscionable advantage taken by one party
11 over the opposing party."

12 Absent those things, courts are bound to enforce 13 settlement agreements between the parties.

14 With respect to this concept of unconscionability,
15 I want to talk about that first. Unconscionable advantage 16 taken by one party over the opposing party, that's one of 17 the exceptions in the Dezaak Management case. Michigan law 18 makes clear that unconscionability is something far more 19 severe than what has been alleged, the facts that have been 20 alleged by the Defendant here.

21 In the case of Majestic Golf, LLC v. Lake Walden
22 Country Club, Inc., a Michigan Court of Appeals decision 23 from 2012, reported at 823 N.W.2d. at page 610, which I'll 24 note for the record was reversed on other grounds other 25 than the ones I'm relying on here by this Michigan Supreme

1 Court in 2013 at 840 N.W.2d. 305, the Michigan Court of 2 Appeals said at page 623, that is 823 N.W.2d. at page 623
3 regarding unconscionability, the following, quote:

4 "[i]n order for a contract or contract provision 5 to be considered unconscionable, both procedural and 6 substantive unconscionability must be present."

7 I'm omitting citations here. The Court goes on to 8 quote a case, an earlier Michigan Court of Appeals case, 9 Clark v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., as saying the following,
10 quote:

11 "Procedural unconscionability exists where the 12 weaker party had no realistic alternative to 13 acceptance of the term. If, under a fair appraisal of 14 the circumstances, the weaker party was free to accept 15 or reject the term, there was no procedural 16 unconscionability. Substantive unconscionability
17 exists where the challenged term is not substantively
18 reasonable. However, a contract or contract provision 19 is not invariably substantively unconscionable simply 20 because it is foolish for one party and very 21 advantageous to the other. Instead, a term is 22 substantively unreasonable where the inequity of the 23 term is so extreme as to shock the conscience."

24 Unquote.

25 The facts alleged by the Defendant including what

1 he has alleged and argued regarding his IRS debt
2 potentially impairing his ability to pay settlement terms, 3 if true might show that the Defendant -- the Defendant was 4 guilty of perhaps even of being foolish in agreeing to the 5 payment terms if he thought the IRS was going to prevent 6 him from making the payments required by the settlement 7 here with Ms. Collins, but it does not amount to 8 unconscionability as defined by Michigan law in this case 9 I've just quoted from.

10 There's no procedural unconscionability because 11 Mr. Deshikachar, the Defendant, was free to reject the 12 terms of this settlement terms sheet and not agree to them 13 and not sign the settlement terms sheet and, in fact,
14 refused to agree to any settlement because of his concern
15 if he had it at the time about the Internal Revenue Service
16 debt or for any other reason. So there was no procedural 17 unconscionability here; that's clear. And the facts he's 18 alleged do not show otherwise, even accepted as true and 19 admissible.

20 Further, there's no substantive unconscionability
21 because the terms of this terms sheet that the Defendant 22 agreed to and signed, this settlement, were not such as to 23 be inequitable in such an extreme as to shock the 24 conscience. So there is no unconscionability on the facts, 25 even if we accept as true and admissible all of the facts

1 alleged by the Defendant here in opposing this motion to 2 enforce the settlement as that term is defined by Michigan 3 law.

4 With respect to the argument, and this is a 5 similar argument, the argument the Defendant has made that 6 the settlement agreement should not be enforced because the 7 Defendant was subject to duress or coercion that led him to 8 sign that terms sheet and agree to that, those terms, when 9 Michigan case law refers to duress or coercion, in order to 10 show duress or coercion as the Dezaak case that I cited
11 earlier, Dezaak Management, Inc. v. Auto Owners Insurance
12 Company, Michigan Court of Appeals decision says, and this 13 is at 2012 WL 5258304 at WL page 2, footnote 1, the Court
14 there says, quote:

15 "A settlement agreement generally cannot be set 16 aside on the basis of a unilateral mistake."

17 And I'll talk about mistake a little bit more.

18 And then the Court says, quote:

19 "To establish a claim of duress, a party must show 20 that he or she was illegally compelled or coerced to 21 engage in an act under fear of serious injury to his 22 or her person, reputation, or fortune." Unquote.

23 And I'm omitting citations here. Certainly duress
24 as defined by the Michigan Courts in the Dezaak case is not 25 shown under the facts alleged, even if all facts alleged by

1 the Defendant are accepted as true and admissible and 2 admitted into evidence.

3 The U.S. District Court in the McCormick case that 4 I cited earlier similarly talks about duress and coercion
5 under Michigan law, and this is at 2010 WL 1463176 at WL
6 page 4, and I'm omitting citations. The Court says the 7 following, quote:

8 "Courts generally agree that to prove duress, a 9 party must show 'first, that one side involuntarily 10 accepted the terms of another; second, that 11 circumstances permitted no other alternative; and 12 third, that the opposite party's coercive acts caused 13 those circumstances.' Specifically, under Michigan 14 law, the touchstone of coercion and duress is that the 15 victim is deprived of his or her 'unfettered will.'"
16 Unquote.

17 Defendant has presented and alleged no facts that 18 would show duress or coercion under this definition. It's 19 clear and it's undisputed and it's admitted in the hearing 20 today by the Defendant's counsel on behalf of the 21 Defendant, the Defendant was free and had freedom here to 22 refuse to agree to any settlement or to the particular 23 settlement terms that he signed off on in signing the terms
24 sheet at issue. He was free not to agree to those things, 25 but he agreed to them and signed the terms sheet anyway,

1 and he was not coerced or guilty -- or the victim of duress
2 as those terms are defined by Michigan law in the McCormick
3 case and under the Dezaak case that I have quoted from.

4 In the, applying Michigan law in discussing duress
5 in this kind of context, the U.S. District Court for the 6 Eastern District of Michigan in a 1991 case, Cochran, C-o-
7 c-h-r-a-n v. Ernst & Young, 758 F.Supp. 1548 at page 1556, 8 the District Court stated that in the absence of physical 9 intimidation or coercion there can only be a claim of 10 economic duress, and that concept is defined this way,
11 quote:

12 "Fear of financial ruin or economic hardship, 13 alone, is not a legally sufficient basis for claiming 14 coercion or economic duress. To maintain a claim of 15 economic duress or coercion in Michigan, serious
16 financial harm must be threatened, and the person 17 allegedly applying the coercion must act unlawfully."

18 There's no allegation of any unlawful actions or - 19 - by any participant in the mediation made against the 20 Defendant here, nor do the facts amount to, even if 21 accepted as true, amount to any sort of threat that's -- 22 could be considered by any stretch of the imagination to be 23 duress or coercion that would permit the Defendant to avoid 24 an enforcement of the settlement agreement here.

25 Similar authority for this concept is the Michigan

1 Supreme Court's decision from 1963 in the Beachlawn
2 Building Corporation v. City of St. Clair Shores case, 3 reported at 121 N.W.2d 427 at page 429 to 430 where the 4 Court said, quote:

5 "Duress exists when one by the unlawful act of 6 another is induced to make a contract or perform such 7 act under circumstances which deprive him of the 8 exercise of free will." Unquote.

9 Such an extreme situation clearly is not 10 demonstrated by the facts even as alleged by the Defendant 11 here in this case.

12 With respect to mistake, whether the Defendant's 13 argument is properly characterized as Defendant does in the 14 brief at Docket 91 as mistake of fact, or as Plaintiff's 15 counsel argued in today's hearing mistake of law, in either
16 case under the facts alleged by the Defendant as a matter 17 of law, there was no -- there was no mistake, mutual 18 mistake that would justify the Court's refusing to enforce 19 this settlement agreement.

20 As the Michigan Court of Appeals in the Dezaak 21 Management case that I've quoted from earlier, stated, and 22 this is 2012 WL 5258304 at West Law page 2, footnote 1, the 23 Michigan Court of Appeals said that, quoting:

24 " A mutual mistake may be one of fact or one of 25 law. A mutual mistake of fact means 'an erroneous belief,

1 which is shared and relied on by both parties, about a 2 material fact that affects the substance of the 3 transaction.' A settlement agreement generally cannot be 4 set aside on the basis of a unilateral mistake."

5 That's in footnote 1, and further on West Law at 6 page 3 in that opinion, the Michigan Court of Appeals went 7 on to say, quote:

8 "We will not find duress or undue influence where 9 a trial court has voiced its position on a legal issue 10 during trial that strongly motivates, or even 11 pressures, a party to settle an action; this is not an 12 uncommon occurrence." Unquote.

13 Similarly, any pressure applied by the mediator in 14 a mediation session, like the mediation in this case, even 15 if it were admissible in evidence that that had occurred, 16 would not be considered duress or undue influence, nor is 17 there any showing under the facts alleged by the Defendant
18 that there was a mutual mistake of fact that the Plaintiff
19 and the Defendant shared and both relied on a mistake, 20 mutual mistake of fact, nor a mistake of law in agreeing to 21 the settlement that they agreed to.

22 In addition, under Michigan law, if there had been 23 a mutual mistake of fact or law, that mistake would have to 24 be material in order to provide a defense to enforcement of 25 a settlement agreement. The Michigan Court of Appeals held

1 in the Shuster v. Daimler Chrysler Corp. case that I cited
2 earlier, and this is 2005 WL 474009, at West Law page 2, 3 the Court held that:

4 "To establish a mutual mistake of fact, a
5 plaintiff must show that both parties were mistaken 6 concerning an existing fact that was material to the 7 agreement." Unquote.

8 The Court in that case also held, by the way, that 9 mistake of law as opposed to a mistake of fact, does not 10 justify relief from a contract.

11 So, the Defendant's alleged -- facts alleged and 12 arguments here do not amount, as a matter of law, even if 13 accepted and could be considered by the Court, and all the 14 facts alleged by the Defendant could be considered by the 15 Court and deemed as true, do not amount, as a matter of 16 law, do not amount to any of the types of concepts or 17 defenses that might permit the Defendant to escape 18 enforcement of the settlement agreement that he made with 19 the Plaintiff. That is, there was no duress, coercion, 20 mutual mistake of fact or law, mutual; no
21 unconscionability; and nor was there any fraud or material 22 misrepresentation or undue stress or pressure placed upon 23 the Defendant alleged here.

24 Defendant was free to refuse to accept the 25 settlement on the terms agreed to, that he ultimately
