8 cool, we found $67 million worth of value in the past two
9 months, so therefore we're going to beat the liquidation
10 analysis that we previously told you just two months ago.

11 They also acknowledge that, in those two months, that 12 there was going to be about $26 million in increased costs
13 from their November analysis to their February analysis. And 14 they included that in their projections.

15 Finally, they acknowledged, in those two months, that we 16 had previously estimated -- and they even have it in their 17 assumptions in November liquidation and plan analysis -- that 18 UBS, HarbourVest, and I believe it was Acis, were all going to 19 be valued at zero dollars, and that's what the claims were 20 going to be. Well, they kind of missed the boat on those, and 21 they missed it by a lot. They -- it increased all the claims
22 in the pool from $195 million to $273 million, or sorry, I
23 don't -- look at that again, but it was an increase of $95
24 million. I'm sorry, 190 -- the claims pool increased from 25 $194 million to -- I'm sorry, Your Honor, I have too many

1 papers in front of me -- on November, the claims pool was 176
2 and it increased by February 1st to 273. Therefore,
3 approximately $95, almost $100 million worth of claims that 4 they weren't anticipating that actually came in.

5 That tells you about the quality of the assumptions that
6 went into the analysis to begin with. They missed it by 50
7 percent on what the overall claims pool was going to be.
8 That's significant. It's material.

9 There is a lot of other assumptions that could go into 10 this document, and one of those assumptions are how much are 11 we going to be able to monetize these assets for? One other 12 assumption is, well, how much is it going to cost during the 13 two-year life of this wind-down? Another assumption is going 14 to be, are we actually going to be able to wind down in two 15 years? Because if we're not, well, guess what, all those 16 costs are going to go up. Another assumption is, well, how 17 much are those fee claims going to be over the two-year
18 period? Again, if it goes over two years, they're going to be 19 significantly higher. Moreover, you might have just missed
20 what the burn rate is.

21 So I think it's rather telling that the assumptions made
22 of -- all the way back of over two -- of only two months ago
23 were off by $100 million, and therefore it skewed all of the 24 plan-versus-liquidation analysis all over the board.

25 That's the only evidence that the Debtor has put forth as

1 to why it's in the best interest of the creditors. And quite
2 frankly, we don't believe they have met their burden. And it
3 is their burden to prove to Your Honor that the plan is better
4 than what a Chapter 7 trustee will -- can do.

5 What the evidence does show, as far as what the plan would 6 do as compared to a hypothetical Chapter 7 trustee, is that we 7 know for sure that the Claimant Trust base fee, just over the 8 two years, is going to be $3.6 million.

9 (Interruption.)

10 MR. TAYLOR: I'm sorry.

11 THE COURT: Someone needs to put their device on 12 mute. I don't know who that was.

13 MR. TAYLOR: Oh, I'm sorry. I thought you said
14 something, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: No.

16 MR. TAYLOR: So what we do know is the Claimant
17 Trustee base fee is going to be $3.6 million. What we don't 18 know and what was not put into evidence because they are still 19 negotiating it is there's going to be a bonus fee on top of 20 that that's going to be paid to Mr. Seery. Is that $2
21 million? Is that $4 million? Is that $10 million? Well, we 22 don't know. We can't perform that analysis as compared to 23 what a hypothetical Chapter 7 trustee could be. Nor can Your 24 Honor, based upon the evidence presented.

25 And quite frankly, I don't see how one could ever conclude

1 -- and there are some other unknowns that we're about to go
2 over, including the Litigation Trust base fee and there are 3 collection fees, contingency fees. Those are also to be
4 negotiated. To be negotiated and unknown. You can't perform
5 the analysis. The Debtor couldn't perform the analysis
6 because those are to be negotiated, so you can't tell whether
7 a Chapter -- hypothetical Chapter 7 trustee might come out
8 better because he's not going to incur all these costs. We 9 know that they're going to incur D&O costs.

10 THE COURT: Let me interject right now.

11 MR. TAYLOR: Sure.

12 THE COURT: Again, I'm going to go back to 13 understanding who your client is arguing for. Okay? Again,
14 as we've said before, Mr. Pomerantz did not technically say no
15 standing, but he thought it was important to point out the 16 economic interests that our Objectors either have or don't 17 have. Okay?

18 So I'm looking through my notes to see exactly what the 19 Dondero economic interest is. I have something written in my 20 notes, but I'm going to let you tell me. Tell me what his 21 economic interests are with regard to this Debtor, this 22 reorganization.

23 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I believe he has been placed 24 into Class 9, Subordinated Claims. So to the extent that 25 there is recovery available to Class 9, he can recover on

1 those claims.

2 THE COURT: But what proof of claim --

3 MR. TAYLOR: We also have --

4 THE COURT: What proof of claim does he have pending
5 at this juncture?

6 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I would have to go back and 7 look. I don't have the proofs of claim register in front of 8 me. And I'm sorry, if I tried to speculate, I would be doing
9 a disservice to my client and this Court by trying to 10 speculate. I did not prepare those proofs of claim. People
11 in my firm did. But I would be merely speculating if I tried 12 to give you an answer off the spot. And I apologize. I'm 13 happy to submit a post-confirmation hearing letter --

14 THE COURT: No, no, no.

15 MR. TAYLOR: -- as to that.

16 THE COURT: I'm not going to allow one more piece of 17 paper in connection with confirmation. I thought you would be 18 able to answer that.

19 MR. TAYLOR: I'm sorry. I just don't want to lie to 20 Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: What about his -- what would be an 22 indirect equity interest?

23 MR. TAYLOR: Well, again, there are a lot of people
24 that know this org chart a lot better than me. This is me
25 going on hearsay myself. But I understand he also owns a lot

218

1 of indirect interests in subsidiaries, some of which are
2 majority, some of which are minority, and some of which he
3 owns maybe directly, some of which through other entities. So
4 the way in which these assets could be monetized at the sub-
5 debtor level could certainly impact his economic rights and 6 could impact him greatly. For instance, if the --

7 THE COURT: I really wanted an exact answer.

8 MR. TAYLOR: Mr. Seery --

9 THE COURT: I really wanted an exact answer, not just 10 he has an indirect interest in, you know, some of the 2,000 --
11 I'm not going to say tentacles, but --

12 I'm going to interrupt briefly, because I really want to 13 nail down the answer as best I can. Mr. Pomerantz, can you 14 just remind me of what your answer was or statement was 15 regarding Mr. Dondero, individually, his economic stake in all 16 this?

17 MR. POMERANTZ: He has an indemnification claim
18 that's been objected to, --

19 THE COURT: That's the one and only --

20 MR. POMERANTZ: -- although it's not before --

21 THE COURT: That's the one and only pending proof of 22 claim, right?

23 MR. POMERANTZ: That's my understanding. And while
24 it's not before the Court, we could all imagine whether Mr.
25 Dondero's going to be entitled to indemnification.

1           He has an interest in Strand, which is the general
2 partner.

3           THE COURT: Right.

4           MR. POMERANTZ: And Strand owns a quarter-percent --
5 a quarter of one percent of the equity. I believe that is all
6 of Mr. Dondero's economic interest in the Debtor.

7           THE COURT: Okay. So, again, I'm just trying to, you
8 know, understand who he's looking out for, for lack of a 9 better way of saying it, Mr. Taylor, in making these 10 arguments.

11           MR. TAYLOR: So, there is also, and this is -- I'm 12 not involved in what are these going to be filed collection
13 suits, or some of which have been filed, some of which have 14 not been filed, none of which I believe the answer date has 15 been -- has passed or come to be yet.

16           But he is also a defendant in collection suits on these 17 notes, as you are undoubtedly aware.

18           THE COURT: Okay. He's a defendant in adversary
19 proceedings. Okay? That makes him a party in interest to -- 20 well, I keep -- that makes him have standing to make an 21 1129(a)(7) argument? That's why I'm going down this trail.
22 Because you've spent the last five minutes talking about, you
23 know, creditors could do better in a Chapter 7 liquidation.
24 I'm not sure he has standing to make that argument, so I'm 25 wanting you to address that squarely.

1 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I believe he has economic
2 interests up and down the capital structure. And I cannot 3 describe to you, without wildly speculating and potentially 4 lying to this Court, which I'm not going to do, without some 5 time to have looked at that, because I was -- I was not
6 involved in the proofs of claim and I am not his accountant.
7 So I could not do that without wildly speculating, so I just 8 -- I would like to more directly answer your question, Your 9 Honor. I am not trying to avoid the question. But I can't 10 honestly answer your question with true facts as we sit here
11 right now.

12 THE COURT: All right. But do you agree or disagree
13 with me that only parties -- the only parties that really can 14 make an 1129(a)(7) argument are holders of claims or interests
15 in impaired classes?

16 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I believe that Mr. Dondero
17 has standing to do so by virtue of claims for indemnification

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. TAYLOR: -- if these -- if these -- if this 21 Debtor (indecipherable) able to meet its obligations to 22 indemnify him. And some of those are significant claims that 23 are being brought against him that could total millions, if 24 not tens of millions of dollars, just in defense costs alone,
25 that I do believe give some standing.

1 THE COURT: Okay. So, assuming you're right, you
2 think the evidence does not show this is better than a Chapter
3 7 liquidation where we would have a stranger trustee come in 4 and just, yeah, I guess, cold-turkey liquidate it all.

5 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I do believe that the 6 evidence shows that the Debtor hasn't met its burden as to 7 this. A Chapter 7 trustee doesn't necessarily have to 8 liquidate immediately. It can run these -- these assets. I
9 mean, Mr. Seery is going to do it with ten people. At one
10 time, just two months ago, he said he was going to do it with 11 three people. A Chapter 7 trustee could certainly have a 12 limited runway, or even an extended runway, if it so asked for 13 it, to liquate these Debtors.

14 Moreover, there would be at least the requirements that 15 the Chapter 7 trustee would request the sale, tell creditors
16 about it. And, as many courts have said, the competitive
17 bidding process is the best way to make sure that you ensure 18 the highest and best offer that you can get.

19 Mr. Seery has not committed to providing notice of sales 20 to creditors and other parties in interest, potentially 21 bringing them in as bidders. They -- he could name a stalking
22 horse, but he has not indicated any desire to do so. A
23 Chapter 7 trustee would endeavor to do so.

24 So I do believe that there are some advantages. And 25 you've heard no testimony that they've performed any analysis

1 or conducted any interviews with any Chapter 7 trustees as to
2 whether or not this was possible or not. They just made the 3 naked assumption that they would do work based upon what they 4 said was their experience. And Mr. Seery's deposition, when 5 it was taken and noticed as a 30(b)(6) deposition, and I
6 believe it has been entered into evidence here, he said the 7 last time he dealt with a Chapter 7 trustee was 11 or 13 years
8 ago, and it was the Lehman case, and that was the -- a SIPC
9 trustee. So --

10 THE COURT: Well, --

11 MR. TAYLOR: -- that's the last time he had any 12 experience with it.

13 THE COURT: -- again, I don't mean to belabor this 14 point, just like I didn't mean to belabor a few others. But,
15 you know, there is a mechanism, yes, in Chapter 7, Section
16 704, for a trustee to seek court authority to operate a
17 business. But it's not a statute that contemplates long-term
18 operation. Okay? It's just, oh, we've got a little bit of -- 19 you know, we have some assets here that really require a 20 short-term operation here.

21 If it's long-term, then you convert to Chapter 11. Okay?
22 It's just a temporary tool, Section 704. Right? Would you
23 agree with me?

24 MR. TAYLOR: That's typically how it has been used.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

1 MR. TAYLOR: But that's not to say that it's limited
2 in time by the statute itself. It doesn't say that it can't
3 go for one year or two years. That can be a short wind-down
4 period.

5 THE COURT: But hasn't your client's argument been
6 this past several weeks that Mr. Seery is moving too fast,
7 he's wanting to sell things and he needs to hold them longer?
8 I mean, these two argument seem inconsistent to me.

9 MR. TAYLOR: So, just because a Chapter 7 trustee has 10 been appointed doesn't mean that he has to sell them any 11 faster than Mr. Seery.

12 I think what the -- the problem with the process that has 13 been going on with Mr. Seery, my client's problem with it, is 14 not necessarily the timing but the process that Mr. Seery is 15 going through with these sales. Provide notice, allow more 16 bidders to come in, make sure that he's getting the highest 17 and best price. And if that happens to be Mr. Dondero who 18 offers the highest and best price, great. And if Mr. Dondero 19 gets outbid by somebody, well, that's all the more better for 20 the estate.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Continue your argument.

22 MR. TAYLOR: I believe we covered a lot of it, Your 23 Honor, and the plan analysis is all based upon their 24 assumptions that there's $257 million worth of value. Again, 25 there's no rollup provided as to how that asset allocation is

1 broken out, but they consist of a couple of items.

2 First, there's the notes; and second, there's the assets.
3 The notes are either long-term or demand notes. Those long-
4 term notes, Mr. Seery will tell you some have been validly
5 accelerated and therefore are now due and payable. I think
6 there's arguments to the contrary. But those long-term notes
7 probably have some both time value of money and collection
8 costs. And then, of course, you have to discount them by 9 collectability issues, too.

10 I don't believe any analysis went into it, or at least the 11 Court was not provided any data or analysis as to what 12 discounts were applied to those notes. And, therefore, I
13 don't think that this Court can make any determination that 14 the best interests of the creditors have been met.

15 As far as the assets that are to be monetized, again,
16 there's two sub-buckets of those assets. There's securities
17 that are to be sold. Some of those are semi-public securities
18 that have markets. Those are somewhat more readily
19 ascertained. The others are holdings in private equity
20 companies, and sometimes holdings in companies that own other 21 companies.

22 There's no evidence of the value -- empirical evidence of 23 the value of those companies, nor of the assumptions that went 24 into as to when they should be sold, how much they'd be sold 25 for.

1        Again, I do realize the sensitive nature of such
2 information, but that could have been placed under seal. And 3 without that information, I don't believe that the Court can
4 conduct the due diligence it's necessary to say the best
5 interest of the creditors have been met.

6        To sum up, Your Honor -- oh, I'm sorry. One other point
7 that I did want to talk about before I summed up is, you know,
8 Mr. Pomerantz and I were listening to a different record or I
9 was totally confused as to the testimony that was put forth
10 regarding the directors and officers. I believe the testimony
11 in the record is extremely clear that the Debtor made no
12 effort to go out and find out if it could obtain directors and 13 officers insurance without a gatekeeping injunction or a
14 channeling injunction, whatever you want to call it. I
15 believe that his testimony was extremely clear. He didn't 16 shop it. He doesn't know. And that's what the record is 17 before this Court.

18        To the extent that the Debtor wants to rely upon we can't 19 get Debtor -- or, directors and officers insurance because 20 without this gatekeeping function we just can't get it, I
21 believe the record just wholly does not support that. The 22 testimony was at least extremely clear, as how I heard it.
23 Your Honor will have to review the record herself, but I don't
24 believe that there was much argument about it.

25        I'm sure -- as I stated in the beginning, Your Honor, this

226

1 is a court of equity. It could deny confirmation, as I
2 believe Your Honor should, based upon the flaws in the plan.

3 If Your Honor finds that the plan as written is 4 impermissible because of any of the exculpation or the 5 gatekeeping functions that they're asking, the testimony is 6 equally clear that the independent directors would not serve
7 in -- as officers of the Reorganized Debtor. Any plan that is 8 put forth by the Debtor has to tell the people who are going
9 to be officers going forward. And with that naked testimony
10 before the Court, that it's simply not feasible, and I don't 11 think it is one of the possible -- where the Court can come 12 back and say, well, I can't confirm this plan as written, but 13 if you change it and rewrite it to get rid of the certain
14 offensive parts of the exculpation or the gatekeeping
15 functions, then we can confirm this plan. And I think the 16 evidence before this Court is it's not feasible because none
17 of the directors will serve in that capacity, and therefore 18 this plan should be dead on arrival if Your Honor agrees the 19 proposed provisions do not meet Pacific Lumber.

20 We would ask the Court to deny confirmation, but in the 21 alternative, to at least take this under advisement. Give us
22 a time frame -- we'd ask for 30 days -- but give us a time
23 frame of when the Court is going to rule, to allow the 24 positive conversations to move forward.

25 To that end, Your Honor, there is, indeed, a hearing on 227

1 the extension of a temporary injunction and contempt that is
2 scheduled for Friday. I understand that the parties, at least 3 the joint parties, will not -- will agree to, I'm sorry, will 4 agree to the extension of the temporary injunction until such
5 time as the Court can rule on confirmation. I do see that 6 there could be a lot of harm done at the Friday hearing. We 7 would ask that the Court additionally continue that hearing on 8 that motion and on the injunction, and contempt, until such 9 time as confirmation has been ruled upon. It will be both 10 efficient and allow discussions to continue regarding 11 potential global resolution.

12 And so that is the end of my argument, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: All right. Thank you. All right. Mr.
14 Pomerantz, do you have any rebuttal?

15 REBUTTAL CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE DEBTOR

16 MR. POMERANTZ: Yes, I do, Your Honor. I want to 17 address a couple of comments that Mr. Taylor made towards the 18 end. First of all -- and, actually, the beginning.

19 We think Your Honor should rule on confirmation. Ruling
20 on confirmation and having an entered confirmation order are 21 two separate things. We understand that a new offer was made.
22 Whether that's acceptable to the Committee -- I actually think 23 it will enhance the ability of the parties to see if they 24 could reach a deal if there's (audio gap) that Your Honor is 25 going to confirm the plan.

1        Again, doesn't mean a confirmation order has to be
2 entered, but I think, based upon my personal experience in 3 negotiating with Mr. Dondero, that your clear communication to 4 the parties that, unless something happens, you will enter a
5 confirmation order, I think will change things. Okay?
6 Without getting into settlement discussions, things have 7 changed over the last several days, and we wish you would have 8 -- wish things would have happened sooner. But we totally 9 disagree that Your Honor should hold your ruling for 30 days
10 or any other period of time.

11        Part of the reason I think they are making that argument
12 is because they have an examiner motion and they recognize 13 that, upon confirmation, the examiner motion is moot. So I
14 think there's strategic reasons as well.

15        We don't think there should be a continuance of the TRO
16 hearing and of the contempt hearing. As Your Honor recalls,
17 the contempt motion was specifically set for this time to give 18 Mr. Dondero enough time to prepare. Your Honor was sensitive
19 to his due process concerns. We set the TRO, the preliminary 20 injunction hearing against the Advisors and the Funds, we set
21 that, again, knowing that it would be after confirmation.

22        So we do not agree that either should be continued.
23 Again, we think the more direct, unequivocal answers Your 24 Honor can give to the parties, the better off we'll be.

25        I guess -- Mr. Taylor and I do agree that the record was

1 clear. I guess we just disagree on the clarity of it. I
2 heard Mr. Tauber testify that when he went out to people, to 3 insurance carriers, after he and Aon were engaged, they all
4 talked about a Dondero exclusion. Okay? They weren't
5 convinced into a gatekeeper provision because it was provided
6 as part of the normal materials you would provide in a 7 bankruptcy court and trying to get D&O liability in the 8 context of a bankruptcy case. Mr. Tauber's testimony was 9 pretty clear, that carriers wanted to have a Dondero
10 exclusion. And, in fact, the only reason we were able to get 11 any coverage was because of the gatekeeper.

12 So, yes, the record was clear. We just disagree.

13 I'd like to go back to Mr. Draper's comments going -- and 14 a couple of things, obviously, overlap. I guess one of the 15 things here, it's great that everyone is coming in here as 16 different interests and different parties or whatnot. But as 17 I mentioned, Your Honor, at the outset, and I've repeated a 18 few times, these are all -- the only people we have not been 19 able to resolve issues with are the Dondero parties and the 20 related parties. And I recall the tentacles. Mr. Davor
21 questioned that. Mr. Clemente, his comments. But the fact of 22 the matter is, Your Honor, Your Honor has heard testimony.
23 Your Honor has had hearings. Mr. Rukavina represents the 24 Advisors and the Funds. Your Honor has never seen the 25 independent board member testify in this case to demonstrate

1 how these entities are really different. So while Mr.
2 Rukavina does -- you know, tries his best, and I think he has
3 limited stuff to work with, but I give him credit for doing
4 the best he can, these are all Dondero-related entities and 5 Your Honor has seen that.

6 So, Your Honor, going to the resolicitation argument, it
7 actually has taken up a lot more time than the argument is 8 worth, for one very simple reason. As I said in my argument,
9 and as Mr. Taylor and Mr. Draper totally ignored, there were 10 17 creditors who voted yes, 17 creditors who were apparently 11 misled, that Mr. Draper is looking out for the little guy and 12 Mr. Taylor is fumbling over his reason for why that's 13 important to Dondero. And of those 17 creditors that voted 14 yes, Your Honor, they were either the employees related to 15 HarbourVest, UBS, Redeemer, or Acis, except for two. And you
16 know the other two? One was Contrarian, a claim buyer, who,
17 yeah, elected to be in Class 7, and the other was an employee
18 with a dollar claim.

19 So the whole argument that there should be a 20 resolicitation is preposterous, Your Honor. But to go to some 21 of the specifics in what they argued, we didn't require
22 creditors to monitor recovery. The footnote -- as I
23 indicated, the UBS 3018 was in the disclosure statement that 24 went out. It didn't make it to the projections. It was 25 clearly -- and they characterize it, I think Mr. Draper

1 characterized it as buried in the document. There is a
2 section that every disclosure statement is required to have 3 called Risk Factors. This disclosure statement had that. And 4 in the disclosure statement, it talked about the amount of 5 claims being a risk factor.

6 Mr. Draper also said that the Debtor totally changed its 7 business model from the first to the second analysis. That is 8 incorrect. The Debtor was always going to manage funds. Yes,
9 did they add the CLOs? But before, they were going to manage
10 Multi-Strat, they were going to manage Restoration Capital,
11 they were going to oversee Korea, they were going to be doing
12 the management of the funds. So there wasn't a big change in 13 the business model, Your Honor.

14 Mr. Taylor, on the solicitation issue, says we found $67
15 million in assets. You know, that's a disingenuous statement.
16 I think over $20 million was found because his client and 17 related entities didn't make a payment on notes and they got 18 accelerated. So while before we would have had to wait over
19 time if they were paid, it's not surprising that Mr. Dondero 20 and his related entities just failed to basically pay the 21 notes.

22 So that was, I think, over $20 million. And then there
23 was the HCLOF asset. That was acquired in the HarbourVest
24 settlement. And then there was basically an increase in some 25 value to some assets.

1       So there wasn't anything mysterious here. There wasn't
2 anything that the Debtor was trying to hide. There weren't
3 any found assets. It was based upon different circumstances.

4       Mr. Taylor complains about the lack of rollup of assets,
5 the lack of evidence on the best interests of creditors test.
6 Your Honor, you've had extensive testimony from Mr. Seery
7 about what would happen in a Chapter 7 and what would happen
8 in a Chapter 11. And you know why we didn't provide the 9 information to Mr. Taylor and his client on what the rollup of 10 the assets would be, and do you know why he wants them? He 11 wants to know what the assets are so he can try to bid.

12       And there also was the allegation that the failure to 13 allow them to bid means we're going to get less in a Chapter
14 11 than a 7. Two comments to that, Your Honor. Number one,
15 if that was the case, a debtor would never be able to satisfy
16 the best interests of creditors test. If the existence of a 17 public process de facto meant you would get more value than 18 outside, you would never be able to satisfy that. And, quite 19 honestly, that's just not the law, Your Honor.

20       You have an Oversight Committee with over $200 million of 21 creditors who are going to watch Mr. Seery like a hawk, like 22 they have watched him during the case. And the concern that 23 somehow, because these assets are not put into full view to 24 sell, that they will get less value, it's just not -- it's not 25 supported by the evidence at all, Your Honor. And Mr. Seery

1 will make the determination. If it makes sense to notice up
2 and provide Mr. Dondero with notice, he will. If he doesn't,
3 he won't.

4 Your Honor, going -- oh, and then the last comment on the 5 -- that I'll make on the resolicitation and the liquidation
6 analysis is Mr. Taylor chides us and we've been criticized for 7 not disclosing more about the HarbourVest and the UBS
8 settlements and that we were off substantially. Your Honor,
9 you've heard testimony that we were in pending litigation with 10 HarbourVest and UBS at the time. What kind of litigant would 11 we be if we came in and said, you know, Your Honor, you know,
12 Creditors, we think the UBS claim is going to be allowed at 13 $60 million and we think the HarbourVest claim is going to be 14 allowed at $30 million? Would that really have benefited
15 creditors and this estate, to basically, after we took the 16 position, hard negotiations and hard pleadings that we 17 prepared, and in some cases filed, that we didn't have any 18 liability? It would have made no sense, and it would have 19 been a dereliction of our duty to actually come out and say 20 what the claims -- the claims were, or what we thought they 21 could be settled for.

22 Your Honor, going back to Mr. Draper's comments. He 23 started with the exculpation. First he made a comment that I
24 don't think he intended what he said, but he said that the 25 exculpation order, the January 9th order, cuts off when the

1 independent directors go away. I think what he meant to say
2 is that since the three people are not going to be independent
3 directors anymore, that basically any actions going forward by 4 any of those three are not covered. But let's be clear. The 5 January 9th order is in effect, and if at some point in the 6 future somebody has a claim against those three gentleman, or 7 their agents, for what they did as independent directors or 8 their agents, that order will apply.

9 Your Honor, we next had a discussion, or Mr. Draper and 10 you had a discussion on professionals. I'm aware of the Fifth
11 Circuit law that says res judicata, fee applications. I think 12 that only applies to claims that the Debtor and estate would 13 have. It doesn't really apply to an exculpation. But there's 14 Texas state law that I identified in our brief and we cited to 15 that limits third parties' ability to go after professionals.

16 But the bottom line is the Fifth Circuit, in Pacific
17 Lumber, didn't deal with professionals. Your Honor was 18 correct in pushing both Mr. Taylor and Mr. Rukavina. What 19 really that was was a policy case. And professionals have 20 nothing to do with 524(e). So the Palco and the Pacific
21 Lumber reference and explanation of 524(e) doesn't have 22 anything to do with professionals. And we would submit, Your 23 Honor, that an exculpation, especially in a case like this, is 24 important for professionals.

25 I understand Your Honor's comments that maybe it's much

235

1    ado about nothing, but I'm not really sure it's much ado about
2    nothing when we have Mr. Dondero and his affiliates who,
3    notwithstanding their efforts to just claim that all they are 4    doing is trying to get a fair shake, Your Honor knows better.
5    Your Honor knows better from the years you've been litigating
6    with them, and we know better and the Debtor knows better from 7    what the independent directors have been dealing with.

8           THE COURT: Let me ask you this, though. I came into 9    the hearing with the impression we were just talking about
10   postpetition pre-confirmation, or pre-effective date maybe I
11   should say, was the expanse of time covered by exculpation.
12   And Mr. Rukavina said no, no, no, go back, look at, I don't 13   know, Subsection 4 of something. It is a post-confirmation
14   concept. What is your response to that?

15           MR. POMERANTZ: I believe it's implementation. And,
16   again, --

17           THE COURT: Implementation? Yes.

18           MR. POMERANTZ: -- I think Mr. Rukavina -- right. I
19   think Mr. Rukavina and Mr. Taylor and Mr. Draper have done a 20   great job trying to muddy the issues. They talk about our 21   sleight of hand and how we're trying to do things that are way
22   beyond the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction. We are not. I 23   think they are trying -- what they have done throughout the 24   case is throw up enough mud. And here's, here's the answer to 25   that question, Your Honor. Implementation. Okay? We know

236

1 what implementation means. The plan says implementation is
2 cancelation of the equity interests, creation of new general
3 partners, restatement of the limited partners, establishment
4 of the Claimant Trust and Litigation Sub-Trust. That's the 5 implementation.

6 We are not trying to get exculpation for post-confirmation
7 activity. Actually, my partner, Mr. Kharasch, in specifically
8 addressing Mr. Rukavina's concern, said, look, if you have a
9 problem with cause, if you have a problem, want to exercise
10 your rights, we're only asking you to come back to the Court.
11 We are not stopping you.

12 So the whole argument that the exculpation is really broad 13 and is not really -- does not really cover just the plan, the 14 approved plan, I think is a red herring. Implementation is 15 implementation in the context of the plan.

16 And also Mr. Rukavina tries to argue that, well, it's 17 administration, it's not really you acting any operation of 18 business. I just don't think there's any support in the case
19 law. Your Honor has overseen this case, overseen this 20 Debtor's activities, overseen the independent directors'
21 activities, overseen Strand's activities, overseen the 22 employees' activities. And those activities have been 23 (indecipherable) administration of the case. And his attempt 24 to create a different category for, well, it's not 25 administration, it's operation and so it doesn't apply, I just

237

1 think is wrong.

2 Your Honor made a couple of comments about what was 3 Pacific Lumber doing. It was a policy decision. If there was 4 a bright-line rule, then nobody would be entitled to 5 exculpation. The very fact that the Fifth Circuit said that 6 Committee members are different made -- makes it clear it was 7 -- it was policy.

8 And Mr. Taylor's comments that, well, their creation of 9 statute, Chapter 11 trustees and Committee members, that's not 10 what basically the case said. If you look at the citation to 11 touters in the case, it was we want people to volunteer and 12 who are needed for the process. Committee members are needed
13 for the process. We don't want to discourage them from coming
14 in. And the only testimony you have on the independent
15 directors is from Mr. Dubel, and he testified the importance
16 of independent directors to modern-day Chapter 11 practice,
17 the importance of exculpation, indemnification, and D&O
18 insurance. And his testimony: uncontroverted. The Objectors
19 could have brought in someone to say something different, but 20 the only testimony before Your Honor is, if Your Honor does 21 not approve exculpations in cases like this, you will not get 22 independent directors and it will have an adverse effect on 23 the Chapter 11 process.

24 So, while I appreciate all the Objectors trying to say
25 bright line, trying to say Pacific Lumber, that is the gut

1 reaction, right? That's -- it's easy to say. But Your Honor
2 will know better, from reading the cases, that's not what
3 Pacific Lumber says. And for the several reasons I gave, it's 4 the reason why Pacific Lumber does not govern the decision in 5 this case.

6 Your Honor, Mr. Draper then started to talk about Craig.
7 And everyone cites Craig as this, you know, limiting
8 jurisdiction. Now, we acknowledge that Craig and the Fifth
9 Circuit has a more limited post-confirmation jurisdiction
10 approach than the other Circuits, but it's not nonexistent.
11 And just because the Debtor is going out post-confirmation and 12 acting does not mean that the conduct that they are engaging 13 in is not -- and disputes that arise, doesn't come within the 14 Court's jurisdiction. If that was the case, and I think Your 15 Honor recognized this, in your case it was the TXMS case,
16 while it's limited, more limited after confirmation, and I
17 think you even, in the case -- or, in one case of yours, said
18 that even after the case is closed there could be 19 jurisdiction. So their just trying to argue Craig is just -- 20 is just too much.

21 Going out of the gatekeeper, Mr. Draper tried to say we 22 are Barton, and that's it, and Barton has its limitations, et 23 cetera. First of all, with respect to Barton, it is not 24 limited and doesn't include debtors-in-possession. We have 25 cited cases in our materials where it has been applied to

1 debtors-in-possession.

2       So, you know, look, maybe this is a provision -- this is a
3 proposition like many in bankruptcy, you could find a
4 bankruptcy court to agree with a proposition, but there's 5 cases all over the place on that. There's cases applying to 6 post-confirmation. The trend has been to expand Barton. But 7 the beauty of it is, Your Honor, you don't have to rely on 8 Barton. Barton was one of our arguments. We gave Barton as, 9 you know, somewhat of an analogy but somehow applying because 10 in the -- because the independent directors were like the 11 trustees.

12       But we recognize it may be going farther than Barton has 13 previously gone. But the case law is clear, it is being 14 extended. But we -- I gave you several provisions of the 15 Bankruptcy Code that authorized you to enter a gatekeeper
16 order. None of the Objectors objected on any of those 17 grounds. They didn't say the statutes that I cited. And it
18 wasn't only 105, I know bankruptcy practitioners love to cite 19 105, but there were three or four others that I mentioned, and 20 they're in our brief. There's no case that they cited that 21 said that there is no authority on the gatekeeper.

22       But what was the argument that was raised? And I think
23 Mr. Rukavina raised it, saying, you know, look, I don't
24 understand the argument of no jurisdiction, of jurisdiction
25 for a gatekeeper but no jurisdiction for underlying cause of

240

1 action. Well, Mr. Rukavina should read and Your Honor should
2 read, when you're considering the plan, the case, the Villegas
3 case in the Fifth Circuit as it dealt with Stern. That was 4 particularly a case. Does Barton -- is Barton impacted from 5 Stern? By Stern? And Stern, we know, limits the bankruptcy
6 court's jurisdiction. But, no, the Fifth Circuit said, in 7 that case, no. Even though the bankruptcy court's
8 jurisdiction is limited to hear the claim, there is nothing
9 inconsistent with that and allowing the bankruptcy court to 10 act as a gatekeeper.

11 So Mr. Rukavina's argument that, well, he'll present to 12 you that there's cause and you'll find there's no cause and 13 then he will be without a remedy by someone that had 14 jurisdiction, that really sounds good but it just doesn't 15 withstand analytic scrutiny. There is a distinction. They 16 are glossing over the distinction. They don't like the 17 distinction.

18 And why is that distinction -- and why is it important in 19 this case? Again, we're not talking about garden-variety
20 people who are just involved with a debtor and will get caught
21 up in a bankruptcy. We narrowly tailored the gatekeeper to 22 enjoined parties. Enjoined parties are the people before Your 23 Honor, some of the people that have made the Debtor's life
24 miserable over the last few months.

25 We have every interest and desire, as does the Committee,

1 to go out post-confirmation and monetize these assets. But we
2 see the clouds on the horizon. We see all the pleadings that
3 have been filed by the Objectors saying how, if there's no
4 deal, there will be an unending amount of costs and appeals.
5 It's, you know, the point, not too subtle. It wasn't lost on 6 us.

7 Your Honor, going to Mr. Rukavina's arguments on Class 8
8 cram down, again, it's really a hard argument to understand,
9 but first I want to make a point. He sort of mentioned -- and 10 I'm not sure if he intends to preserve this on appeal, but it
11 was not objected to and I'll ask for a ruling on it, Your 12 Honor -- he said that there was inappropriate separate 13 classification. That was not raised in any of the objections.
14 We don't think it was properly before the Court. We 15 understand there's a component of that in unfair
16 discrimination in connection with a cram down, but there is no
17 objection, there was no filed objection, to the separate
18 classification of the deficiency claims and the Class 8
19 unsecured claims.

20 And if you look at the voting, you realize it wasn't done
21 for gerrymandering, because if you put both claims together,
22 both classes together, you would have had one class that voted 23 yes.

24 So I don't believe the separate classification under the 25 1129 standards is appropriate for Your Honor to consider,

242

1 other than in connection with the cram down.

2 Now, Mr. Rukavina complains that the only way the 3 convenience class was decided was by way of negotiation. Your 4 Honor, how else do provisions like that get decided? And who
5 was the negotiation between? It was between the Committee.
6 And one of the benefits of a Committee process, and I
7 represent a lot of Committees, you put people in a Committee
8 that have diverse interests and they can come up with an 9 appropriate result. And here you have that. You had one
10 creditor who was a convenience creditor. You have three other 11 creditors who would lose liquidity if convenience payments are 12 made.

13 Do you think that UBS, Acis and Redeemer, do you think 14 they had a desire just to pay people off? No. It was part of 15 a collaborative process. So to say that there was no basis 16 and no testimony on the appropriateness to have -- and how the 17 convenience class was put together just would be wrong.

18 And with respect to the absolute priority rule, Your 19 Honor, again, there's a missing link here, okay? These are 20 contingent interests. They are property. No doubt they are 21 property. But if I did not allow those creditors or those 22 equity to have a contingent interest, the argument would have 23 been made that the plan violates the absolute priority rule.
24 And I said that in my argument. And why would it have 25 violated the absolute priority rule? Because there's a

1 potential that creditors could get over a hundred cents on the
2 dollar, plus interest. So it's a game of gotcha, right?

3 And why do they really care? Mr. Dugaboy said in his --
4 Mr. Draper said in his brief that Dugaboy cares because they
5 may have wanted to buy the interest. Well, I'm sure they can
6 go to Hunter Mountain, you know, Mr. Dondero's left hand can 7 go to his right hand, and I'm sure he'd be happy to sell the 8 contingent interests.

9 And with respect to the argument that Mr. Rukavina made
10 about control, equity be in control, yeah, control is a right.
11 No doubt. You've got -- if you're giving control to the post-
12 confirmation Debtor, that could be a right and implicate the 13 absolute priority rule. But what is the control here? Equity
14 is not given any rights. Your Honor heard how the post-
15 confirmation entity is structured. It's going to be Mr.
16 Seery, overseen by an Oversight Board. So I really don't 17 understand the concept of control. There just is no violation
18 of the absolute priority rule.

19 Your Honor, Mr. Rukavina then took us to task for 2000 --
20 or, for not filing the 2015.3 statement. And if you take his 21 argument to the logical conclusion -- well, we didn't file it,
22 we didn't comply with that Rule, so we're not in compliance
23 with the Bankruptcy Code, so we can never basically get our 24 plan confirmed, right, because it's a violation and we didn't
25 file and seek an extension.

244

1 That's just a preposterous argument, Your Honor. Mr.
2 Seery poignantly told the Court, in the rush of things that
3 were going on, it wasn't filed. Did Mr. Rukavina, before
4 yesterday, having Mr. Dubel on the stand, did he ever ask
5 where is our 2015.3 report? He probably didn't ask it because 6 the answer -- when I told him the reason why it wasn't filed
7 before January 9 was because I don't think Mr. Dondero wanted
8 it filed, and I think that's why, as Mr. Seery testified, we 9 were having a challenging time getting that information from 10 the in-house -- in-house.

11 But, yes, should it have been filed? Yes. But if that is 12 all they could point to through the course of the case that 13 Mr. Seery or Mr. -- or the rest of the board did wrong, you
14 know, I think that just demonstrates they did a fine job.

15 THE COURT: All right.

16 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor?

17 THE COURT: You've got four minutes left.

18 MR. POMERANTZ: Oh. Okay. Your Honor, going to Mr.
19 Rukavina and the Strand argument that it's a nondebtor entity,
20 as I explained in my argument, the Strand -- Strand needs to 21 get exculpation or else that's a backdoor way to the Debtor.
22 Forget about the independent directors, it's a backdoor way to 23 the Debtor. Because Mr. Dondero will be in control. If 24 Strand is sued for post-January 9th activities, he will assert 25 an administrative claim. And one thing from Pacific Lumber is

1 clear, the Debtor is entitled to an exculpation as part of the 2 injunction and the -- and the discharge.

3 Your Honor, Mr. Kharasch adequately addressed Mr.
4 Rukavina's comments with the gatekeeper and the gatekeeper
5 problem. We are not seeking to stop his clients, however
6 related they may be, from exercising their rights. We are 7 seeking a process that will not embroil the Debtor in 8 litigation going forward. There is no problem with Your Honor
9 acting as the gatekeeper to do so. And to the extent that 10 they are bound by the January 9th order is not really an issue
11 for today. That'll be an issue at the temporary -- the 12 temporary -- at the preliminary injunction hearing.

13 I -- just one minute, Your Honor.

14 (Pause.)

15 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, I think I covered a lot.
16 If there's anything that any of the Objectors have mentioned
17 that I failed to respond to, I'd be happy to answer questions
18 Your Honor has.

19 THE COURT: All right. I guess there's, what, about 20 two minutes left, if Mr. Clemente had anything.

21 Mr. Clemente, have you drifted off? I doubt it. But 22 anything else from you, Mr. Clemente?

23 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, I show him talking -- this 24 is Clay Taylor -- but no one's hearing him.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Clemente, we are not hearing

1 you, or I'm not seeing you. Make sure you're not on mute.

2 THE CLERK: He's not on mute, Judge.

3 THE COURT: He's not on mute? So we must have a
4 bandwidth issue or something else.

5 All right. Mr. Clemente, still not hearing or seeing you.
6 We'll give him another 30 seconds.

7 THE CLERK: He's coming up.

8 THE COURT: He's coming up? Ah, I see his name now.

9 MR. CLEMENTE: Your Honor, can you hear me?

10 THE COURT: I can hear you now.

11 MR. CLEMENTE: Okay, Your Honor. I don't know what 12 happened. I just switched another camera, so you may not be 13 able to see me, but can you hear me? I'll be very quick.

14 THE COURT: Okay. I can hear you.

15 MR. CLEMENTE: Can you hear me?

16 THE COURT: Yes.

17 MR. CLEMENTE: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

18 CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE UNSECURED CREDITORS' COMMITTEE

19 MR. CLEMENTE: Two things I want to say. First, just 20 on Class 8, I think what's important, as my comments
21 emphasized earlier, the structure of Class 8. We must 22 remember what it is. It's really designed so that Class 8
23 holders receive their pro rata share of what's left after 24 prior claims are paid. That's really what Class 8 creditors
25 voted on. That's what the disclosure provided. They did not

247

1 vote on receiving a specific dollar or a specific recovery
2 percentage.

3 And regarding the projections and estimates, Your Honor,
4 we're talking about large litigation claims that were asserted
5 and then settled. And given the nature of these assets, the 6 values fluctuate. It's perfectly expected, Your Honor, and 7 indeed disclosed, that there could be wide swings in the 8 amount of claims. That does not lead to the conclusion that 9 the plan needs to be resolicited.

10 And then, finally, Your Honor, again, Mr. Pomerantz
11 adequately addressed all the points, as he did with his 12 earlier presentation, so I'm not going to touch on them, but I
13 did want to respond to one thing that Mr. Taylor said. And I,
14 of course, agree with Mr. Pomerantz. The Committee believes
15 there's no reason for you to delay a ruling and would in fact
16 urge you to rule as soon as Your Honor is ready to rule.
17 Confirmation of the plan, to the extent that there are 18 conversations occurring, is not going to prevent those 19 conversations from taking place, and they can continue after 20 the plan is confirmed. There's simply nothing inherent in 21 Your Honor confirming the plan that would prevent those 22 conversations from occurring or would ultimately prevent 23 parties from pivoting to a deal on the off-chance that one 24 should be reached.

25 So I just wanted to emphasize, Your Honor, again, Your

248

1 Honor is going to rule when Your Honor rules, but the
2 Committee would urge you to rule, and certainly the idea that
3 there may or may not be discussions with Mr. Dondero should 4 not at all in any way lead you to the conclusion that you
5 shouldn't rule or that those conversations cannot continue
6 after plan confirmation.

7 Thank you, Your Honor. Unless you have questions for me.
8 And my apologies with the technology.

9 THE COURT: No problem. All right. Here's what I'm 10 going to do. We can see you now, Mr. Clemente.

11 MR. CLEMENTE: Oh. I'm sorry, Your Honor. I
12 switched to another camera again because it wasn't working.
13 So, I apologize.

14 THE COURT: All right. I am going to call you back
15 Monday. What day of the week will that be? Is that -- I
16 mean, Monday, what date, I should say. That'll be the 8th,
17 right? I am going to call you back Monday, this coming 18 Monday, February 8th, at 9:30 Central time, and I am going to 19 give you my ruling. It will be a detailed oral bench ruling.
20 And I'm not going to leave you hanging on the edge of your 21 seat over the next few days. I will tell you I'm inclined to 22 confirm this plan. I think it meets all of the requirements
23 of 1129 and 1123 and 1122.

24 The thing that I am going to spend some time thinking
25 about between now and Monday morning is, no surprise, the

1 propriety of the exculpations, the propriety of the plan
2 injunctions, the propriety of the gatekeeper provisions. I
3 certainly am duty-bound to go back and reread Pacific Lumber,
4 to go back and read Thru, Inc., and to really think hard about
5 what is happening here.

6 So, I'm pretty much down, I think, to just those three 7 issues here. I'll talk to my law clerk. He may remind me of 8 something else that I'm not articulating right now. But I
9 think I'm just down to those issues. Okay? So it's not going
10 to be a mystery very long. We will come back Monday, 9:30.
11 My courtroom deputy will post on the docket the WebEx
12 connection instructions as usual, and we'll go from there.

13 Now, --

14 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor? Your Honor, this is Jeff
15 Pomerantz. I have a question, and it's going to sound odd 16 coming from someone on the West Coast, but I was wondering if 17 you could do it earlier. And the only reason I say that is,
18 the night before, I have to call in to see if I'm on jury duty
19 on Monday, and it would be helpful to me -- I assume your 20 reading the ruling would be within a half hour, 45 minutes.
21 That if you started at 9:00, if that was possible, I could
22 then get in a car, and if I'm actually called to jury duty, I
23 can get there. Of course, I don't know if I will be called,
24 but I'd hate to miss it.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I don't want to make you

250

1 miss jury duty. Okay. We will do 9:00 o'clock.

2 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Hopefully no one will be, you know, hung
4 over from watching the Super Bowl. Personally, I don't like
5 Tom Brady, so I may be boycotting the Super Bowl. But maybe
6 I'll watch it. Maybe I'll -- I'll watch it. So we'll do it
7 9:00 o'clock. So 9:00 o'clock next Monday.

8 Now, let's talk about next the currently-set hearing this
9 Friday, February 5th, on the injunction and contempt of court
10 motion as to Mr. Dondero and the other entities. I want to 11 continue that, and here is what I am struggling with. The 12 only day I have next week is Friday, the 12th, and I would 13 rather not use that date because I'm pretty jam-packed Monday
14 through Thursday, unless stuff has been settled that I haven't 15 become aware of. So let me ask two things. First, when is 16 the examiner motion set? I'm just wondering if there's a 17 block of time we have coming up that --

18 MR. POMERANTZ: I believe that's March 2nd, Your 19 Honor, so that's not for another month.

20 THE COURT: Oh, that's not for another month? All
21 right.

22 Traci, are you on the line? I want to ask you --

23 THE CLERK: Yes, I am.

24 THE COURT: What about the following week? I know
25 Monday, the 15th, is a federal holiday, but do we have

251

1 availability for -- I fear a full day is going to be needed
2 for continuing this Friday setting.

3 THE CLERK: Wednesday, February 17th, is available.

4 THE COURT: We've got all day on Wednesday, February
5 17th?

6 THE CLERK: Yes.

7 THE COURT: All right. What about that? I think I
8 heard Mr. Rukavina, I think he's the one who threw it out
9 there -- or maybe it was Mr. Taylor; I'm getting mixed up --
10 the possibility that they would agree to a continuation of the 11 preliminary injunction through -- well, I think you said
12 through confirmation. Until the Court enters a confirmation
13 order. And if I were to rule and approve confirmation Monday,
14 then we're talking about an order that might be entered sooner
15 than the 17th. So, do you all have any --

16 MR. RUKAVINA: Your Honor?

17 THE COURT: -- mutually-agreeable suggestions? If 18 not, I'm just going to set it the 12th and I'll, you know, I'm 19 killing myself, but I'll --

20 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor?

21 MR. RUKAVINA: No, Your Honor. I think Your Honor is 22 wise to do what's she's proposing. The agreed TRO against my 23 clients expires on the 15th of February.

24 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

25 MR. RUKAVINA: We can easily move that back a week or

252

1 a sufficient amount of time so that there's no prejudice by
2 going on the 17th, if that would be acceptable to the Debtor,
3 and then we can just pick a date that's sufficiently after the 4 PI hearing so that there's protection for everyone.

5 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Taylor, do you agree?

6 MR. TAYLOR: Yes, Your Honor. That is acceptable to 7 Mr. Dondero.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. TAYLOR: We can also push it back. Can you hear
10 me?

11 THE COURT: Yes, I can. Uh-huh.

12 MR. TAYLOR: Okay.

13 THE COURT: All right.

14 MR. POMERANTZ: I just want to make -- I just want to 15 make sure Mr. Morris, John Morris, is on, since he's taking 16 the lead in those matters. I don't see his picture.

17 MR. MORRIS: I am, Jeff, and I appreciate that. I'm 18 available, Your Honor. We were supposed to take the 19 depositions of Mr. Leventon and Mr. Ellington tomorrow. I 20 don't know if their counsel is on the phone. But given Your 21 Honor's decision to adjourn the hearing from Friday, I would 22 respectfully request at this time that counsel for those two 23 individuals work with me to find a date next week in order to 24 take those depositions.

25 THE COURT: All right. That's -- 253

1 MS. DANDENEAU: Debra Dandeneau from --

2 THE COURT: Go ahead.

3 MS. DANDENEAU: This is Debra Dandeneau from Baker
4 McKenzie. We agree, and we're happy to work with you on a
5 rescheduled time.

6 MR. MORRIS: Thank you very much.

7 THE COURT: All right. All right. So, someone had 8 filed a motion to continue Friday's hearing. I think it was 9 your firm, Mr. Taylor. I already had a motion pending for a 10 few days now. So I'm going to direct you to upload an order, 11 Mr. Taylor, or someone at your firm, continuing the hearing to 12 the 17th at 9:30, with language in there that your -- the 13 injunction is continuing at least through that date. And,
14 again, it's a continuance of the motion for contempt as well
15 as the setting on the preliminary injunction. And, of course,
16 run that by Mr. Morris and Mr. Rukavina.

17 MR. TAYLOR: Sure. Your Honor, this is -- I'm not 18 handling the injunction hearing, or at least I don't think I
19 am. But just so that I'm clear, should maybe the injunction
20 continue through the next day or something, so depending on 21 how Your Honor rules, there's not a rush to try and get an 22 order to you?

23 MR. RUKAVINA: Your Honor, I think that Mr. Morris
24 and I can work this out. Mr. Taylor is not involved in that 25 adversary, that's true, but Mr. Morris and I will be able to

254

1 very quickly enter a proposed agreed order that extends that
2 TRO for some period of time.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. RUKAVINA: I'm not going to be difficult.

5 THE COURT: Okay. So we'll shift to you and Mr.
6 Morris to be the scriveners. I just -- I suggested that 7 because I thought there was a motion to link the order to that 8 had been filed by Bonds Ellis. I may be --

9 MR. MORRIS: There was, Your Honor. There was an 10 emergency motion to continue. We filed an opposition, and 11 Your Honor has not yet ruled on that motion. You're exactly
12 right.

13 THE COURT: Okay. All right.

14 MR. TAYLOR: Your Honor, this is Clay Taylor. I will 15 make sure the right people confer with Davor and John, and 16 we'll get -- we'll link it to that motion, because that makes 17 sense, to have something to link it to.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Yes. And it can be a two-
19 paragraph order, I would think.

20 All right. And then so I'm going to see you Monday at 21 9:00 o'clock Central time with the ruling.

22 Please, don't anyone file anymore paper. I threw that out
23 earlier today. I've got all the paper I need. And I will see 24 you Monday at 9:00 o'clock. Okay? We're adjourned.

25 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 THE CLERK: All rise.

2 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

I. INTRODUCTION

This Renewed Motion to Recuse is necessary because the Court denied a prior motion by James Dondero, Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., The Dugaboy Investment Trust, Get Good Trust, and NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC (collectively, “Movants”) to supplement the record in support of their original motion to recuse, making it impossible for Movants to have all evidence of the Court’s bias considered on appeal. As set forth herein, the Court’s animus toward Movants is so evident, persistent, and severe that Movants cannot receive fair treatment or justice in this Court. And while the Court previously suggested that Movants sought recusal too late, that suggestion rings hollow, because the Court continues to preside over several proceedings involving Movants, and because the Court’s bias continues to pervade all proceedings before it. This Motion should be granted.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Movants filed their original motion to recuse (“Original Recusal Motion”) on March 18, 2021.<sup>1</sup> The Court denied the Motion less than a week later.<sup>2</sup> In doing so, the Court acknowledged “that the applicable statute and rule do not expressly address timeliness” but nonetheless concluded that the motion was untimely.<sup>3</sup> Moreover, despite recognizing that an objective standard should be applied to a recusal determination, the Court instead applied a subjective standard, based entirely on a self-assessment: “The Presiding Judge does not believe she harbors, or has shown, any personal bias or prejudice against the Movants.”<sup>4</sup>

The Movants appealed the Bankruptcy Court’s order denying their Original Recusal

Motion to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas on April 6, 2021.<sup>5</sup>

On February 9, 2022, the District Court denied the appeal for lack of jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup>

Thereafter, this Court continued to preside over the bankruptcy proceedings as well as at least nine adversary proceedings involving the Movants. Further, the Court has since held additional hearings and made additional rulings and other statements that demonstrate clearly the Court's ongoing animus toward Movants. As a result, on August 26, 2022, Movants filed an Amended Motion for Final Appealable Order and Supplement to Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 ("Motion to Supplement"), in which Movants sought: (1) to remove the "reservation language" in the Original Recusal Order; (2) an order stating that Original Recusal Order is final; and (3) to supplement the record on the Original Recusal Motion.<sup>7</sup> The Court held a hearing on the Motion to Supplement on August 31, 2022. At that hearing, the Movants informed the Court that Highland was unopposed to the relief requested in the Motion to Supplement. Nevertheless, the Court accused Mr. Dondero and his counsel of "carpet-bombing us with paper and causing us to expend resources," chastised Mr. Dondero's counsel at length for the size of the record submitted in support of the Motion, and asked counsel to "help me to understand why this is not wasting resources in your view and why this isn't just some strategy."<sup>8</sup>

Following the hearing, the Court issued an order denying the Motion to Supplement as procedurally improper.<sup>9</sup> In its order, the Court invited Movants to do one of two things: (1) file a "simple motion" (without attaching additional evidence) seeking the removal of the language in the Court’s original order denying recusal that hindered immediate appeal, or (2) file a new motion to recuse based on “any alleged new evidence or grounds for recusal.”<sup>10</sup> By invoking the first option, Movants would be free to seek mandamus of the Court’s denial of the Original Recusal Motion, but would not have the benefit of a full and complete record. Consequently, Movants have elected to file a new Motion containing all evidence of record that supports recusal.

III. RELEVANT BACKGROUND AND EVIDENCE OF BIAS<sup>11</sup>

Many disparaging remarks have been made about Mr. Dondero, his employees, and his businesses during the course of these bankruptcy proceedings, few of which are tethered to facts or evidence adduced in this case. Among other things, Mr. Dondero has repeatedly been labeled “vexatious,” “litigious,” and a bad actor. HCMLP has, in turn, been described as a “Byzantine empire” and “ruinous web.”<sup>12</sup> These accusations—which, to be clear, is all they are—have no basis in the realities of HCMLP’s business or Mr. Dondero’s management of it.

A. Mr. Dondero Ran A Successful And Profitable Business For More Than Two Decades Prior to Bankruptcy

HCMLP is an SEC-registered investment advisor founded in 1993 by Mr. Dondero and Mark A. Okada.<sup>13</sup> Although this Court has adopted various advocates’ description of HCMLP and its affiliates as a complex “web” of entities operated at the whim and for the sole benefit of Mr. Dondero, for 26 years prior to filing a chapter 11 petition, HCMLP operated as a legitimate (and heavily regulated) investment advisor for the benefit of its managed funds and investors. As of the Petition Date, HCMLP continued to employ 76 employees, including executive-level managers.<sup>14</sup> Thus, while the Court has described Mr. Dondero as HCMLP’s solitary decision-maker on all matters concerning the company’s operation and management, that description makes no sense. At its high-water mark, HCMLP had assets under management exceeding $40 billion.

Following the financial crisis in 2008, HCMLP and some of its managed funds and affiliates, like many other financial institutions and advisors across the globe, faced several lawsuits. Notably, although the Court has repeatedly characterized Mr. Dondero as “litigious” and “vexatious,” in virtually all of the lawsuits involving HCMLP before its bankruptcy filing, HCMLP was the defendant.<sup>15</sup> What is more, between 2008 and HCMLP’s bankruptcy filing in 2019, virtually none of the lawsuits filed against HCMLP resulted in any sizeable liability against HCMLP, and certainly none that would render HCMLP insolvent.<sup>16</sup> Indeed, the only significant award issued against HCMLP at any time between 2008 and 2019 is an arbitration award in favor of the Redeemer Committee. It also bears mentioning that at no time prior to HCMLP’s bankruptcy filing had Mr. Dondero ever personally been held liable for any misconduct in relation to his management of HCMLP’s business.

B. The Court Formed An Animus Against Mr. Dondero During The Acis Bankruptcy Case That Infected This Bankruptcy Case From The Outset

The Court’s animus toward Movants stems from its earlier involvement in the bankruptcy case of Acis Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership formed in 2010. In January 2018, Joshua Terry, filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against Acis and its general partner, <sup>16</sup> Although this Court has suggested that HCMLP owes “$1 billion” to UBS, the UBS judgment was not against HCMLP but two of its managed funds. See Bankr. Dkt. 177-4. The Debtor itself objected to UBS’s $1 billion proof of claim on this basis. See Bankr. Dkt. No. 906.

Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. (collectively, “Acis”).<sup>17</sup> This Court presided over the Acis Bankruptcy. Prior to its bankruptcy, Acis served as portfolio manager for “hundreds of millions of dollars’ worth” of collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”).<sup>18</sup> Mr. Dondero served as Acis’s Chief Executive Officer, and HCMLP provided certain services to Acis pursuant to shared services agreements. The Court’s Bench Ruling confirming Acis’s Chapter 11 plan makes abundantly clear that the Court formed negative opinions of Mr. Dondero during that bankruptcy case. The ruling is replete with negative remarks about Mr. Dondero, his management decisions, and the structure of his businesses.

HCMLP, a separately owned entity, filed its Chapter 11 petition in bankruptcy for entirely different reasons in Delaware on October 16, 2019.<sup>19</sup> At the time, Debtor’s counsel—Pachulski, Stang, Ziehl & Jones, LLP (“Pachulski”)—explained that it filed the bankruptcy in Delaware to give HCMLP and its then-existing management (including Mr. Dondero), a “fresh start.”<sup>20</sup> The Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the “UCC”) moved to transfer the proceedings to this Court, arguing that transfer was appropriate because the Court had the benefit of a “learning curve” because of the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>21</sup> At the time, Pachulski resisted the transfer, arguing that the UCC only wanted to take advantage of the Court’s preexisting negative views of HCMLP’s management.<sup>22</sup> Thus, it was Pachulski that initially questioned the Court’s impartiality. Delaware Bankruptcy nonetheless granted the UCC's motion to transfer.<sup>23</sup>

Following transfer, this Court foreshadowed that it would rely on the negative opinions it formed during the Acis Bankruptcy in dealing with Mr. Dondero, his former employees, and his affiliated entities.<sup>24</sup> Indeed, at the very first hearing before this Court on January 9, 2020, the Court reiterated its many negative opinions.<sup>25</sup> And the Court pointed to actions purportedly taken by Mr. Dondero in the Acis Bankruptcy as “evidence” of a presumed propensity of Mr. Dondero to engage in similar actions in the HCMLP bankruptcy. For that reason, the Court insisted on including language in its order allowing it to hold Mr. Dondero (but no other party) in contempt of court.<sup>26</sup> Notably, at the time of this first hearing, Mr. Dondero had not filed a single motion or objection to any motion. Consequently, there was nothing in the record before the Court to justify its specific rulings and comments relating to Mr. Dondero.

C. The Court's Animus Continued To Infect Its Decision-Making And Treatment Of Movants

1. The February 19, 2020 Motion to Retain Hearing

Just over a month after the Court's initial hearing in the bankruptcy case, on February 19, 2020, the Court held a hearing on HCMLP's application to retain the law firm Foley Gardere to pursue appeals relating to the Acis Bankruptcy on behalf of Neutra Ltd., a company owned by Mr. Dondero that succeeded to the ownership of Acis. Importantly, during the hearing, former Bankruptcy Judge Russell Nelms—one of the three independent directors appointed to Debtor's Independent Board—testified that, in the Board's business judgment, employment of Foley

<sup>24</sup> Shortly after the case was transferred, the United States Trustee likewise relied on the Court's comments and conclusions in the Acis Bankruptcy as the basis for its motion to appoint a Chapter 11 trustee. See Bankr. Dkt. No. 271. None of the evidence cited in the Trustee's motion had yet been adduced in HCMLP's bankruptcy proceeding.

<sup>25</sup> Ex. B, January 9, 2020 Hr'g Tr. at 78:23-79:16 (stating, “I can't extract what I learned during the Acis case, it's in my brain,” and explaining its opinion that Mr. Dondero acted in a “bad way” in the Acis case).

Gardere and payment of its legal fees was in the Debtor’s best interest.<sup>27</sup> Despite that testimony, the Court sua sponte expressed a belief (untethered to evidence) that Mr. Dondero may have somehow used his “powers of persuasion” to unduly influence the Independent Board’s business judgment.<sup>28</sup> The Court did not stop there. It went on to comment: “Highland is in bankruptcy because of litigation, litigation, litigation. The past officers and directors and controls’ propensity to fight about everything . . . It’s about years of litigation coming home to roost. And this appears to be more of the same, potentially.”<sup>29</sup> That unsolicited commentary is surprising for two reasons. First, again, Mr. Dondero had not yet “fought” anything in the context of the HCMLP proceedings (and indeed, was not even present at the hearing on the Debtor’s motion to retain Foley Gardere). Second, HCMLP was the defendant in the various lawsuits spawning “years of litigation,” which the Court nonetheless blamed on “past officers and directors” of HCMLP.<sup>30</sup> Where, as here, the Court has manifested an early distrust of one party and made unsolicited negative comments about the party’s practices and intent, federal appellate courts have required recusal.<sup>31</sup>

<sup>28</sup> Id. at 177:7-178:3 (emphasizing the Court’s “long history” with Mr. Dondero—a history that came entirely from the Acis Bankruptcy). In the same hearing, the Court also suggested that Mr. Dondero could not be “trusted” to “keep his word.” Id. at 174:11-175:13. When applying the reasonable business judgment standard to Mr. Seery and Debtor management, by contrast, the Court has said it is a very low standard requiring judicial deference. See Ex. W, August 4, 2021 Hr’g. Tr. at 77:4-78:20.

<sup>30</sup> See id. at 177:7-178:17. Again, the only pre-petition lawsuit that ended in any sizeable judgment against HCMLP was the arbitration award issued against HCMLP in favor of the Redeemer Committee. Further, the Debtor objected to proofs of claim filed by the parties litigating or attempting to litigate against HCMLP—including those filed by Acis, UBS, Pat Daugherty, and HarbourVest—arguing that their proofs of claim were unmeritorious. See Bankr. Dkt. Nos. 771 (Acis and Terry), 1008 (Daugherty), 906 (HarbourVest), 928 (UBS).

<sup>31</sup> See Sentis Group, Inc. v. Coral Group, Inc., 559 F.3d 888, 904-05 (8th Cir. 2009) (judge’s “apparent distrust of Plaintiffs as manifested early in the litigation” were among the reasons that reassignment on remand was appropriate); U.S. v. Microsoft Corp., 56 F.3d 1448, 1464-65 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (district judge made “several comments during proceedings which evidenced his distrust of Microsoft’s lawyers and his generally poor view of Microsoft’s practices” arising out of “other alleged misdeeds,” none of which were at issue in the actual case before it).

From that point on, unsurprisingly, HCMLP and its counsel began to leverage the Court's predisposition against Mr. Dondero (i.e., what the Debtor had previously described as the Court's "baggage") for the Debtor's own benefit.<sup>32</sup>

2. The June 30, 2020 CLO Fund Release Hearing

The Court's animus against Movants persisted, and if anything, got worse, from there. In April 2020, CLO Holdco—a non-debtor wholly-owned subsidiary of a charitable Donor-Advised Fund (the "DAF") established by Mr. Dondero, moved to have $2.5 million in funds that indisputably belonged to CLO Holdco released from the registry of the Court.<sup>33</sup> The UCC objected. At a June 2020 hearing, CLO Holdco introduced 16 exhibits supporting its claim to the funds, and the Court admitted that CLO Holdco's lawyer made "perfect arguments" regarding the potential legal ramifications of refusing to release the funds, including that "holding the money in the registry of the Court that a non-debtor asserts is its property" is "tantamount to a prejudgment remedy."<sup>34</sup> Nonetheless, based entirely on arguments made by counsel for the UCC, the Court again concluded that Mr. Dondero was behind the CLO Holdco filing and, therefore, questioned whether it was filed in "good faith," despite the absence of evidence in the record supporting this belief.<sup>35</sup> The Court therefore denied the motion.

3. The July 8, 2020 Exclusivity Hearing

Just over one week later, at a hearing on HCMLP's motion to extend the exclusivity period,

<sup>32</sup> This is similar in kind to what happened in Sentis Group, Inc., in which the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit reversed and remanded for reconsideration by a different judge a district court's order dismissing the case as a sanction for perceived discovery misconduct by the plaintiffs. In a case marred by contentious discovery disputes, the Eighth Circuit first noted that "defense counsel's goal shifted from conducting effective discovery to fanning the flames of the court's frustration and building a case for sanctions." Id. at 891. Ultimately, the Eighth Circuit reversed the sanctions order and held that the district court's statements, in combination with its misconstruction of a prior order and "its apparent distrust of Plaintiffs as manifested early in the litigation" showed a "sufficiently high degree of antagonism to require reassignment of the case on remand." Id. at 904-05.

the Court, acting sua sponte, directed HCMLP's counsel to investigate Mr. Dondero and certain "Highland affiliates" after allegedly seeing a news article (that was not part of the record) that referenced "Mr. Dondero or Highland affiliates" receiving PPP loans.<sup>36</sup> Notably, neither Mr. Dondero nor the "Highland affiliates" referred to in the article were the property of or controlled by HCMLP. In fact, as HCMLP would later confirm, the PPP loans at issue had nothing whatsoever to do with the HCMLP.<sup>37</sup>

4. The December 16, 2020 And January 26, 2021 CLO Hearings

In keeping with its habit of accusing entities that the Court perceives to be affiliated with Mr. Dondero of acting "bad faith," the Court did so again in December 2020.<sup>38</sup> On December 16, 2020, the Court held a hearing on a motion by various third-party financial advisors and retail funds to prevent HCMLP's liquidation of certain CLO assets (the "Restriction Motion").<sup>39</sup> During the hearing, the Court chastised counsel for the advisors and retail funds for filing the Restriction Motion (i.e., for advocating a good faith position on behalf of their clients), stating that it was "dumbfounded" by the motion, and opining that Mr. Dondero was behind it, notwithstanding that it was filed by separate and distinct legal entities represented by independent counsel.<sup>40</sup> The Court concluded, without any evidentiary basis, that the Restriction Motion was brought for an improper purpose.<sup>41</sup> The Court further declared the Restriction Motion frivolous, "almost Rule 11

Notably, the retail funds are registered investment advisors that owe independent fiduciary duties to their investors pursuant to the Investment Advisors Act of 1940.

frivolous,” notwithstanding that the motion was filed in good faith.<sup>42</sup> The Court then used the hearing to condemn Mr. Dondero on the record.

Yet another display of the Court’s bias toward Movants came in the context of this same dispute, several weeks later. On January 26, 2021, the Court held a preliminary injunction hearing in which it considered whether the advisors and retail funds had tortiously interfered with agreements relating to management of the CLOs.<sup>43</sup> It was abundantly clear at the hearing that HCMLP could not make the requisite showing to justify injunctive relief.<sup>44</sup> And the evidence was undisputed that Mr. Dondero did not influence or cause the advisors or retail funds to take any action. Nevertheless, the Court once again turned its focus to Mr. Dondero, warning him that the Court had prohibited him from taking action to interfere with the CLOs. Incredibly, the Court then made the implied finding that Mr. Dondero had caused counsel for the retail funds to take certain actions.<sup>45</sup> The Court further stated that it was “leaning” toward finding Mr. Dondero in contempt of court and threatening to shift the “whole bundle of attorney’s fees” to Mr. Dondero in connection with a motion for injunctive relief filed by HCMLP that had nothing to do with him.<sup>46</sup>

5. The Court’s Ruling On Movants’ Motion For An Examiner

Another concerning thing that has happened at the hands of this Court is the repeated disenfranchisement of Movants from judicial process. For example, the Court has repeatedly wielded its scheduling powers as a sword against Movants, often preventing any real consideration

<sup>42</sup> See id. at 64:1-7. The statutory basis for the requested relief was section 363(c)(1) or section 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code, which provide that the debtor-in-possession may engage in ordinary course business “unless the court orders otherwise.” That was all that the Advisors and Retail Funds asked the Court to do.

of legitimate motions filed by Movants by ensuring that hearings on those motions happen too late. In one such instance, on January 14, 2021, Dugaboy and Get Good (the “Trusts”) requested the Court direct the appointment of a neutral third-party examiner pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1104(c) as a less costly means to resolve various issues that had arisen in the HCMLP bankruptcy (the “Examiner Motion”).<sup>47</sup> The Trusts sought the appointment of an examiner to address, among other things (i) the issues raised by the advisors and the retail funds in the Restriction Motion, (ii) various objections to the proposed plan of reorganization raised by the advisors, the retail funds, and the United States Trustee (discussed below), and (iii) concerns expressed by the Court about costs and expenses incurred in the context of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>48</sup>

Given the timing of the Examiner Motion relative to the expected date of the hearing on Debtor’s Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) (the “Plan”), the Trusts asked the Court to consider the Motion on an “emergency” basis to avoid interference with the Plan.<sup>49</sup> Despite this request (and despite the Court’s willingness to hear motions filed by HCMLP on an emergency basis), the Court set the hearing on a date long after the expected hearing on Plan confirmation, thereby ensuring that the Motion would be rendered moot.

D. The Court Confirms A “Monetization Plan” Over Movants’ Objections

The Court’s biased decision-making tethered to its preexisting negative views of Mr. Dondero persisted through Plan confirmation.

On February 8, 2021, the Court announced its oral ruling regarding the Plan, in which the Court referred inexplicably and extensively to proceedings in the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>50</sup> In its ruling, the Court summarily rejected all of the Plan objections lodged by Movants, decreeing them as filed in bad faith.<sup>51</sup> Next, even though it had “not been asked to declare Mr. Dondero and his affiliated entities as vexatious litigants per se,” the Court deemed Mr. Dondero and other Movants “vexatious litigants.”<sup>52</sup> The Court’s ruling failed to comport with its own iteration of the prerequisites to declaring a litigant vexatious.<sup>53</sup> Indeed, the Fifth Circuit recently explained that the Bankruptcy Court failed to follow proper procedures to designate Mr. Dondero vexatious.<sup>54</sup>

On February 22, 2021, the Court issued its Confirmation Order. Against the backdrop discussed herein, it is perhaps not surprising that the Court again took the opportunity to criticize and accuse Mr. Dondero and Movants:

- “Naturally, [the independent board members] were worried about getting sued no matter how defensible their efforts—given the litigation culture that enveloped Highland historically. Based on the record of this case and the proceedings in the Acis chapter 11 case, it seemed as though everything always ended in litigation at Highland.”<sup>55</sup>
- “The Debtor’s Chief Executive Officer, James P. Seery, credibly testified at the Confirmation Hearing that the Debtor was ‘run at a deficit for a long time and then would sell assets or defer employee compensation to cover its deficits.’ The Bankruptcy Court cannot help but wonder if that was necessitated because of enormous litigation fees and expenses incurred by the Debtor due to its culture of litigation . . . .”<sup>56</sup>
- “[T]he Bankruptcy Court questions the good faith of Mr. Dondero’s and the Dondero Related Parties’ objections. In fact, the Bankruptcy Court has good reason to believe that these parties are not objecting to protect economic interests they have in the Debtor but to be disruptors.”<sup>57</sup>
- “Mr. Post testified on behalf of the Highland Advisors and Funds that the Funds have independent board members that run the Funds, but the Bankruptcy Court was not convinced of their independence from Mr. Dondero because none of the so-called independent board members have ever testified before the Bankruptcy Court and all have been engaged with the Highland complex for many years. Notably, the Court questions Mr. Post's credibility because, after more than 12 years of service, he abruptly resigned from the Debtor in October 2020 at the exact same time that Mr. Dondero resigned at the Board of Directors' request, and he is currently employed by Mr. Dondero."<sup>58</sup>

- In discrediting the objections of various NexBank entities, the Court likewise surmised that "Mr. Dondero appears to be in control of these entities as well."<sup>59</sup>
- "[T]he Bankruptcy Court has allowed . . . these objectors to fully present arguments and evidence in opposition to confirmation, even though . . . the Bankruptcy Court questions their good faith. Specifically, the Bankruptcy Court considers them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero."<sup>60</sup>

Again, the Bankruptcy Court offered up no specific evidence of any bad faith on behalf of Mr. Dondero or the other "objectors." Nor did the Court offer any evidence (or explanation) of why it had "good reason to believe" that Mr. Dondero and the other objectors were seeking to do anything other than protect their legitimate economic interests.<sup>61</sup> In short, an objective observer reading the language of the Confirmation Order would have reason to question this Court's impartiality.

E. The Court's Post-Confirmation Decisions Have Continued To Give The Appearance Of Bias

Since confirmation, the Court has continued to act in a biased manner.

---

<sup>58</sup> Id., ¶ 18. Notably, at the time of these comments, there was no evidence of record even suggesting that the Funds were managed by anything other than independent boards, and there was no evidence—other than the Court's own conjecture—that Mr. Post's resignation from his position at HCMLP had anything to do with Mr. Dondero. Nor is it clear how Mr. Post's mere association with Mr. Dondero could possibly impact his competency or credibility to testify about the management of various Funds that he personally came into contact with during "12 years of service" for the Debtor.

<sup>61</sup> Notably, the Fifth Circuit previously has admonished this Court for making findings and decisions based on mere "suspicion" and "indirect inference" rather than evidence. In The Cadle Co. v. Moore, the Fifth Circuit reversed an order of dismissal issued by this court as a sanction for "abuse of judicial process," finding that the "bankruptcy court's mere suspicions do not add up to clear and convincing evidence." 739 F.3d 724, 731 (5th Cir. 2014). In addition, the Fifth Circuit emphasized that it was "troubled by the bankruptcy court's use of indirect inferences" to support its decision. Id. at 731 n.11.

1. The Court's August 2021 Sanctions Order

Perhaps one of the most telling orders issued by the Court since the Original Recusal Motion was filed is the Court's order sanctioning various entities and individuals because two entities—the DAF and CLO Holdco—in consultation with legal counsel, decided to file a lawsuit against HCMLP in the Northern District of Texas. Specifically, on April 12, 2021, a complaint was filed against HCMLP and two HCMLP-controlled entities (Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. (“HCFA”) and Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”)) alleging, inter alia, impropriety by the Debtor, HCFA, and HCLOF in brokering the sale of CLO interests held by HarbourVest<sup>62</sup> to the Debtor, without prior notice to other CLO investors and without respecting those investors' right of first refusal.<sup>63</sup> Shortly after filing the complaint, the DAF and CLO Holdco filed a motion for leave to amend the complaint to add Mr. Seery as a defendant, based on his role brokering the HarbourVest transaction.<sup>64</sup> Within days of these filings, HCMLP filed a motion seeking an order holding the DAF, CLO Holdco, and “the persons who authorized the DAF and CLO Holdco . . . to file the Seery motion,” including their attorneys, Sbaiti & Company, PLLC, in civil contempt.<sup>65</sup>

The Court held an evidentiary hearing on HCLMP's sanctions motion on June 8, 2021. At that hearing, Mark Patrick, who was then serving as the DAF's general manager, testified that he hired Sbaiti & Co. and that he authorized the DAF to file the lawsuit and the motion to add Mr.

<sup>65</sup> Bankr. Dkt. No. 2247. Specifically, HCMLP argued that the lawsuit and the motion seeking to add Mr. Seery as a defendant violated the Court's Order Approving Settlement with Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course [Dkt. 339] and as well as its Order Approving Debtor's Motion Under Bankruptcy Code Sections 105(a) and 363(b) Authorizing Retention of James P. Seery, Jr. as Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative Nunc Pro Tunc to March 15, 2020 [Dkt. 854]. Id. at 2.

Seery as a defendant.<sup>66</sup> Mr. Dondero testified that, while he provided certain information to the DAF and Sbaiti & Co. in relation to the lawsuit, he was not involved at all in authorizing or preparing the motion to add Mr. Seery (the main reason for the motion for civil contempt).<sup>67</sup>

Despite this testimony and the absence of any contravening testimony, the Court concluded that “Mr. Dondero sparked this fire” and that the evidence “was clear and convincing that Mr. Dondero encouraged Mr. Patrick to do something wrong, and Mr. Patrick basically abdicated responsibility to Mr. Dondero.”<sup>68</sup> The Court then concluded that the lawsuit filed by the DAF and CLO Holdco was, “from this Court’s estimation, wholly frivolous.”<sup>69</sup> In fashioning its sanctions award, the Court took into consideration the invoices submitted by HCMLP’s counsel reflecting what the firm actually incurred in connection with the civil contempt motion ($38,796.50), and then compounded the sanction by nearly seven times that amount. In the end, the Court ordered the DAF, CLO Holdco, Sbaiti & Co. (including Mazin Sbaiti and Jonathan Bridges individually), Mark Patrick, and Mr. Dondero to pay $239,655 in sanctions to HCMLP.<sup>70</sup> Worse still, the Court tacked on a monetary sanction of $100,000 to be paid by anyone that filed any appeal.<sup>71</sup>

In short, the Court ignored the undisputed testimony of record to find “clear and convincing evidence” of Mr. Dondero’s responsibility for the motion to name Mr. Seery as a defendant, concocted a way to saddle Mr. Dondero and others with a multi-hundred thousand dollar liability, and prophylactically sanctioned any effort to invoke a legal appellate process.<sup>72</sup>

2. The Court's Order To Appear

The Court has further targeted Mr. Dondero (as well as his sister Nancy Dondero) by requiring their presence at all hearings, regardless of whether their presence is needed. In ordering Mr. Dondero's presence, the Court explained that Mr. Dondero's participation in the bankruptcy and related proceedings was "taking up time."<sup>73</sup> By the Court's own admission, this is a departure from its usual approach, where a party would be expected to attend hearings only if they are "taking a position" on the issue at hand.<sup>74</sup>

At the same hearing (which was to decide a motion to compel the Debtor's deposition testimony), the Court openly speculated that there was an ulterior motive of "antagonism" behind Mr. Dondero's good-faith litigation conduct.<sup>75</sup> The Court's statements indicate that, when Mr. Dondero engages in routine litigation steps, like making discovery motions, the Court will treat such actions as nefarious "antagonistic move[s]" rather than ordinary invocation of legal process.

3. The Court's September 12, 2022 Withdrawal of Claim Hearing

And in the most recent example of the Court's biased decision-making, on September 12, 2022, the Court held a hearing on several motions, including a motion by Movant NexPoint Real Estate Partners LLC f/k/a HCRE Partners LLC ("HCRE") to withdraw its proof of claim.<sup>76</sup> In that hearing, HCRE sought the Court's approval to withdraw a disputed proof of claim relating to HCRE's asserted interest in a fund called SE Multifamily Holdings.<sup>77</sup> Counsel for HCMLP objected to HCRE's withdrawal in the absence of certain concessions by HCRE, including a stipulation that HCRE would not contest HCMLP's 46.6% interest in SE Multifamily Holdings and that HCRE would waive any right to appeal a final order on its withdrawn proof of claim.<sup>78</sup> In what can only be described as an incredible exchange, the Court first asked HCRE's counsel, Bill Gameros ("Mr. Gameros"), if HCRE would consent to those conditions. Mr. Gameros agreed to both.<sup>79</sup> But that did not satisfy the Court. The Court instead demanded that a "client representative" of HCRE appear and testify that the conditions were acceptable. At that point, DC Sauter, in-house counsel for Mr. Dondero, appeared and confirmed that HCRE would agree to the conditions for withdrawal of its proof of claim.<sup>80</sup> Still, the Court was not satisfied:

THE COURT: All right. Well, it sounds like hearsay to me. I don't know – Counsel, let me have you both respond. You know, I worry about this will fall apart the minute Mr. Dondero is instructing a lawyer, I never agreed to that. I mean I just don't know. This is highly unusual.<sup>81</sup>

When Mr. Sauter explained that Mr. Dondero felt more comfortable having a lawyer make legal representations on the record, the Court responded: "I mean I'm not sure I care what you say, no offense. I don't think I have a person with clear authority here."<sup>82</sup> The Court then rebuffed Mr. Gameros's suggestion he could make binding representations on behalf of his client: "Mr. Gameros, come on. You know this is the client's decision to make. Okay. I don't have a client representative."<sup>83</sup>

At that point, Mr. Gameros offered to get Mr. Dondero on the phone to give the exact same representation that Mr. Gameros and Mr. Sauter had already given. Before taking Mr. Dondero's sworn testimony, the Court rebuffed him for failing to have access to video, even though he no previous notice he would have to give testimony at the hearing.<sup>84</sup> Mr. Dondero testified that HCRE would agree to all of the Debtor's conditions to withdrawal of the proof of claim.<sup>85</sup> Even then, the Court told Mr. Gameros: "I mean he needs to be asked every which way from Sunday whether he's waiving the right to challenge Highland's 46.06 interest from now until eternity, okay. That's basically, you know, we either have that agreement or we'll just have a trial."<sup>86</sup> Mr. Dondero then again agreed to the entry of an order denying HCRE's proof of claim with prejudice and agreed not to challenge HCMLP's equity ownership in SE Multifamily Holdings.<sup>87</sup>

After all of that, the Court stated: "[I]t feels like we had a little bit of reluctance to say it as forcefully as we would need to have it said to avoid relitigation" and then denied HCRE's motion to withdraw its proof of claim.<sup>88</sup> In doing so, the Court found that HCRE had acted with "undue vexatiousness" in pursuing the proof of claim merely because HCMLP opposed the claim and had spent "hundreds of thousands of dollars" doing so.<sup>89</sup> The Court therefore ordered additional depositions to take place and the parties to attend trial. And as a parting shot, the Court asked the U.S. Trustee to investigate HCRE and Mr. Dondero (who signed the proof of claim):

I don't mean to be alarming, but I want it run by the U.S. Trustee because, you know, I've heard some things that have troubled me about the, you know, lack of good faith with regard to the proof of claim and, you know alleged gamesmanship. And, you know, I talked earlier about this goes to the integrity of the system, you know, filing a proof of claim under penalty of perjury. . . . It's just something uncomfortable going on in my brain about, you know, again a proof of claim being on file two, almost two and a half years and then, you know, okay, never mind, okay, I agree to never mind as long as you agree to

XYZ. . . . I just know if there are quid pro quos I feel like, you know, maybe I need to have the U.S. Trustee, not per se signing off on any agreed order but at least kind of looking at it . . . .<sup>90</sup>

The suggestion that the U.S. Trustee investigate supposed “gamesmanship” by HCRE and Mr. Dondero and whether they had given quid pro quos is particularly concerning, where the entire record of the hearing makes clear that it was HCMLP and its counsel asking for quid pro quos in return for agreeing to the withdrawal of HCRE’s proof of claim.

IV. THE COURT SHOULD IMMEDIATELY RECUSE ITSELF

Application of the appropriate standard for recusal leaves little doubt that recusal is required in this case. Under Section 28 U.S.C. § 455, a judge “shall disqualify [her]self in any proceeding in which h[er] impartiality may reasonably be questioned.”<sup>91</sup> A judge “shall also disqualify [her]self” if one of several enumerated circumstances exist, including if the judge “has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding.”<sup>92</sup> The provisions of section 455 are mandatory and afford separate, though overlapping, grounds for recusal.<sup>93</sup>

Under section 455(a), recusal is required whenever a judge’s partiality might reasonably be questioned, even if the judge does not have actual personal bias or prejudice.<sup>94</sup> The test is not whether the judge believes he or she is capable of impartiality and not whether the judge possesses actual bias.<sup>95</sup> Instead, the test is whether the “‘average person on the street who knows all the relevant facts of a case’” might reasonably question the judge’s impartiality.<sup>96</sup> As Congress explained when enacting section 455, litigants “ought not have to face a judge where there is a reasonable question of impartiality.”<sup>97</sup> Thus, this statutory provision was “designed to promote public confidence in the impartiality of the judicial process.”<sup>98</sup> Accordingly, recusal is warranted where a judge’s comments during proceedings would “cause a reasonable observer to question whether [the judge] ‘would have difficulty putting h[er] previous views and findings aside.’”<sup>99</sup>

With respect to 28 U.S.C. § 455(b), although “judicial rulings alone almost never constitute a valid basis for a bias or partiality motion,” the Supreme Court has recognized that predispositions developed during the course of a trial can suffice to demonstrate the requisite bias or prejudice.<sup>100</sup> In this regard, the words “bias” and “prejudice” mean a disposition or opinion that is somehow wrongful or inappropriate, either because: (a) it is undeserved; (b) it rests upon knowledge that the holder of the opinion ought not to possess; or (c) it is excessive in degree.<sup>101</sup> Notably, a court’s consideration of an extrajudicial source of information is a factor in favor of finding either an appearance of partiality under section 455(a) or bias or prejudice under section 455(b)(1).<sup>102</sup> Moreover, “opinions formed by the judge on the basis of facts introduced or events occurring in the course of the current proceedings, or of prior proceedings,” may evidence bias if the opinions reveal that they “derive from an extrajudicial source; and they will do so if they reveal such a high degree of favoritism or antagonism as to make fair judgment impossible.”<sup>103</sup>

In short, the Movants, like all other litigants, are entitled to a full and fair opportunity to make their case in an impartial forum—regardless of their history with that forum.<sup>104</sup> Indeed, “fundamental to the judiciary is the public’s confidence in the impartiality of [its] judges and the proceedings over which they preside.”<sup>105</sup> Thus, “justice must satisfy the appearance of justice.”<sup>106</sup> For this reason, the Fifth Circuit has held that “[i]f the question of whether § 455(a) requires disqualification is a close one, the balance tips in favor of recusal.”<sup>107</sup>

In this case, the balance can tip only in one direction because recusal is appropriate under both prongs of 28 U.S.C. § 455. At a minimum, the Court’s statements and actions in this case would cause any objective observer to question the Court’s impartiality, which mandates recusal.<sup>108</sup> As set forth above, the Court has made antagonistic statements to and about Movants and has manifested an “apparent distrust” of Movants since “early in the litigation.”<sup>109</sup> Indeed, the Court deemed Mr. Dondero a bad actor at the very first hearing it held in the case, based entirely on opinions formed during the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>110</sup> At that first hearing, the Court singled Mr. Dondero out for potential future sanctions before he had taken any action in this case. Just one month later, the Court accused Mr. Dondero of misconduct at a hearing that he did not attend in connection with a motion that he did not file.<sup>111</sup> The Court’s subsequently repeatedly accused Movants and their counsel of acting in “bad faith,” repeatedly called Mr. Dondero “vexatious” or “litigious” when he acted in a legally justifiable manner, and generally manifested a distrust of

But in addition to appearing biased, which itself would mandate recusal, the Court in this case has acted in a manner that demonstrates such a “high degree of favoritism or antagonism as to make fair judgment impossible.”<sup>113</sup> Although the record is replete with examples, by way of summary, the Court has (1) admitted that the negative opinions about Mr. Dondero formed during the Acis Bankruptcy cannot be excised from the Court’s mind;<sup>114</sup> (2) made repeated negative statements about Mr. Dondero and entities that the Court perceives be affiliated with him in connection with the Court’s rulings;<sup>115</sup> (3) repeatedly targeted Mr. Dondero with threats of contempt or sanctions, singled Mr. Dondero out for disparate treatment, and and questioned the good faith of Movants and their counsel for defending lawsuits and motions and/or asserting valid

In addition, the Court has repeatedly described Mr. Dondero as “vexatious” and “litigious” as a justification for its actions. See Ex. G, Sept. 23, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 51:14; Ex. M, Feb. 8, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 17:15, 37:18, 40:21, 45:13, 46:21; Ex. N, Feb. 23, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 232:18; Ex. S, June 25, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 109:21. The Court also has repeatedly surmised that the actions of Mr. Dondero, Movants, and their attorneys are in “bad faith” or “frivolous.” See Ex. J, Dec. 16, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 64:1-5; Ex. L, Jan. 26, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 254:4; Ex. N, Feb. 23, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 233:18; Ex. O, May 10, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 43:3; Ex. R, June 10, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 87:6. And the Court has repeatedly referred to Mr. Dondero and his companies, including Movants, in a pejorative manner, as a “Byzantine complex,” “Byzantine empire” and “web.” See Confirmation Order, ¶ 6; Ex. D, June 30, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 80:17-18, 86:19, 87:5-8; Ex. E, July 8, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 46:11; Ex. M, Feb. 8, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 7:15; Ex. Q, June 8, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 294:3. And the Court has singled out Mr. Dondero, his affiliates (including Movants), and his attorneys for disparate treatment at every possible opportunity. See Ex. H, Oct. 21, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 10:21-24, 34:1-5, 36:1-14; Ex. I, Dec. 10, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 24:19-25; Ex. N, Feb. 23, 2021 Hr’g Tr. at 232:7-234:19; Ex. T, Mar. 1, 2022 Hr’g Tr. at 83:12-23.

legal positions;<sup>116</sup> (5) sanctioned Mr. Dondero in connection with a motion that he and others testified he had no role in filing or responsibility for authorizing;<sup>117</sup> (6) prophylactically sanctioned Mr. Dondero for asserting his lawful appellate rights;<sup>118</sup> (7) concluded, without supporting evidence, that any entity the Court deems connected to Mr. Dondero is essentially no more than a tool of Mr. Dondero;<sup>119</sup> (8) disregarded the testimony of any witness with a connection to Mr. Dondero as per se less credible, which includes attorneys and persons who owe fiduciary duties and ethical obligations;<sup>120</sup> and (9) ruled against Mr. Dondero and the Movants at every possible opportunity, regardless of the evidence and the testimony before the Court. Each of these examples alone would mandate recusal, but cumulatively they leave no doubt that the Court's antagonism for Movants goes far beyond is acceptable and makes fair judgment impossible.

Moreover, contrary to the Court's prior suggestion that any motion to recuse filed by Movants is untimely, there is a very real and present reason to seek recusal even now.<sup>121</sup> As explained above, the Court continues to preside over the bankruptcy proceedings, acted in a manner that was very clearly partial less than two weeks ago, and continues to preside over no less than nine adversary proceedings. Where, as here, the Court will be called upon to issue future rulings affecting Movants, a motion to recuse is timely.<sup>122</sup>

<sup>121</sup> The sole case cited by the Court for this proposition—Davies v. C.I.R., 68 F.3d 1129 (9th Cir. 1995)—is inapposite because the basis for the recusal motion was one event—a pretrial disclosure by the judge—which occurred eight months prior to the petitioners' motion to recuse. In stark contrast, the Court's bias in this case has been pervasive and consistent throughout the ongoing proceedings and continues to this day.

<sup>122</sup> Indeed, various courts have ordered recusal even on remand, after the district judge has presided over the action through pre-trial proceedings and trial. See, e.g., Johnson, 120 F.3d at 1334 (recusal after trial and explaining that “the loss of efficiency and economy pales in comparison” to “the necessity to preserve the appearance of impartiality, fairness, and justice” on remand); Kennedy, 682 F.2d 259-60; Sentis Group, 559 F.3d at 905.

V. CONCLUSION

Litigants before the federal bankruptcy courts should be able to expect fair treatment, such that they may obtain justice, exercise remedies, and freely appeal adverse decisions, whatever the judge's personal opinions of the litigants. That is not what has happened in the proceedings before this Court, which is precisely why federal statute affords litigants the tool of recusal. This Court is evidently biased, cannot act in a just manner with respect to the Movants, and should recuse itself and allow all parties the fair day in court that the Constitution requires. Movants respectfully request that their Motion be granted. In the alternative, Movants hereby request that the Court make clear that any order denying recusal is final so that Movants may appeal the Court's order to the Northern District of Texas.

1 Acis, learned all about Acis' relationship to Highland. But
2 the real issue before Your Honor is what does that have to do
3 with this debtor, this debtor's assets and liabilities, and 4 this debtor's operations. And as my comments will show, we 5 think that's a significantly overblown argument.

6 Your Honor, during their presentation, Counsel really
7 strayed a little bit from what the motion and the joinders sort
8 of said. There they went through a painstaking analysis of the 9 various factors supporting venue. I know Your Honor said that 10 over three factors, you don't find that helpful, but the courts
11 have relied on a series of factors.

12 And I think the reason why they have strayed away from 13 that and focused on the committee being the one to support the 14 transfer-of-venue motion and the facts of the Acis case is 15 because when you pare it down, the actual factors demonstrate 16 that there is no way the committee can carry its burden to 17 demonstrate that venue should be transferred.

18 However -- Your Honor pointed to this at the 19 beginning, in mentioning comments about forum-shopping -- the 20 committee and Acis are really being disingenuous, and they have 21 not told you the real reason that they want the case before
22 Judge Jernigan.

23 At the first-day hearing, Your Honor, Acis said they 24 intended to file a motion for an appointed trustee. The 25 committee has told the debtor it intends to file a motion to

1 appoint a trustee after this hearing. The motion has not yet
2 been filed, Your Honor, because they want Judge Jernigan to 3 rule on that motion. And it's not because she's familiar with 4 this debtor's business, this debtor's assets, or this debtor's
5 liabilities, because she generally is not. It is because she
6 formed negative views regarding certain members of the debtor's
7 management that the committee and Acis hope will carry over to 8 this case.

9 The convenience of the parties and the interests of 10 justice and how this case is so unique are just a pretext.
11 They want a trustee to run the debtor, and they want Judge
12 Jernigan and not Your Honor to rule on that motion. That, Your 13 Honor, is not a proper reason to transfer venue, but rather a 14 transparent litigation ploy.

15 Similarly, Acis also wants the case to proceed in its 16 home court where it has enjoyed success in litigating against 17 the debtor. Your Honor mentioned the conflicts-of-interest
18 theories. They're not just conflicts of interest between two 19 jointly administered debtors. These go to the crux of what the 20 Acis case is about and significant claims against the debtor.

21 The Court may ask, appropriately -- and the Court
22 did -- why would the debtor file the case in Delaware? Chapter
23 11 is all about a fresh start. The debtor recognized concerns
24 that the creditors had with certain aspects of its pre-petition
25 conduct, and proactively appointed Brad Sharp as chief

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.

1 restructuring officer with expanded powers, to oversee the 2 debtor's operations.

3 Mr. Sharp worked with the debtor and Counsel to craft
4 a protocol for transactions that would be subject to increased
5 transparency. The debtor didn't have to do that. As Your 6 Honor mentioned at the first-day hearing, the debtor operates
7 its business in the ordinary course. But given the 8 circumstances surrounding this case, given the history, we 9 felt, and the CRO, importantly, felt it was important to get on 10 the table what the debtor, through the CRO, believed was 11 ordinary and what was not, so we could have a transparent
12 discussion, discussion that, while we've made headway with the 13 committee, we have not yet been able to come to an agreement.

14 The debtor filed the case in this district because it
15 wanted a judge to preside over this case that would look at 16 what's going on with this debtor, with this debtor's
17 management, this debtor's post-petition conduct, without the 18 baggage of what happened in a previous case, which contrary to 19 what Acis and the committee says, has very little to do with 20 this debtor.

21 These form insufficient grounds, Your Honor, to 22 overturn the debtor's choice of venue, and the motion should be 23 denied.

24 I would like to now walk through the statutory
25 analysis, something that Counsel avoided, because again, I

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.

1 think it highlights the weakness of their argument.

2 It is clear that the Delaware venue is proper, and
3 1408 says the places where a Chapter 11 debtor can file the 4 case. As the vast majority of debtors who file cases in this 5 district, the debtor filed here because it was domiciled in 6 Delaware. It is a Delaware LP. But it goes further than that.
7 99.94 percent of its LP interests are owned by Delaware
8 entities. And the general partner, Strand Advisors, is a
9 Delaware general partner.

10 While many cases, Your Honor, before this court, rely 11 on the domicile of one affiliate to bring other non-Delaware
12 related affiliates before the court, that's not the case here.
13 All you have, virtually, are Delaware entities, through the 14 ownership structure.

15 As I will also discuss in a few moments, Your Honor, 16 domicile is not the only connection that this debtor has to 17 this district, as significant litigation matters involving the 18 debtor, including those commenced by committee members, that 19 was the catalyst to the filing, are pending in Delaware.
20 Accordingly, the committee acknowledges, as they must, that 21 Delaware is, of course, a proper venue.

22 However, they rely on 1412 which sets forth the 23 standard -- test that the movant has to meet in order to 24 transfer venue, either for the convenience of the parties or 25 the interest of the justice.

1 willingness to hire Delaware Counsel.

2 The last argument --

3 THE COURT: Even when you do have mom and -- again, to 4 comment on reality, even when you do have mom-and-pop creditors
5 in businesses that are very locally focused, general practice
6 today is to make their claims irrelevant, in that to the extent
7 they have avoidance claims, they're paid on the first day.
8 Their real concern is whether the business will continue or 9 not.

10 Now, it's certainly true that pension claims are 11 important, and proofs of claim are important. But we have 12 many -- all courts have many procedures in place to ensure that 13 those types of creditors can participate without having to go
14 to the courthouse.

15 MR. POMERANTZ: Yes. So, Your Honor, Judge Gross also 16 mentioned that in the Restaurants Acquisition case, which was a 17 Texas-based --

18 THE COURT: He's a smart guy.

19 MR. POMERANTZ: We'll be sorry to see him go, Your 20 Honor.

21 THE COURT: Yeah, absolutely.

22 MR. POMERANTZ: Which was a Texas-based restaurant
23 chain that had more of a local flair. But he made the comments
24 Your Honor made.

25 The last argument the committee makes is that Texas is

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.

1 more convenient. And this is really the crux, which I'll spend
2 some time over the next few minutes.

3 Texas is more convenient -- convenient -- because the 4 Texas bankruptcy court, where Acis is pending has, in their
5 words, already expended great time and effort familiarizing
6 itself with the debtor and its operations. You've heard
7 statements like "learning curve". You heard statements about 8 everything that the debtor -- that Judge Jernigan has found out
9 about this debtor, and how important and how helpful it is, and 10 how Your Honor will be behind the learning curve. We just 11 don't buy that, Your Honor.

12 And aside from that argument, the arguments that the 13 committee makes for transfer are arguments that could be made
14 in any case before Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Yeah, I was going to say that's kind of an 16 interesting argument, because actually it assumes Judge
17 Jernigan's going to ignore the rules of evidence in making
18 factual findings, because you're limited to the record before
19 you on a specific motion. And what fact you may have learned
20 with regard to something a person has done, maybe that goes
21 into questions of credibility on cross-examination or direct 22 testimony, but to actually base your decision on a fact that's 23 not in the record for the specific proceeding would be 24 improper.

25 MR. POMERANTZ: Look, I agree, Your Honor. And the

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.

1 familiarity with the type of business -- if I wasn't speaking
2 to Your Honor or your brethren or many other judges around the 3 country, I'd say well, maybe there are certain judges who 4 haven't dealt with large financial services company, may not
5 know what a CLO, may not know what a hedge fund is or private 6 equity fund is. I'm very confident that Your Honor has had
7 many cases with sophisticated financial instruments, likely CLO
8 obligations, so that Your Honor not only has a good base of 9 knowledge that would give you the same base of knowledge that 10 Judge Jernigan has, but as we've also found, you are a fairly 11 quick study and that I have no doubt that you could come up-to-12 speed without very little effort.

13           So their argument is a grossly overstated
14 interpretation of what the Acis case was about and that what 15 was learned in that case has any relevance. As a part -- as a 16 result of the Acis plan confirmation, Acis is no longer part of 17 the debtor's organizational structure. The debtor owns no
18 equity in Acis. And the debtor no longer provides any advisory 19 services to Acis.

20           We admit that Judge Jernigan conducted many hearings,
21 and she issued several lengthy opinions, and she heard from a
22 variety of witnesses. And I'm sure Your Honor -- if Your Honor
23 has not -- Your Honor might read the opinions that she wrote
24 that are attached to the exhibits, the plan confirmation
25 opinion, the arbitration opinion, the involuntary opinion; and

1 MS. LAMBERT: Well, I mean, either that or we need to 2 clear the room.

3 THE COURT: I've read the arbitration award.

4 MS. LAMBERT: Right.

5 THE COURT: It's in my brain.

6 MS. LAMBERT: Right. Okay.

7 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

8 MS. LAMBERT: And so one of the arguments here today
9 is that the U.S. Trustee is representing the SEC and 10 representing other Government agencies and things. No.
11 Obviously, that is not the U.S. Trustee --

12 THE COURT: I didn't hear that.

13 MS. LAMBERT: Okay. The -- one of the positions has 14 been, in the papers, is, well, that we don't have standing to 15 raise their issues. And that's true.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MS. LAMBERT: But the problem is that the U.S.
18 Trustee has been constrained from discussing those issues with 19 the SEC. The arbitration award is very relevant to the SEC's 20 oversight. I anticipate the evidence today will be that the 21 SEC, after the financial crisis of 2008, imposed restrictions
22 on this Debtor on breach of fiduciary duty issues. I
23 anticipate that the arbitration findings would be very 24 relevant to whether those issues are ongoing or not.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Let me weigh in. I view the legal

1 standard that this Court has to weigh today as being: Is the
2 Debtor proposing something that is reflective of sound
3 business judgment, reasonable business judgment? And to the 4 extent this is a compromise of controversies with the 5 Committee, is this fair and equitable and in the best interest
6 of the estate?

7 And as Mr. Pomerantz has said, you know, a lot of this
8 maybe doesn't even need Court approval. But to the extent
9 there are aspects of this that are appropriate to seek Court
10 approval on, you know, this is my task. I have to look at 11 what's presented, and is this reflective of sound business
12 judgment? Is this fair and equitable? Is it in the best
13 interest?

14 So, assuming there are tons of bad facts here reflected in 15 the arbitration award, reflected in other evidence, bad facts
16 that might justify a trustee, a Chapter 11 trustee, is this 17 nevertheless, what's proposed today, a reasonable compromise
18 of, you know, the trustee arguments the Committee could make 19 or, you know, is this a reasonable framework for going 20 forward? Okay?

21 So I guess what I'm saying is I'm confused about, you
22 know, do I need to look at the arbitration award? Do we need
23 to have evidence of all of that? I can assume that there are 24 terrible facts out there that might justify a trustee, but I'm 25 looking at what's proposed. Is this a fair and equitable way

1 to resolve the disputes? Is it sound business judgment?

2 Frankly, is it a pragmatic solution here to preserve value?

3 So that's the legal standard I have in my mind here.

4 MS. LAMBERT: Yes, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MS. LAMBERT: The standard is whether it is fair and 7 equitable to resolve the issues in the Chapter 11 trustee
8 motion, and it is the U.S. Trustee's position that they are 9 not resolved by this. And how are they not resolved? Number 10 one, they're not resolved because the problems that led to the 11 breach of fiduciary duty issues and findings are more
12 pervasive, both based on this Court' finding in the Acis case
13 and in the arbitration court's finding in Mr. Dondero. Other 14 officers are implicated.

15 THE COURT: But how --

16 MS. LAMBERT: Other employees are implicated.

17 THE COURT: Okay. I feel like maybe we're talking at 18 each other, not getting each other. I've got a proposed 19 solution here to totally change the playing field, if you
20 will. Bring in incredibly qualified people to --

21 MS. LAMBERT: Those people --

22 THE COURT: -- to change out the, you know, the 23 person that you say breached fiduciary duties, the, you know,
24 mismanagement, whatever bad labels we have here, but bring in 25 a clean slate.

1 very compelling appeal. Among them, certainly, the Committee
2 that's negotiated this term sheet retains the right at any
3 time to move for a Chapter 11 trustee if it believes there are 4 grounds. The Committee is granted standing to pursue estate
5 claims, certain estate claims right off the bat, without 6 having to come back and ask the Court, without having to rely
7 on the Debtor to pursue that. There are document production
8 provisions, document preservation provisions, a shared
9 privilege negotiated, that are very powerful tools for the 10 Committee, and certainly operating protocols that have been 11 negotiated regarding the Debtor's operations that are very 12 powerful tools for the Committee.

13 I said many times during the Acis case -- those who were 14 here will remember -- that the company, Acis, was not a great 15 fit for Chapter 11. Lots of companies aren't great fits for 16 Chapter 11, I suppose, but the kind of business it was was 17 kind of tough to maneuver in Chapter 11. Human beings and 18 their expertise create value. And while we had a Chapter 11
19 trustee, a stranger come in and take control over Acis, you
20 know, there's great uncertainty whether that stranger is going
21 to be able to preserve value and have the smooth transition
22 into Chapter 11 that's really going to be the best fit.

23 Here, as I've said earlier, the legal standard I view as 24 controlling here is 363 and whether what has been proposed
25 reflects reasonable business judgment. Is there a sound

1 business justification for proposing the independent slate of 2 directors at the GP level for the Debtor, the protocols, the 3 negotiation with the Committee, the document sharing, the 4 standing given to them? Does all of this reflect reasonable
5 business judgment? And I find, quite clearly, it does. I
6 find it to be a pragmatic solution to the Committee's concerns
7 about existing management and control.

8 And I think I used the words "fair and equitable," not 9 just Ms. Lambert, because it is also presented to the Court as 10 a 9019 compromise of disputes with the Committee, and we 11 traditionally use a fair and equitable and best interest of 12 the estate analysis in this context. So, to the extent that 13 applies, I do find this a fair and equitable way of resolving 14 the disputes with the Committee, and I find this to be in the 15 best interest of the estate. So I do approve this.

16 And by approving this motion, I'm approving the term sheet
17 as it's been presented, the various terms therein, the 18 exhibits thereto. I'm specifically approving the new 19 independent directors, the document management and 20 preservation process, the standing to the Committee over 21 certain of the estate claims, the reporting requirements, the 22 operating protocols, the whole bundle of provisions.

23 Now, there is one specific thing I want to say about the 24 role of Mr. Dondero. When Ms. Patel got up and talked about 25 the newest language that has been added to the term sheet, she

79

1 highlighted in particular the very last sentence on Page 2 of
2 the term sheet, the sentence reading, "Mr. Dondero shall not
3 cause any related entity to terminate any agreements with the 4 Debtor." Her statement that that was important, it really
5 resonated with me, because, you know, as I said earlier, I
6 can't extract what I learned during the Acis case, it's in my 7 brain, and we did have many moments during the Acis case where 8 the Chapter 11 trustee came in and credibly testified that,
9 whether it was Mr. Dondero personally or others at Highland,
10 they were surreptitiously liquidating funds, they were 11 changing agreements, assigning agreements to others. They 12 were doing things behind the scenes that were impacting the 13 value of the Debtor in a bad way.

14 So not only do I think that language is very important,
15 but I am going to require that language to be put in the 16 order. Okay? So we're not just going to have an order
17 approving the term sheet that has that language. I want
18 language specifically in the order. You know, you can figure 19 out where the appropriate place to stick it in the order is,
20 but I want specific language in here regarding Mr. Dondero's
21 role. I also -- the language in there that his role as an 22 employee of the Debtor will be subject at all times to the 23 supervision, direction, and authority of the Debtors, I want 24 that language in there as well. Let's go ahead and put the 25 language in there that at any time, in any event, the 80

1 independent directors can determine he's no longer going to be
2 retained. I want that in the order.

3 And I'm sure most of you can read my mind why, but I want
4 it crystal clear that if he violates these terms, he's 5 violated a federal court order, and contempt will be one of 6 the tools available to the Court. He needs to understand
7 that. Mr. Ellington needs to understand that. You know, if 8 there are any games behind the scene, not only do I expect the 9 Committee is going to come in and highlight that to the Court
10 and file a motion for a trustee or whatever, but we're going 11 to have a contempt of court issue.

12 So, anybody want to respond to that?

13 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, Jeff Pomerantz; Pachulski
14 Stang Ziehl & Jones.

15 We hear Your Honor. What I thought I'd do now is I have a 16 clean redline of the order, of course not including the 17 provision you just requested, --

18 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

19 MR. POMERANTZ: -- which we will go back and upload
20 and hope to get an order signed by Your Honor today, if you're 21 around. But to go over the other changes, the changes to 22 Jefferies, the other language changes I discussed before. I
23 gave a copy to Ms. Lambert and to the Committee. May I
24 approach with a --

25 THE COURT: You may.

81

1 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you.

2 THE COURT: Okay. All right. (Pause.) All right.
3 The form of order looks fine to me. Obviously, you'll add the 4 Dondero-related language, and we may have further wording
5 tweaks negotiated with the CLO Issuers. But, again, I approve 6 all of this. I didn't say on the record the compensation, but 7 certainly I am approving that as reasonable. I expect these 8 three directors are going to be working very, very hard. And 9 so, as you said, not 50,000-foot level monitoring, actually 10 rolling up sleeves on-site, so I think the compensation is 11 reasonable.

12 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you, Your Honor. We will 13 submit an order shortly that includes Your Honor's language
14 requested.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. POMERANTZ: Are you around this afternoon?

17 THE COURT: I am around, --

18 MR. POMERANTZ: Okay.

19 THE COURT: -- so just pick up the phone or send an 20 email to Traci, my courtroom deputy, --

21 MR. POMERANTZ: Yes.

22 THE COURT: -- so she can tell me, "It's in your 23 queue to sign."

24 MR. POMERANTZ: She has been extremely helpful and 25 responsive.

1 THE COURT: All right. Very good. I'll sign your
2 order on the CRO, then.

3 MR. DEMO: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: All right. Well, if there's nothing
5 else, I'll be on the lookout for your orders. And, again, if 6 you could coordinate with Traci to make sure she's clear on 7 everything you need set on the 21st.

8 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: All right.

10 MR. CLEMENTE: Thank you, Your Honor.

11 MR. DEMO: Thank you, Your Honor.

12 THE CLERK: All rise.

1 the original motion but which the Debtor no longer seeks to 2 pursue?

3 A One of the matters that was pending when we took office
4 was an appeal, and I believe it was still in the District
5 Court, and that related to an alleged conflict of interest by 6 the Winstead firm. And so there was an objection to their 7 fees and an appeal concerning payment of Winstead fees. And 8 the Board has decided not to go forward with that appeal.

9 Q Okay. So the Board -- did you hear the opening from 10 Acis's counsel that charged that the Debtor was just doing
11 more scorched-earth litigation tactics? Did you hear that 12 charge?

13 A I heard that, yes.

14 Q Okay. But yet the Board has instructed Foley not to 15 pursue the Winstead matter; is that right?

16 A That's correct.

17 Q And just again, for the record, why did the Board make 18 that decision?

19 A The Board made that decision because we just thought it
20 was in the best interest of the Debtor and this estate not to 21 do that.

22 Q And did the Debtor see any benefit to pursuing that 23 particular litigation?

24 A You know, there -- a benefit could be articulated, but we 25 decided not to pursue it.

Nelms - Direct

62

1 Q Okay. So, that, plus the Neutra appeal, are two -- I
2 mean, I apologize, withdrawn. That, plus the DAF matter, are 3 two examples where the Board exercised its judgment not to 4 pursue pending litigation; is that fair?

5 A That's correct.

6 Q Okay. Is the Board supportive of the Debtor's application
7 to retain Foley for the three matters you have described?

8 A It is.

9 Q And without revealing privileged communications, can you
10 describe generally the diligence that the Board conducted to 11 reach that decision?

12 A Well, we met with some of the people that work at 13 Highland. We met with the Debtor's attorneys, the Pachulski
14 firm. We did have a couple of meetings with Ms. Patel and Mr.
15 Terry. Some of us have reviewed the pleadings, some more than 16 others. And, well, we may have done other things, but those 17 are the ones that come to mind right now.

18 Q I don't know if you mentioned it, but did you confer with 19 Ms. O'Neil?

20 A Oh, yes, we did. We talked with Ms. O'Neil about it.

21 Q Okay. And what was the purpose of the diligence that you
22 just described for the Court?

23 A Well, ultimately, what we as a board were trying to do was 24 to conduct kind of a cost-benefit analysis to the estate: How 25 much will this potentially cost us? What's the potential

Nelms - Direct

63

1 upside of pursuing it? And based upon that cost-benefit
2 analysis, we thought that this was the best thing to do.

3 Q Okay. Let's just focus on a couple of very narrow 327(e)
4 issues. Is the Debtor seeking to retain Foley to act as 5 general bankruptcy counsel?

6 A No.

7 Q And which firm serves as general bankruptcy counsel?

8 A That would be the Pachulski firm.

9 Q Okay. And do you know whether Foley Gardere represented
10 the Debtor's interest in each of the three matters that you've 11 described?

12 A It has been representing the Debtor previously.

13 Q Okay. So let's talk about those three matters. The first
14 one I believe you said was with respect to the representation
15 of the Debtor in connection with an $8 million claim that it
16 has against Acis; is that right?

17 A That's correct.

18 Q And is that the claim -- is that the subject of a formal 19 proof of claim?

20 A Yes.

21 Q Okay.

22 A It is a claim filed in the Acis case.

23 Q I've placed before you an exhibit binder, and I would ask
24 you to turn first to Exhibit 4.

25 A Okay.

173

1 that benefits everybody.

2 So I guess, Your Honor, I mean, I don't know what else to 3 say about the benefits of the Neutra appeal except that the 4 testimony, I think, speaks for itself. But, you know, I --
5 and in terms of --

6 THE COURT: Again, fight the claim of a creditor.
7 Foley can represent Highland in the adversary proceeding,
8 wherever that goes forward.

9 MR. DEMO: Yeah.

10 THE COURT: Probably District Court, not this Court.
11 At least some of it, if not all of it. But anyway, I'm 12 digressing. They can object to Acis's proof of claim. They 13 can object to Terry's proof of claim. I mean, --

14 MR. DEMO: And conversely, Your Honor, if -- if --

15 THE COURT: -- this has nothing to do with -- I mean,
16 I don't get the appeal. I mean, I --

17 MR. DEMO: Right.

18 THE COURT: Neutra can appeal, HCLOF can appeal, but 19 I'm not seeing the benefit to Highland.

20 MR. DEMO: And I guess the only thing I would say,
21 Your Honor, is if there is an improper benefit, we are not
22 saying that the fee applications are sacrosanct. People can 23 challenge the improper benefit there.

24 And again, the settlement gave broad discretion to the 25 Committee to pursue insider claims. So if an insider is

174

1 receiving a benefit from this, the Committee has standing to
2 pursue that.

3 So it's not a null set, Your Honor, whereas cutting off
4 the appeal now does take away that possibility.

5 THE COURT: How would I be cutting off the appeal?
6 I'm not cutting off the appeal. King & Spalding can go in 7 there and fight hard. Foley can go in there and fight hard
8 for Neutra. So, --

9 MR. DEMO: One second, Your Honor.
10 (Counsel confer.)

11 MR. DEMO: And I guess, you know, Your Honor, and I
12 do want to reiterate that there is no other party with an 13 economic incentive to fight the Neutra appeal the way that the 14 Debtor has an economic incentive.

15 THE COURT: That makes no sense to me. HCLOF is the 16 one who hated this injunction.

17 MR. DEMO: That's not the Neutra appeal, Your Honor.
18 That's the confirmation order.

19 THE COURT: Well, okay. Neutra gets its company back
20 if they win.

21 MR. DEMO: And we would get our contracts back.

22 THE COURT: And arguably, it can control Acis, maybe,
23 okay, and it can assign management contracts to whoever it
24 wants. That just -- and it says it'll assign them to 25 Highland. If you can trust Jim Dondero, then Highland's going

175

1 to benefit if Neutra wins that appeal. Right?

2 MR. DEMO: Yes. Yes, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Okay. So that --

4 MR. DEMO: Highland would benefit greatly --

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. DEMO: -- if Neutra were to win that appeal.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Well, but first Neutra

8 benefits, right? And then --

9 MR. DEMO: No.

10 THE COURT: -- Highland only secondarily benefits --

11 MR. DEMO: I -- I --

12 THE COURT: -- if Jim Dondero keeps his word and 13 gives the management contracts back to Highland.

14 MR. DEMO: Jim Dondero would also have to repay the 15 $8 million in claim, even if he didn't reinstate those 16 contracts. And that $8 million would be hundred-cent dollars.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. DEMO: So, worst case, --

19 THE COURT: It would have been nice to have him
20 testify as to all of this.

21 MR. DEMO: Worst --

22 THE COURT: It would be more compelling if I had him.

23 MR. DEMO: Well, --

24 THE COURT: Okay? But I don't think --

25 MR. DEMO: -- I can only do so much, Your Honor.

176

1 THE COURT: -- that's going to happen anytime soon.

2 MR. DEMO: But I guess worst-case scenario is that
3 it's $8 million in hundred-cent dollars.

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MR. DEMO: And that's not nothing for $500,000. And 6 only a portion of that $500,000.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. DEMO: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Lamberson?

10 MR. LAMBERSON: Your Honor, do you want a closing
11 from me? Or no?

12 THE COURT: I don't really need it. Thank you.

13 MR. LAMBERSON: Okay.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. LAMBERSON: Because I know your hearing starts in 16 about two minutes.

17 THE COURT: All right. So, I just hate it that we 18 spent so much time on this. I hate it that we spent so much
19 time, but, I mean, I understand. I understand. You know, I 20 think the employment application was filed pretty early in the 21 case, right, and -- October 29th. And it was continued, 22 continued, continued, because we were getting objections from 23 the Committee, or they wanted time to look at it, I guess.
24 And now you're kind of up against the wire, right, because 25 oral arguments are set at the Fifth Circuit next month. So I,

177

1 you know, I hate it that we were here, but I understand it.

2 But I'm concerned. I'm concerned -- well, here's the 3 deal. We have a great board, and I totally get that
4 Bankruptcy Courts should defer heavily to the reasonable
5 exercise of business judgment by a board. And we've got great
6 professionals. And we've got this case, I think, on a good
7 track as a general matter now. But I'm concerned that Dondero
8 or certain in-house counsel has -- you know, they're smart,
9 they're persuasive -- that -- what are the words I want to 10 look for -- they have exercised their powers of persuasion or 11 whatever to make the Board and the professionals think that 12 there is some valid prospect of benefit to Highland with these 13 appeals, when it's really all about Neutra, HCLOF, and Mr.
14 Dondero. That's what I believe.

15 I mean, this is awkward, right, because you want to defer
16 to the debtor-in-possession, but I have this long history, and 17 I can think through the scenarios. If this is reversed, here
18 is how it will play out. If this is reversed, here is how it
19 might play out. And I know, you know, there are multiple ways
20 it might play out, but I cannot believe there is a chance in 21 the world there is economic benefit to Highland if these 22 things get reversed. Economic benefit to Neutra: Yeah,
23 maybe. Economic benefit to HCLOF: Well, they'll get what 24 they want. You know, whether it's an economic benefit, I 25 don't know. But benefit to Highland? I just don't think the 178

1 evidence has been there to convince me it's reasonable
2 business judgment for Highland to pay the legal fees
3 associated with the appeal.

4 And even more concerning to me is a valid point was made
5 that Highland is in bankruptcy because of litigation,
6 litigation, litigation. The past officers and directors and 7 controls' propensity to fight about everything. This isn't a
8 balance sheet restructuring, okay? It's not a Chapter 11
9 caused by operational problems or revenue disruption or who
10 knows what kind of disruption. It's about years of litigation
11 finally coming home to roost. And this just appears to be 12 more of the same, potentially.

13 Okay. Parties have a right to appeal. I respect that.
14 Neutra, go for it. HCLOF, go for it. But this estate and its 15 creditors should not bear the burden of having Highland pay
16 for that, when, again, I don't think there's any evidence to 17 suggest they could benefit at the end of the day.

18 So what I'm going to do is I'm going to approve the 19 retention of Foley to represent Highland in the Acis case. We 20 all know the adversary is stayed right now. It may or may not 21 ever be un-stayed, depending on what strategies people want to 22 pursue. But Highland, I think a meritorious case has been 23 presented, and under 327(e) I will approve Foley representing 24 Highland in all Acis matters. Okay? The Acis bankruptcy
25 case. The adversary proceeding, if it goes forward. And so

179

1 that's my ruling.

2 I will additionally rule, for the avoidance of doubt, that
3 if Foley wants to represent Neutra in the appeals and get paid
4 by Neutra, I don't have any problem with that. In other
5 words, I'm not going to find something like there's a conflict
6 with the estate, you know, because of its simultaneous
7 representation of Neutra. That's fine. But I'm not going to 8 approve Highland paying anything in connection with either of 9 those appeals. So that is the ruling of the Court.

10 Have I left any gaps here?

11 MR. DEMO: Your Honor, just one clarification.

12 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

13 MR. DEMO: Foley is representing Highland Capital
14 Management in the appeal of the confirmation order to the 15 Fifth Circuit. I just want to clarify that your ruling that 16 Highland can represent -- I'm sorry -- Foley can represent 17 Highland in all Acis matters extends to their representation
18 of Highland Capital Management in the appeal of the 19 confirmation order that's set for March 30th.

20 THE COURT: Okay. Let me think through that.

21 MR. DEMO: And again, Your Honor, there's been no
22 objection to that.

23 THE COURT: King & Spalding is in there representing 24 HCLOF. Foley would be representing both Neutra and Highland 25 in connection with the confirmation order?

186

1 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you all.

1 the argument that you can't look at the Bankruptcy Code to 2 determine whether the money should come out of the registry or 3 not, and then be back in front of you, you know, three or four
4 weeks later to relitigate any of those issues.

5 So that was absolutely my recollection and understanding,
6 Your Honor, and I think from your comments I intuit that it
7 was your understanding as well, that this was not something
8 that we were going to deal with again very quickly, but was 9 something to preserve the status quo, a reasonable solution,
10 an equitable solution under Section 105. And I believe that's 11 what Your Honor ordered.

12 THE COURT: All right. Well, I'll let you go ahead
13 and make your opening statement. I think Mr. Kane was 14 finished before I started asking my questions.

15 MR. CLEMENTE: Okay.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Clemente, you may proceed.

17 MR. CLEMENTE: Thank you, Your Honor. I appreciate
18 that. So, and I'll try and be brief on the opening.

19 OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE OFFICIAL COMMITTEE OF 20 UNSECURED CREDITORS

21 MR. CLEMENTE: Your Honor, like it or not, CLO Holdco
22 is not an independent, unrelated, third-party investor merely 23 seeking distributions on account of its own arm's-length
24 independent investments. Instead, CLO is a related party in 25 literally every sense of the word. That's not in dispute.

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 22 of 100

1 That is part of the Jim Dondero or Mr. Dondero web of 2 entities.

3 CLO Holdco is effectively controlled by Mr. Dondero. It
4 was seeded and received assets transferred from the Debtor,
5 including the assets giving rise to the distribution that's in 6 the registry. None of that is in dispute. All of this at a
7 time when Mr. Dondero controlled the Debtor as well as the 8 parties through the various intermediate transactions that 9 ultimately resulted in the assets arriving in CLO Holdco.
10 That is not in dispute.

11 Mr. Dondero's past fraudulent conduct, including
12 fraudulent transfers, is also not in dispute. He was on all
13 sides of this transaction. And therefore this transaction,
14 along with many of the others, must be viewed with skepticism
15 and scrutinized very closely by the Committee and by this 16 Court.

17 The Committee has only just begun such work, Your Honor.
18 And given the Byzantine empire created by Mr. Dondero, it will 19 take time and significant resources to fully and properly
20 conduct an investigation.

21 And Mr. Kane referred to, did we do discovery? We did
22 not. Our reaction to this motion was the same as Your Honor.
23 And as you can see by the stipulations that we have agreed to 24 for purposes of this hearing, we didn't want this to be a 25 situation where the estate would spend a tremendous amount of

1 resources to deal with something that we thought that was
2 dealt with on March 4th.

3 But aside from that, given the web that's been created
4 here, we can't just isolate one piece of it. We can't just be 5 like, I'm going to look at the CLO Holdco documents and be 6 able to develop a full theory. This is a tapestry of 7 interrelated entities that is opaque and vague and purposely
8 so. So you can't just focus on one piece and then try and 9 say, well, I know what this piece is, because that piece has 10 many interrelated complex ramifications and relationships
11 where, frankly, you can't just say, okay, let's focus on this 12 one issue, because you're going to miss the entire tapestry.

13 We still need to examine, as I mentioned, the whole thing,
14 and this takes time and it takes an investment. So while I
15 understand CLO Holdco wants to receive its distribution, I 16 also understand that my constituency wants to be paid, some of 17 whom have been waiting for over a decade.

18 To be clear, Your Honor, my constituency didn't choose to 19 be here in the bankruptcy. But CLO Holdco chose to associate 20 itself with Mr. Dondero and to take assets from Highland in 21 convoluted related-party transactions and reap the benefits of 22 those transactions. CLO Holdco can't now step away from that 23 and try and suggest to Your Honor that this is about taking 24 time under 28 U.S.C. 2042. That was never what it was about 25 on March 4th, and it's not what it's about today.

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 67 of 100

1 Holdco has or doesn't have, we have no idea. And it's
2 controlled, ultimately, let us not lose sight of the fact, by
3 Mr. Dondero.

4 So, allowing CLO Holdco to take distributions will place
5 them with an offshore entity, potentially outside the 6 jurisdiction of this Court, or at the very least, placed in 7 five or six entities removed or who knows where, including
8 potentially other foreign entities.

9 Therefore, exercising authority under Section 105 is 10 consistent with preserving, protecting, and maximizing the 11 value of the Debtor's estate, which estate includes claims,
12 causes of action, and avoidance actions.

13 As you know, 105 is the means and -- circumstances (audio 14 gap) preserve and protect the estate.

15 And to be sure, this is not inconsistent with any other 16 provision of the Bankruptcy Code, and it's, in fact, from our 17 perspective, in furtherance of the goals of the Code.

18 Your Honor, regarding the payments that Mr. Kane (audio 19 gap), the fact that a few payments were made on the note
20 doesn't change the fact that Section 105 applies and the Court
21 should deny the motion.

22 As with all that is Highland, nothing is simple or easy.
23 First, CLO Holdco received millions more in assets and 24 transfers, aside from the interests giving rise to the 25 distributions at issue. So the fact that there were payments

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 68 of 100

1 on the notes really speak nothing to the fact of whether the
2 overall transaction was for reasonably equivalent value or 3 otherwise problematic, especially when there is nothing in the 4 record regarding the Dugaboy Trust, its wherewithal to pay, or
5 the fairness of the terms of the note, or any of that. Or why
6 the note was structured this way or, you know, what the Get 7 Good Trust and the Dugaboy Trust do, how they interact, who 8 makes decision on what gets paid and doesn't get paid.

9 The few payments, while interesting, Your Honor, again, do
10 not establish reasonably equivalent value or the propriety, in 11 our view, of the transfers.

12 Finally, as this Court knows, reasonably equivalent value
13 is not determinative of whether the transfer was intentionally
14 fraudulent or otherwise potentially avoidable or problematic.
15 So, while deeds are interesting, Your Honor, I would submit 16 that they don't move the needle in changing the fact that the 17 motion should be denied.

18 Now, Your Honor, to the point that you raised with me
19 before I started my remarks here. Much has been made about 20 inappropriate prejudgment remedy or attachment or similar 21 arguments. I submit this case is moot, Your Honor. Again, at 22 the risk of repeating myself, I will emphasize that CLO Holdco
23 is not an independent third party. Like it or not, it is tied 24 up in a ruinous web with Mr. Dondero, and that in and of 25 itself makes this case unique and distinguishes it from the

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 69 of 100

1 other cases cited by CLO Holdco.

2       Additionally, Your Honor, the current circumstances are 3 distinguishable because the Debtor had control over these 4 funds. That's why we were in front of you on March 4th. I
5 agree, and I'm not arguing, that the Debtor did not own these 6 funds. But it clearly had control over them at the time that 7 it sought to make the distributions on March 4th. So, in my
8 humble opinion, Your Honor, that means the Court had control
9 over that.

10       Having them held in a registry while an investigation
11 occurs is not akin to slapping a lien on someone's house or 12 taking possession of an automobile, like the cases cited by 13 Mr. Kane where they require there's some -- an adversary
14 proceeding or some type of complaint.

15       The situation here, again, Your Honor, matters. The 16 Debtor was before you seeking your authority to make this 17 distribution. That is entirely different than if I were to 18 walk in here and say my colleague, Mr. Twomey, I think that,
19 you know what, I don't like him and so I have a claim against 20 him, and I want Your Honor to enjoin him from being able to 21 sell his automobile. That is entirely different, and in my 22 view completely distinguishes it from any of the cases that 23 Mr. Kane cited, including, of course, I have much respect for 24 Judge Houser, but including the case authored by Judge Houser.

25       So, Your Honor, again, having them held in the registry is

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 79 of 100

1 attachment. Bankruptcy Rules aren't structured like that.

2 But importantly, Mr. Clemente presented no facts to 3 support his balancing of harms argument and presented no facts
4 to establish that he has any viable claims against CLO Holdco.
5 Arguments that James Dondero participated in frauds does not 6 mean that there's a claim or cause of action that the 7 Committee can assert against CLO Holdco, which is what would 8 be required to obtain an injunction.

9 This is a big if. If the Committee is seeking to obtain 10 an injunction, it must satisfy its burden of proving under 11 7065 and the four-factor test established by Janvey v. Alguire
12 in the Fifth Circuit in 2011 and the many cases before that.
13 And it just can't do it.

14 So I want to leave the Court with one case citation,
15 because if the Court is considering some means of entering a
16 preliminary injunction outside of an adversary proceeding, I
17 was able to find a grand total of one case that address that 18 in the Fifth Circuit. And that is the 1995 decision of In re
19 Zale in which the Fifth Circuit noted that the only way a 20 105(a) preliminary injunction could be issued, after a finding 21 of these unusual circumstances and the like, was if all of the 22 protections of an adversary proceeding had been afforded to 23 the non-movant and if the party that was requesting the 24 injunction satisfied the four-factor test that's found in 25 7065.

1           There are no extraordinary circumstances or unusual
2 circumstances here. And if this Court believes that the 3 context of this case warrants that, then the Committee would 4 still have to satisfy that four-factor test for a preliminary
5 injunction. And it has the burden of proof on those four 6 factors. It hasn't presented any evidence whatsoever to 7 support that it can meet the first, let alone the second,
8 third, and fourth factors of that test.

9           So, Your Honor, with that, I'll close our case, unless you
10 have additional questions, and request that the Court grant
11 CLO Holdco's motion.

12           THE COURT: A couple of follow-up questions. I have 13 certain facts in my brain, and I can't remember if they're in 14 evidence or stipulated to or I read them in a pleading. So, I
15 just want to ask: Somewhere I remember seeing that CLO
16 Holdco, or, you know, maybe it's its parent, I think -- Mr.
17 Clemente said we have a Byzantine structure here and we have a 18 sub-web within a bigger web with regard to CLO Holdco. But,
19 anyway, CLO Holdco or its parent has assets of approximately 20 $225 million? Is that evidence or undisputed?

21           MR. KANE: Your Honor, that was contained in one of 22 the pleadings asserted, I believe, by the Committee, and that 23 was the Charitable DAF entities, not necessarily CLO Holdco.
24 There hasn't been any evidence presented by the Committee of 25 the assets held by CLO Holdco other than what we have before

1 the Court.

2 THE COURT: Okay. So it's not something you would
3 stipulate or offer one way or another?

4 MR. KANE: No, Your Honor, I think that's factually
5 incorrect and I don't stipulate to that.

6 THE COURT: Okay. I think my notes show that that
7 was the alleged amount of assets as of September 30, 2019.
8 But, again, that may have just been a pleading, not anything
9 in evidence.

10 All right. And are Mr. Scott or Mr. Dondero on the phone
11 today or on the video? I'm just curious.

12 MR. KANE: Your Honor, I lost you on the video a 13 little bit, but assuming you can hear me, though, Mr. Scott is 14 not. We had conversations with the Committee about various 15 exhibits and whether or not Mr. Scott would be here to testify
16 to prove up exhibits. Once the exhibits were all stipulated 17 as admissible, then there was no need for Mr. Scott to 18 participate.

19 THE COURT: Okay. I was not going to ask him
20 anything. I just was curious if he was listening in. Or Mr.
21 Dondero, for that matter. I guess Mr. Dondero is not on the 22 line, correct? (Pause.) All right. I'll --

23 MR. KANE: Your Honor, I -- I think -- I'm sorry.
24 I've had no conversations with Mr. Dondero. I have no idea
25 whether he's on the line.

1 THE COURT: Okay. I'll take silence to mean he's
2 probably not, but --

3 All right. I asked that question for, I guess, a couple
4 of reasons. But the main reason I asked is -- and I'm going
5 to say this as kindly as I can. They're not here to hear it
6 anyway. But I feel like perhaps they are a little tone deaf,
7 for lack of a better term, on how this all looks to the Court
8 today. And what I mean by that is, obviously, I assume it was 9 their decision to bring this motion, at least Mr. Scott's, and 10 likely Mr. Dondero as well had some involvement in that 11 decision. And the reason I say that it feels like they're a 12 little tone deaf about how this looks is that we just had an 13 extensive hearing and some very thorough pleadings, a lot of 14 evidence uploaded, on a $2.5 million issue. And I don't -- 15 you know, I appreciate that that is a significant sum of 16 money, but we've used the word context a lot this morning: In 17 the context of this reorganization, it seems like a very big 18 deal was raised here, at the choice of Mr. Scott and Mr.
19 Dondero, over a $2.5 million issue, in the context of a 20 reorganization that involves at least hundreds of millions of 21 dollars of debt, if not over a billion. UBS says they're owed
22 a billion.

23 And I just asked my question a minute ago about the value
24 of assets that the DAF or CLO Holdco or that sub-structure has 25 managed, because while no one will commit, is it $225 million

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 83 of 100

1 or not, you know, I take it that the Committee had a good
2 faith basis for saying that, and if it's not that, it's
3 probably a quite sizable number.

4 Again, so I'm kind of thinking out loud about the 5 proportionality of this issue. $2.5 million, not anything to 6 sneeze at, but we're talking about a Charitable DAF that 7 probably has many, many, many more times that of assets. And 8 so there was certainly no equitable argument of hardship or,
9 you know, significant detriment that's befalling CLO Holdco by 10 the tying up of this money in the registry of the Court for 11 this relatively short time period. So, again, it feels a 12 little tone deaf to be bringing this argument, occupying so
13 much time from the parties, the lawyers, the Court, over this 14 issue.

15 And just to further elaborate on that, it matters to me,
16 and I say this about the tone-deafness, partly because I
17 thought -- I said this at the beginning of the hearing, and I
18 still say it -- we already put this issue to rest, albeit 19 temporarily, in March. And in April, we get this new motion.
20 Again, I recognize the language of the March order reserved
21 everyone's rights to come back and argue about this, but,
22 again, the buzzwords for this hearing are going to be context
23 matters, I guess. Mr. Clemente, you get credit for that buzz
24 phrase, those buzzwords.

25 Again, I issued the order with regard to putting these

84

1 monies in the registry of the Court at the suggestion of Mr.
2 Dondero's very wonderful lawyer, retired Judge Lynn. And,
3 again, the context was we had a protocol order early in this 4 case that the Committee negotiated heavily with regard to 5 monies being disbursed out under the control of the Debtor,
6 and heavily negotiated. I remember the CLO Issuers, I think,
7 had some pause and concerns and got their language into that 8 order.

9 So we had this protocol order. Debtor was worried about
10 violating the protocol order, so Debtor files the motion
11 February 24th, wanting the blessing of a court order before it
12 transferred these monies to CLO Holdco and some other
13 Highland-affiliated entities. There were vehement objections,
14 and the Court issued the order saying, Let's put these monies
15 into the registry of the Court, at the suggestion of very able 16 counsel as to how we could resolve that contested matter we 17 were there on on March 4th.

18 So, you know, a month later, April, we have this new 19 motion of CLO Holdco reviving the dispute, the $2.5 million
20 dispute that we had just put to rest temporarily in March at 21 the suggestion of lawyers. I didn't issue a 105 injunction
22 outside the context of an adversary proceeding just on my own,
23 sua sponte. It was suggested to me that this was a good
24 solution. People embraced it. That's what we did. And I
25 sure didn't have in my brain that a month later we'd have a

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 85 of 100

1 brand new motion regarding whether these monies should be
2 disbursed to CLO Holdco all over again, when that was the 3 issue that was already before the Court in March.

4 I, again, fully recognize that everybody reserved their
5 rights, but I focus on this context because, again, I wish Mr.
6 Dondero and Mr. Scott were on the call to hear this: This
7 almost feels like a good faith issue to me. You know, maybe I
8 would feel slightly different if there had been a broad
9 emphasis, heavy emphasis, CLO Holdco standing up through a
10 lawyer that day saying, We're just letting you know, we're 11 going to get together a motion in very short order and tee
12 this up again. Because I would have probably said no. You 13 know, if -- let's just hear it right now today, if this is 14 only a three-week mandate or whatever. So, good faith is 15 something that I can't help but scratch my head and be 16 troubled by.

17 So, I want to emphasize that CLO Holdco's lawyer has made
18 perfect arguments regarding the potential legal issues here.
19 There are some valid arguments here about is this tantamount,
20 holding the money in the registry of the Court that a non-
21 debtor asserts is its property, is that tantamount to a
22 prejudgment remedy? You know, did it require an adversary
23 proceeding? Did it require the traditional four-prong prove-24 up for a preliminary injunction? And did the Court just give 25 short shrift to those legal technicalities?

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 86 of 100

1 Again, these are compelling arguments, but I'm overruling
2 the arguments because, again, I believe it ignores the context
3 that CLO Holdco essentially consented, acquiesced, in this 4 placeholder keep-the-status-quo solution. And I question its 5 good faith in, so quickly after consenting, bringing this 6 motion.

7 But moreover, I do find that in the unique context of the 8 disputes before the Court on March 4th, I did have authority
9 to issue a 105 injunction. 105, as we all know, at Subsection
10 (a) gives a bankruptcy court authority to issue orders
11 necessary or appropriate to carry out provisions of Title 11,
12 and the last sentence even provides a mechanism for the Court
13 to sua sponte take action to, among other things, prevent an 14 abuse of process or just do what's necessary or appropriate to 15 implement court orders or rules.

16 So I think, again, in the context before the Court, it was 17 not only a consensual thing, but the Court had authority. And 18 the backdrop of this, again, cannot be overstated. Again, to 19 use Mr. Clemente's word, we have this Byzantine structure
20 here. It's a lot for the Committee to get its arms around.
21 And even the CLO Holdco structure -- again, I'm looking at my 22 notes, my fancy chart -- we have CLO Holdco, a Cayman Island
23 entity. Its parent is Charitable DAF Fund, LP, another Cayman
24 Island entity. It, in turn, is owned by Charitable DAF
25 Holdco, Ltd., yet another Cayman Island entity. Its general

87

1 partner happens to be a Delaware entity, Charitable DAF GP,
2 LLC, but the beneficial owners of it are the three Highland
3 Foundations, of which Dondero is president and director, and 4 Mr. Scott the treasurer and director.

5 So, I'm not saying the Byzantine structure is in and of 6 itself problematic, although one might wonder why a charitable 7 organization needs to have three offshore entities as part of 8 its structure. I digress. But we all know a Byzantine 9 structure and ties to Dondero do not mean something is 10 attackable in and of itself, but we have had issues raised
11 about the Dynamic Fund and the various transfers with regard 12 to Dugaboy, the Dondero Family Trust, and Get Good Trust and 13 the note. All of that is worthy of examination, and the 14 Committee has not had all that long in this case to 15 investigate it.

16 So, I'm going to say a couple of more things. First, the 17 motion is denied, but I'm going to put more strings on it than 18 that. I'm denying the motion, but as part of this ruling I'm 19 going to order that the Committee has 90 days, unless the 20 Court happens to extend that on motion or agreement of the 21 parties, to file an adversary proceeding against CLO Holdco or 22 the money shall be released. Okay?

23 So, again, I intended it, as I think everybody did, to be 24 a placeholder, to keep the status quo little bit. Again, Mr.
25 Kane has raised good arguments that maybe an adversary

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 88 of 100

1 conceivably was necessary or might become necessary. So here
2 we have a requirement of an adversary within 90 days or the 3 money shall be released to Holdco -- again, unless someone
4 moves to extend that or I get an agreement to extend that and 5 I happen to decide to issue an order extending that.

6 I presume that if an adversary is filed, then if the 7 Committee wants that money to continue to be held in the 8 registry of the Court, then they would have to file an 9 application for injunctive relief, essentially, to keep the 10 money in the registry of the Court pending the resolution of 11 the adversary proceeding.

12 So that is the ruling of the Court. Mr. Clemente, I'll 13 ask you to draft up the order. And I reserve the right to 14 supplement this oral ruling in that form of order. And please 15 run it by Mr. Kane before electronically submitting it to the 16 Court.

17 Now, I'm going to say a couple of other things, and then
18 I'll, before closing, I'll ask if there are questions or other 19 announcements. I have told the parties and the lawyers to 20 focus on a plan and problem-solving how we're going to pay
21 creditors. And I think I expressed my strong hope that people
22 would stop litigating everything. I think I'm remembering
23 saying this most recently at the UBS hearing a few weeks ago
24 on a motion to lift stay. Once again, we had a very lengthy 25 hearing that day. I denied the motion. And here we are

Case 19-34054-sgj11 Doc 802 Filed 07/02/20 Entered 07/02/20 18:59:24 Page 99 of 100

1 as I can to distance CLO Holdco from that taint, because 2 understanding that it's in what has been alleged as a
3 Byzantine web, we think it's important to separate CLO Holdco
4 and its operations to ensure that things are done in an
5 appropriate fashion with square corners.

6 That's all I have, Your Honor. We have no objection to 7 the additional funds being pled into the registry of the 8 Court. We can agree those funds would be adjudicated as part 9 of this dispute. We understand that we did not prevail, and 10 we appreciate your Court hearing our argument.

1 been working very cooperatively with our creditors over the
2 last few months and we're just seeking to do it the best way.

3 So nothing I've said today, nothing, you know, should come
4 as and will come as a surprise to the Committee, but we're
5 working better, recognizing that ultimately the creditors want
6 to be paid, and doing that in an appropriate manner and a 7 thoughtful manner is what the Debtor is committed to do with 8 its partner, the Committee, in this process.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Sort of jumping back, I forgot to 10 ask earlier when we were talking about Acis: Has the Fifth
11 Circuit rescheduled oral argument on the appeal of the Acis
12 confirmation order and order for relief?

13 MR. POMERANTZ: I believe -- Your Honor, maybe Ms.
14 Patel would know off the top of her head.

15 THE COURT: Ms. Patel?

16 MS. PATEL: Your Honor, it was -- it was briefly -- I
17 -- and I say briefly, it was briefly we had -- we got a notice
18 at some point, I believe in early June, that the Fifth Circuit
19 had reset oral argument. And then approximately, I can't 20 remember exactly, but it was like, I don't know, a week or 21 maybe ten days later, we got a notice that it was cancelled
22 again. We have not received notice that it is rescheduled, so
23 it is still pending. But it has not been taken off oral -- it
24 has not been taken off oral argument at some juncture.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I acknowledge that that is a

42

1 pandemic disruption for sure. It would have been nice to have
2 that resolved one way or another by now.

3 MS. PATEL: Agreed, Your Honor. We were trying to 4 figure out, frankly, in the week to ten days that it took from 5 the scheduling to how it was cancelled, exactly how our team
6 was going to get down to New Orleans. And the -- I think the 7 leading contender was to rent an RV and drive down so we could 8 safely get there. So it certainly has been a casualty of the 9 pandemic.

10 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Two more questions.
11 And this one has been a bit of a tough one for me to decide
12 whether I should broach this topic or not. You know, I read
13 the newspapers, the financial papers, just like everyone else,
14 and I saw a headline that I wished almost I wouldn't have 15 seen, and it was a headline about Dondero or Highland 16 affiliates getting three PPP loans. And, you know, I'm only 17 supposed to consider evidence I hear in the courtroom, right,
18 or things I hear in the courtroom, but I've got this 19 extrajudicial knowledge right now thanks to just keeping up on 20 current events. I decided I needed to ask about this.

21 What can you tell me about this, Mr. Pomerantz? I mean, I
22 assumed, from less-than-clear reporting, that it wasn't
23 Highland Capital Management, LP, but I'd like to hear anything
24 you can report about this.

25 MR. POMERANTZ: So, look, Your Honor, the first I

1 could say is that, to my knowledge, Highland Capital, the 2 Debtor, has not obtained a PPP loan. I know there have been 3 discussions with certain funds that basically have certain
4 assets, private operating companies, about obtaining PPP
5 loans. I don't have the specifics for Your Honor. I'm happy
6 to provide that.

7 Of course, to the extent Mr. Dondero, on any of his 8 affiliated funds that are under the control of the Debtor, I
9 would have no way of answering that, but I'm happy to follow
10 up with that with the Board and report back to Your Honor in 11 whatever appropriate manner you felt to obtain that 12 information.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Well, let's have a report on that 14 on the 14th when we come in. You know, maybe Mr. Seery or Mr.
15 Sharp or some other person. But you can probably imagine the 16 different things going through my brain. You know, well,
17 first, let's see if it was -- you know, I don't -- again, I'm 18 not expecting it to be Highland Capital Management, LP. I
19 would be beyond shocked if, you know, that somehow happened
20 when they're in bankruptcy. And, you know, I think it would 21 require a 364 motion, just like any other borrowing, although 22 I know it's kind of a forgivable loan. Strange bird.

23 But then if it's some affiliate of Highland, I still feel 24 like we need some transparency and disclosure on that. I
25 mean, I -- and who were the human beings behind it. It just

45

1 busiest judges in the country right now. I'm wondering when
2 were they contacted. Was it really recently, or a week or two 3 ago? Because they've probably gotten ten new mega-cases in 4 the past two weeks.

5 MR. POMERANTZ: So, Your Honor, the last -- the last 6 two weeks, again, probably since June 15th, we had been
7 discussing the structure of a mediation. We, the Debtor,
8 proposed perhaps a combination of Judge Isgur and Jones. We 9 initially had that conversation with Mr. Clemente, and then we 10 socialized it with the rest of the Committee members. As of 11 last Thursday, I believe it was, we had consensus that Judge
12 Jones, and if available, also Judge Isgur, would make sense.

13 I sent an email to Judge Jones' clerk, indicating that we 14 had a hearing today, that it would be helpful if we got a
15 response, and this morning, two hours before the hearing,
16 Judge Jones' clerk responded and told Mr. Clemente and I that 17 he is available and ready and suggested that we have a 18 conference with -- again, I'm not sure if it'll be him or his 19 clerk, to talk about availability. Of course, we didn't want 20 to go ahead and have that discussion until, you know, we got 21 Your Honor's input on it.

22 THE COURT: Okay. I mean, a couple of things come to 23 mind. One is I am just flabbergasted that they would have any 24 availability. I know they're -- I'm aware of Judge Jones
25 doing hearings on weekends.

1 But second, I'm also concerned what is their idea of
2 availability. Because in order for a mediator to meaningfully
3 help you on this, I mean, it's going to take not just hours
4 but days of time, unless you want the mediator to just have a
5 30,000-foot view. And I mean, I just cannot imagine, --

6 MR. POMERANTZ: So, --

7 THE COURT: -- once again, that they would have days
8 and days to come up to speed with, you know, 11 years of 9 litigation or however long it was, not that long, with UBS,
10 you know the years with Acis, you know, the various alleged 11 claims and causes of action, and, you know, the Byzantine 12 structure here. I mean, you know, not that they have to be,
13 you know, as educated as a judge presiding over litigated
14 matters, but I just cannot imagine they could meaningfully
15 spend time on this.

16 So what are you all envisioning? Because I know what I'm 17 envisioning, and maybe we're not seeing it the same way. I
18 mean, what are you thinking? That you'll go in and spend a 19 day with, you know, maybe just each of you doing a 25-page
20 white paper, and you'll either settle it by the end of the day
21 or not, or what?

22 MR. POMERANTZ: So, let me start by saying that when 23 everyone raised the issue of Judge Jones and Isgur, everyone
24 had the same potential concern that Your Honor has mentioned.
25 You know, my firm and me personally, I'm involved in a couple

47

1 of cases before Judge Jones now, significant cases. So there
2 was a concern.

3 I think people also generally thought that if they
4 accepted and they knew what they were getting into, they would
5 want to do a good job and they'd have the time.

6 We have not had the ability to have an extensive
7 discussion. That discussion could either occur with Mr.
8 Clemente and myself speaking to the clerk or the judge, or if 9 Your Honor -- nothing stops Your Honor from picking up the 10 phone, speaking to Judge Jones and asking him as well.

11 But I expect it to be a very intensive mediation process.
12 I do understand that Judge Jones only does mediations in 13 person, so this would require people getting to Houston,
14 which, in my experience, while I have participated in 15 mediations virtually on the phone, it's a lot more effective
16 to be in person. We would anticipate detailed mediation
17 briefs. We would envision each of the parties speaking to 18 Judge Jones to give him their perspective. But it would be --
19 it would be a significant assignment.

20 Again, whether we would conclude at the end of August, I
21 don't know, but I would contemplate a good two, three days of 22 in-person mediation at the end of August, and then probably,
23 if necessary, to set up for something else, which, again,
24 there are several different things. And I mentioned in my 25 opening remarks why I think people like Judge Jones -- and

57

1 nothing else, we'll go ahead and adjourn for today. And I'll
2 keep -- if there's anything worthwhile to report on the 3 mediation front before we have our hearing on the 14th, I'll 4 have my courtroom deputy reach out to all counsel by email and 5 let you know. Okay? All right.

6 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

7 MS. PATEL: Thank you, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Thank you. We stand adjourned.

9 THE CLERK: All rise.

1 file Multi-Strat as a bankruptcy, it was hard to get folks to
2 really come to the table and think about how to settle that
3 issue.

4 These issues in regard to the total case are much more
5 complicated. We're going to file a plan. We believe that 6 will set a bit of a crucible to folks to think about how to 7 move forward with their claims. We are, as Jeff Pomerantz
8 mentioned last time, agreed in principle, but we have some 9 issues to work through with Redeemer that we hope to be able 10 to resolve by this week. And so that's my internal goal, but 11 I expect to be able to do it.

12 The reason that's complex is not that it's simply a -- the 13 arbitration award is not simply a money award; it actually
14 requires certain offsets, it requires certain assets be sold
15 and paid for. And we're trying to carve our way around some 16 of those, because they (inaudible) agreement, because they're 17 -- they're more difficult than simply exchanging cash for 18 assets, because we don't have the ability to do that right
19 now. We don't have the cash, and we're in bankruptcy.

20 So I do believe that we can get these done. And then if 21 mediation is something that would work, great. We're going to 22 try to do it without mediation as well. Going to try to do it
23 before we get to mediation and resolve claims. And if we're 24 unable to do that, hopefully mediation will push it forward or 25 we have to have a fallback, which will be dispositive motions

1 with respect to certain of the claims.

2 But we expect to have and I think we have a number of
3 claims objections that have (inaudible). We've resolved
4 those. We're really down to three claims. And one of them is 5 almost done.

6 Q All right. At the last hearing, --

7 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, that really does finish the 8 substance of the testimony with respect to this motion, but at 9 the last hearing Your Honor raised some questions about PPP
10 loans.

11 THE COURT: Yes.

12 MR. MORRIS: Would you like me to just take a moment 13 with Mr. Seery to address that?

14 THE COURT: Yes, please.

15 MR. MORRIS: Okay.

16 BY MR. MORRIS:

17 Q Mr. Seery, you're aware that the Judge raised some 18 questions about whether and to what extent the Debtor may have 19 been involved in any of the PPP loans?

20 A Yes.

21 Q And have you done any work to try to figure out the 22 answers to the questions the Judge posed?

23 A Well, work in response to the question, but also work
24 previously. So, just a -- quickly, as I think we all know,
25 the PPP program was put forth to try to give companies cash

1 that they had to use for employee payments, to continue to
2 keep payroll supported and to continue to have folks hold
3 their jobs.

4 We have -- and I think the Business Insider article, which
5 I'm not familiar, I know the publication is not something I
6 seen much, but I'm not familiar with the specifics of that
7 article, and -- but any PPP, away from the assets that HCMLP
8 actually owns or controls. And we've got -- we've got three 9 -- and I think there's some substance to the article. But 10 we've got three businesses. And these are -- this is public,
11 but I'll go into the -- sort of the obvious reasons without 12 going into the specifics of the business around the ones that 13 I know of well.

14 Carey Limousine is a business that transports folks in 15 high-quality cars from airports or from events or between 16 businesses. It was hit severely by the COVID-19 pandemic., 17 particularly with respect to the air transportation, which was 18 really one of its biggest areas. The business,
19 notwithstanding Uber and the other type of shared ride
20 services, had actually done quite well, and Highland was an 21 owner of a significant portion of that business related to 22 some loans that it held in various funds.

23 That business's management, with its own outside counsel,
24 sought a PPP loan. Then our director came to us and discussed
25 with the Board the propriety of that loan. We engaged outside

55

1 counsel, not bankruptcy counsel but counsel that had
2 particularized expertise in PPP, and spent a ton of time
3 really understanding both the law as well as the specific 4 regs. Carey did get a PPP loan. It is potentially 5 forgivable, depending on how it's used.

6 The second entity that was similar but didn't come to the 7 Board, we have a business called SSP, which is an excellent
8 highway business that provides equip -- materials for a lot of 9 different road construction, but primarily highway road
10 construction. Very well run business. That entity got a PPP
11 loan as well, primarily worried about whether the construction
12 on the highways would shut down.

13 So it's been -- I don't believe that's really happened in 14 Texas, which is where most of their business is, but they 15 qualified for that loan. They did not come to the Board. A 16 very specific carve-out, because one of the interest holders
17 that we share that position with is a Small Business
18 Administration fund and, so it was very clear that it was 19 entitled to that loan.

20 Then there's a third entity called Roma that got a very 21 small PPP loan. We don't control the entity and we were not 22 involved in its acquisition of that loan. Again, it would 23 have to be used as required.

24 One of the things I want to make sure that is in the 25 record and for Your Honor with respect to Carey, we spent a

56

1 lot of time as a Board focused on, one, whether it was legal
2 to get that loan, first. We're doing everything right, by the 3 book. We're not going to play in the gray. There is no gray.
4 There's black and white in these areas.

5 Number two, was it ethical, was it appropriate that we
6 went and got this loan or that Carey went and got this loan?
7 Management, with the outside counsel, was sure that we could 8 do it, but we didn't want to take their word for it, so we 9 went out and got our own counsel, third-party counsel for the 10 Board to make sure that this was appropriate.

11 Three, the requirements around these loans are significant 12 and the penalties for violating them are severe. So if you
13 get a loan by mistake, are you really required to pay it back?
14 And if you're mistaken, that will be expensive, but it won't 15 be a real penalty. But if you get a loan that's really 16 inappropriate, that you shouldn't have gotten, that was a 17 material misstatement of any of the facts around it, the 18 penalties are significant. And not only in terms of the 19 opprobrium that you'd suffer in the press, because that's 20 coming, but in terms of how you use the funds.

21 So they can only be used in very specific ways, and we 22 were exceptionally careful around this program.

23 The basis of the program is to keep people employed. And 24 with a business like Carey Limousine in particular, where 25 there's a significant amount of debt, where the business is

1 shut down by COVID, where we didn't have the funds to put into
2 Carey, nor even if we wanted to, we might not have been able
3 to do it without the Committee's approval because of the 4 protocol, a PPP loan was not only legal but it was 5 appropriate. And it's being used in that fashion, meaning to 6 keep employees employed.

7 Q Thank you very much, Mr. Seery.

8 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I have no further questions
9 of Mr. Seery. Does the Court have any questions?

10 THE COURT: I actually have a follow-up question
11 regarding the PPP, just to kind of put a bow on this.

12 EXAMINATION BY THE COURT

13 THE COURT: I'm looking at the demonstrative aide. I
14 don't know if you, Mr. Seery, have it there handy.

15 THE WITNESS: I do, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Okay. So I'm turning to Page 6, the 17 chart, the subchart, Investments and Subsidiaries. The third
18 column, Privately-Held Equity, Various Companies. I mean,
19 that would be the type of investment entity we're talking
20 about here that got the PPP loan: Carey Limousine, SSP, Roma?
21 Nothing that was -- well, I'm going to say Highland affiliate.
22 Affiliate, that's a dicey term, but that's the type of entity
23 in the organizational structure we're talking about, correct?

24 THE WITNESS: Those are the ones -- I want to be very 25 careful, because I know what I know and I know I won't

1 represent anything that I don't know.

2 So, with respect to the entities that HCMLP, the Debtor,
3 controls, that's absolutely the case. I don't know, and I can
4 try to find out, but they are not HCMLP-controlled entities.
5 Whether other entities in the related-party complex received
6 loans -- so, obviously, HCMLP did not receive a loan. And the 7 only entities that we were involved with is the ones I
8 mentioned to you.

9 And I should mention, there are other entities in the 10 privately-held equity that got other government money, in the 11 medical space, that they didn't even ask for. HHS pushed
12 forward payments to folks in the business, medical healthcare-
13 providing businesses, to assure that they had liquidity to 14 provide. And so -- and this has been described to me exactly 15 this way, that they woke up in the morning and found money in 16 their account. And with one of the companies, they actually 17 returned a bunch of the money because it was from a dormant
18 provider number and they didn't believe it was appropriate to 19 keep that money. So that was one of the entities that we 20 control with other investors.

21 But with respect to our HCMLP entities, these are the only 22 ones I know. With respect to other related entities that 23 might be in the family of businesses, for lack of a better
24 term, that were alluded to in the Business Insider article, I
25 don't know that answer. So, I -- if I -- I can try to find

1 out. I just don't know the answer, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Well, this has
3 been extremely helpful.

4 I should ask does anyone have any questions of Mr. Seery?
5 The Committee counsel, perhaps? Anyone else?

6 MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, this is Andrew Clubok. In 7 light of the testimony, I do have some questions on behalf of 8 UBS.

9 THE COURT: All right. Briefly. Go ahead.

10 MR. CLUBOK: Okay.

11 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor? Your Honor, I'm sorry to 12 interrupt, but there's no objection lodged here. If Your 13 Honor wants to permit it, that's obviously the Court's
14 prerogative. But as just a point of order, having not lodged
15 an objection, I don't know what right anybody has to cross-
16 examine the witness.

17 THE COURT: All right. Well, that's why I said
18 briefly. I think that Mr. Morris makes a good point, Mr.
19 Clubok. You could have filed a written objection, response,
20 comment, or something. So, you're a party in interest. I'll 21 give you a little bit of leeway here. But please keep it
22 brief.

23 MR. CLUBOK: Yeah. Thank you, Your Honor. It's just 24 some of the things that Mr. Seery said which we didn't expect
25 to hear that has raised a few questions that I just very

1 briefly will try to address.

2 CROSS-EXAMINATION

3 BY MR. CLUBOK:

4 Q Mr. Seery, good afternoon. I'm Andrew Clubok, Latham &
5 Watkins, on behalf of UBS.

6 Mr. Seery, you talked about the fiduciary duties you've
7 understood yourself to have with respect to certain parties,
8 and my question to you is: Have you understood, since the 9 beginning of your service as an Independent Director of 10 Strand, that you had fiduciary duties to the unsecured
11 creditors of the Debtor?

12 A It's a -- it's a -- the answer is I understand the 13 fiduciary duties very well. I think we have fiduciary duties
14 to the estate. So Highland -- what I tried to explain is that 15 Highland, as an asset manager, has very specific fiduciary 16 duties that are set forth in (inaudible) in the cases and the 17 rules that have interpreted it. We, as directors of Strand,
18 have a duty to the estate.

19 I don't think it's -- I don't think it's fair, and I'd 20 have to subject myself to some education from counsel, I don't 21 think it's fair to say we had a specific fiduciary duty to a
22 particular creditor.

23 So, for example, if I had a fiduciary duty to UBS, it
24 would be very difficult for me to object to UBS's claim. It
25 would be -- I don't know how I could do that as a fiduciary.

1 yesterday counsel for Mr. Dondero filed a joinder in the 2 Debtors' objection to Acis's claim. So, again, just thinking
3 about this in the context of mediation, I think, with that 4 joinder, they will be a necessary party. So, going back to 5 Mr. Seery's point, this is not just --

6 THE COURT: Oh, absolutely. Mr. Dondero is --

7 MS. PATEL: -- a two-party --

8 THE COURT: -- going to be a required party in 9 mediation. Absolutely. So, --

10 MS. PATEL: Thank you, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: All right. Well, if there's nothing
12 further, we'll see you on the 21st. And, again, my courtroom
13 deputy may be reaching out before then if we've got things
14 nailed down on mediation.

1 thing that it might be is commercial information, but I really
2 don't think there's been a showing that it is of the nature that
3 107(b) is intended to address.

4 Now don't get me wrong, I am very troubled by some of 5 what I've heard today. I doubt Mr. Dondero is listening in 6 personally, but I'm going to say, and maybe it will get back to 7 him, maybe it won't, but that I'm very troubled by hearing that 8 Dondero-controlled entities, and I believe the DAF, based on 9 what I've heard in the past, is Dondero controlled, I'm very 10 troubled that Dondero-controlled entities are suing Acis and 11 parties that have dealt with Acis, U.S. Bank, Brigade, and the 12 Moody's one is really mind-boggling, but I'm very troubled that 13 this could be hampering Acis' ability to do a reset and it's 14 driving up expenses.

15 And if these lawsuits were brought before me through a 16 removal or any other mechanism, you know, first, I would have to 17 look at subject matter jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court.
18 Yes, we're way past the effective date of Acis' plan, but the 19 Fifth Circuit case authority provides that if there is a dispute
20 postconfirmation that bears on the interpretation,
21 implementation, or execution of a confirmed plan, then the 22 Bankruptcy Court has subject matter jurisdiction in that 23 context. And it sure sounds like, hearing Mr. Terry's version
24 of things today, which sounded very credible, that this is 25 potentially impinging on the reorganization and plan of Acis.

The Ruling of the Court

51

1           So it's very troubling to me that – well, I've said it
2 before in Highland hearings, that these battles just continue
3 on, but if it's impairing with a plan I confirmed, it's 4 impairing a plan I confirmed, it's impairing the ability to 5 perform under that plan, then that is a problem for the 6 plaintiffs.

7           Now I've heard there is no pending litigation in that 8 regard, but I'm troubled by the April 2020 letter I saw that is 9 essentially a suggestion we may start this up again, the 10 litigation that we dismissed. It's just ridiculous, for lack of 11 a better term, that Dondero and his entities would be doing some 12 of the things it sounds like they're doing: Suing Moody's, for 13 crying out loud, for not downgrading the Acis CLOs. If Mr.
14 Dondero doesn't think that is so transparently vexatious
15 litigation, yeah, I'm going out there and saying that. I 16 haven't seen it, but, come on.

17           So, bottom line, I don't find the 107 standard here is 18 met today, so I am denying entirely the motion. I haven't been 19 convinced that this is commercial information that 107(b)
20 justifies redacting or sealing. But, again, I am most troubled
21 by what I've heard today.

22           I have found Mr. Terry to be a very credible witness
23 today on these points. He's testified in this Court many times
24 and I continue to find him a very credible witness.

25           And so to the extent Mr. Dondero is listening or gets

The Ruling of the Court

1 a transcript, I hope it's loud and clear to him that to the 2 extent you are engaging in efforts surreptitious or overt to
3 derail Acis in its reorganization, there is going to be a price
4 to pay for that. So I hope that message gets to him.

5 Very troubled, very troubled by what I've heard today.

6 All right. Well, I think that concludes our business
7 here today. Is there anything else anyone wants to raise?

8 MS. LAMBERT: Judge Jernigan, Ms. Lambert for the U.S.
9 Trustee. Would you like me to prepare an order just as for the 10 reasons stated?

11 THE COURT: I would like you to do that. Thank you
12 very much. All right.

13 MS. LAMBERT: And I think I will order the — I think I
14 will order the transcript and have it sent to Mr. Lynn.

15 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

1 motion that ever comes before it.

2 I daresay that Mr. Terry and Ms. Patel and Mr. Shaw firmly
3 believe that their client has been wronged and that they're 4 entitled to $75 million or more. Thankfully, they were able
5 to check their egos at the door and come to an agreement, I
6 guess, that they believe represents a fair and reasonable
7 compromise.

8 So I understand that while -- that Mr. Dondero embraced 9 and appreciated the arguments that the Debtor made in its 10 pleading, but the fact of the matter is the Debtor came to a 11 position when it had the choice of either going forward with 12 that litigation, with all of the costs and risks and 13 uncertainty that were described, or taking this settlement.
14 And it came to the -- I believe the record shows -- the very 15 considered and reasonable decision to end all of the 16 litigation with Acis on the terms set forth in the agreement.

17 And I just wanted to kind of -- that doesn't go to any of 18 the particular -- necessarily go to any of the particular 19 elements of the legal standard, but so much time was spent 20 trying to tie Mr. Seery and the Debtor to the objection, and I
21 think -- I think it's important for the Court to look at this 22 in context.

23 And frankly, there are other very substantial claims out
24 there. And Mr. Seery was very clear that each case is going 25 to be judged on its own merits. And just because we've

10

1 settled a case where we put forth a strong legal position
2 here, it's only because we got to terms that the Debtor felt
3 were fair and reasonable. We've taken -- and parties do this
4 all the time. They take their litigation position and we're 5 going to take our litigation position. But when it comes to 6 settlement, you have to view: What are the alternatives? And
7 that's all Mr. Seery did. That's what the board did, servant
8 of their fiduciary duties.

9 And I'm going to talk in a few minutes about the benefits
10 to the estate that this settlement entails, but I just -- I
11 was a little surprised that anybody would try to say that 12 because we took a position in litigation we're not allowed to 13 compromise that position. Because if that were the standard,
14 Your Honor, no 9019 would ever be approved, because, by 15 definition, 9019s are compromises.

16 So let me turn for a moment now to the actual elements of 17 the standard under 9019. The first one is the probability of 18 success on the merits. As I said, Mr. Seery felt strongly 19 about the position, but he also articulated some very, very 20 specific concerns, from Mirant to the Court's views on 21 equities that may not be -- the Court may not share our views 22 on equities. The Court may not share. The Court has a lot of 23 experience with these particular litigants. The Court has 24 already assessed the credibility of certain witnesses in 25 relation to the claims at issue in this matter. The Court has

11

1 already rendered decisions with respect to certain aspects of
2 this matter. And so the Debtor took all of those things into
3 account in assessing the probability of success on the merits,
4 and that's all very much in the record.

5 But I did want to point to one other piece of evidence
6 that hasn't been discussed yet, and that is Professor
7 Rapoport's expert report that has now been admitted into
8 evidence. You know, I question the weight that the Court
9 should give, but never -- only because I'm not sure how -- the 10 depth of the opinion. But nevertheless, Professor Rapoport
11 specifically says at the top of Page 5, on Page 13, at the 12 very end of her opinion as to Question 1, she says, in 13 substance, if the Court follows Mirant and otherwise finds
14 that damages would benefit the Acis estate, then the Acis
15 claim, valued by Acis at least $75 million, could have 16 significant value. Still, that value would depend on how the 17 Court found -- how the facts fall after the Court hears
18 testimony and is able to weigh the evidence.

19 That's kind of what Mr. Seery did. So I'm not even sure 20 that there's a dispute, frankly, over the probability of 21 success. Nobody has quantified it. Nobody asked Mr. Seery to 22 quantify it. We haven't gone down that path.

23 But Professor Rapoport, in her very first opinion, said:
24 Could be zero, could be $75 million or more. It depends on 25 where the Court comes out.

1 consistent with the Bankruptcy Rules. The notice was given on 2 September 23rd, so we're certainly good from notice and
3 opportunity to be heard, from that standpoint.

4 As we all know and as I went through yesterday in ruling
5 on the Redeemer Committee settlement, I am consulting
6 Bankruptcy Rule 9019 as well as the abundance of jurisprudence
7 that tells bankruptcy courts how they are to evaluate 8 compromises and settlements: Cases such as AWECO, Jackson
9 Brewing, TMT Trailer, Cajun Electric, and Foster Mortgage,
10 significantly, among the cases.

11 I am to look at, obviously, whether the proposed 12 compromise is fair and equitable and in the best interest of 13 creditors when considering probability of success in future
14 litigation, with due consideration for the uncertainty of law
15 and fact; when considering the complexity and likely duration
16 of future litigation and any attendant inconvenience and 17 delay; and all other factors bearing on the wisdom of the 18 compromise.

19 Case law also talks about the Court probing into whether a 20 settlement is within the range of reasonableness, and 21 obviously the Court should consider the paramount interests of 22 creditors.

23 So, here, giving all due consideration of the record
24 before me and the very eloquent arguments, I am going to 25 approve the compromise today.

1 I'm going to turn for a moment to Mr. Seery's testimony.
2 Just as I found his testimony to be very credible with regard
3 to the Redeemer Committee settlement, I once again found it to 4 be very credible and compelling in connection with the Acis
5 and Terry settlements.

6 Among other things, I believe his testimony reflected a
7 deep understanding of the risks and rewards of further
8 litigation and the uncertainty that there was in both the law
9 and the fact. He mentioned his understanding of the Mirant
10 holding and how that absolutely posed some risks for the 11 estate in challenging the claims of the reorganized Acis. He 12 mentioned what I consider significant due diligence that he 13 performed. He mentioned not only reading many of the rulings
14 of this Court throughout the tortured history of the Acis
15 bankruptcy, but he mentioned meeting with the board members.
16 In fact, meeting with Mr. Terry and Acis's professionals. He 17 picked out certain of the issues, the fact issues, the $10
18 million note transfer that was argued to be a fraudulent
19 transfer. He described the disputes regarding the changing of 20 the fee structure imposed by Highland or Highland entities on 21 Acis, and he expressed concerns regarding the cost of 22 litigating all of that.

23 He spoke in depth about Mr. Terry's claims regarding his 24 retirement funds, and said he thought it was a pretty 25 straightforward win for the Terrys that he thought should have

1 been settled years ago for full value.

2 He mentioned his knowledge about the Guernsey litigation,
3 that being a jurisdiction where loser pays. So that was sort
4 of an open-shut one as far as he was concerned. And he talked 5 about the Acis GP proof of claim in some depth, regarding the 6 lawsuits in New York.

7 So, again, I find that he was very compelling and his
8 testimony reflected significant due diligence.

9 Now, the next thing I want to highlight that is very
10 compelling to me in deciding I should approve this settlement
11 is -- and I probably should have mentioned this first and 12 foremost -- this was a mediated settlement. This is certainly 13 some indication of its good faith and arm's-length nature, and 14 certainly is a point in favor of the wisdom of the settlement,
15 given that we had two very respected co-mediators, retired
16 Judge Gropper from the Bankruptcy Court of the Seventh
17 District of New York. Ms. Mayer was a partner at Weil Gotshal
18 with a very impressive career background. And so it, again,
19 it is a point very much in favor of the bona fides of this 20 settlement. So I cannot overstate that one.

21 A few other points I will make. In looking at the risks
22 and rewards and likely expense and inconvenience of further
23 litigation, while Professor Rapoport estimated maybe $350,000
24 to $1.1 million of fees might be incurred for future
25 litigation of the issues between Highland and Acis, and while

36

1 I respect her views tremendously -- I know she's been a fee
2 examiner in many, many cases and really has some bona fides in 3 speaking about fees in bankruptcy cases -- I tend to think
4 that is an extremely low estimate. And I can't separate from 5 this analysis my own experience and knowledge with how 6 litigious and expensive things have historically been between 7 Acis and Highland.

8 I cannot remember the final fee application amounts of the 9 Chapter 11 Trustee and his professionals, but I know that in a
10 year-plus of the Acis case, the fees were much, much larger
11 than this amount, and I seem to remember that at least Foley
12 Lardner had a very, very large unsecured claim in this case
13 related to its fees representing Highland v. Acis, millions of 14 dollars.

15 So, with complete respect to Professor Rapoport, I believe 16 with all my heart that that number is way, way low as far as 17 future fees and expenses.

18 And as Ms. Chiarello pointed out and I think Mr. Morris
19 pointed out, we don't actually have evidence of Mr. Dondero's
20 willingness to pay legal fees for fights of Highland v. Acis.
21 While certainly I believe one hundred percent that Mr. Lynn 22 was told that Dondero would pay those fees and he has every 23 reason to believe him, I just don't have the equivalent of 24 evidence there that I can point to, evidence being Mr. Dondero
25 testifying that he would do that and maybe putting something

1 else in front of me to show a commitment.

2       So I again will turn to Ms. Rapoport's report. While she
3 used words to the effect of, you know, she thought challenging
4 this would be a reasonable endeavor, I think that, all in all,
5 Mr. Seery was just very credible in his evaluation of things
6 and his strong feeling from the beginning that we're going to 7 fight this, it should be zero, and then as he did his due
8 diligence, as he looked at some of the issues -- and I will
9 point out that Professor Rapoport identified 16 issues of law
10 this Court would have to determine, in her estimation, and 11 then there could be potentially 12 fact issues the Court might 12 have to rule on, depending on how I ruled on the 16 issues of 13 law. I don't think I could do that as swiftly as maybe this 14 case needs and deserves to get on its way to reorganization,
15 and I do think the settlement enhances the likelihood of 16 confirmation of a plan in the near future. While we may have 17 miles to go before we get there, I think this settlement is a 18 step in the right direction, just like the settlement with the 19 Redeemer Committee is a step in the right direction. And 20 that's a big factor in my mind. I'm supposed to look at all
21 factors bearing on the wisdom of the compromise, and I think
22 the compromise enhances the prospect of a reorganization
23 sooner rather than later.

24       All right. I reserve the right to supplement in more
25 detailed findings and conclusions, but Mr. Morris, I'm going

47

1 THE COURT: All right.

2 MR. KHARASCH: If we need more time, obviously, we

1 THE COURT: Yes.

2 MR. BONDS: Can I have a second? Mr. Dondero did
3 apologize to counsel and to Mr. Seery as well, and so the idea
4 that Mr. Dondero has not apologized is not entirely correct.

5 THE COURT: Okay. Well, if I misunderstood, I
6 apologize. But I guess what I was really trying to convey is,
7 in a situation like this, I think coming into court and taking
8 his lumps and saying things under oath might have been a
9 better way to proceed.

10 I guess the second thing I want to say is I wish Mr.
11 Dondero was here, because maybe I'm reading this wrong, but I
12 think he needs to hear and know he is not in charge anymore of 13 Highland. It may have been his baby. He may have created its 14 wealth. But when he and the board made the decision to file
15 Chapter 11, number one, that changed everything. And then
16 number two, when the Committee was formed and was threatening
17 "We think we need a Chapter 11 trustee because of conflicts of 18 interest of Mr. Dondero and others," and when the Committee
19 negotiated something short of that with the Debtor in January
20 2020, you know, a settlement that involved Mr. Dondero no
21 longer being in charge, no longer being CEO, no longer having 22 any role except portfolio manager with the Debtor, and when 23 various protocols were negotiated, heavily negotiated, for 24 weeks, detailed, complex protocols, life changed even further.
25 It changed when he filed Chapter 11, when he put his baby,

1 Highland, in Chapter 11, and then it changed further in
2 January 2020 when this global corporate governance settlement
3 was reached. As we know, it involved independent new board
4 members coming in and eventually a new CEO. He's not in 5 charge.

6 Now, that doesn't mean he's not a party in interest, and 7 he can certainly weigh in with pleadings in the bankruptcy
8 court. But these communications that I've admitted into 9 evidence, and the declaration, the sworn declaration of Mr.
10 Seery, suggest to me that he's not fully appreciating that, 11 sorry, you're not in charge. And when you chose to put the 12 company in bankruptcy because of the overwhelming debt, it
13 started a cascade of events, so that now I'm depending on a
14 debtor-in-possession with a new board and a new CEO and a 15 Committee of very sophisticated members and professionals who 16 are working in tandem with the Debtor to be in charge,
17 basically. All right? So that's another thing I just feel 18 compelled to say for Mr. Dondero's benefit.

19 I guess another thing is there was a little bit of a 20 theme, Mr. Bonds, in your comments that Mr. Dondero is just 21 concerned, more than anything else, about the way employees
22 are being treated, or at least that's a major concern. And I
23 don't find that to be especially compelling. I mean, maybe if 24 he was sworn under oath and testified, I would believe that,
25 but it doesn't feel like what's really going on here. Again,

25

1 he took the step of deciding that the company should file
2 Chapter 11. We had the change in corporate governance in 3 January. And he has the ability -- everyone, I think, would
4 very much be interested in a plan that he supports. You know,
5 he wants to get the company back. That has been made clear in 6 hearings from time to time, and I believe, from Seery's
7 declaration and Highland's lawyers, that they've been and will 8 remain receptive to Mr. Dondero's ideas for a different type 9 of plan that might allow him to get back into control of 10 Highland, if he puts in adequate consideration that makes the 11 Committee and others happy.

12 But we're in a proverbial the-train-is-leaving-the-station
13 posture right now. Okay? We've got confirmation coming up
14 the second week of January or something like that. Okay. So
15 the train is leaving the station, so we're running out of time
16 to hear what Dondero might want to do as far as an alternative 17 plan.

18 So, as far as the requested TRO, I appreciate that Mr.
19 Dondero and his counsel are worried about some ambiguity, but 20 I'm looking through the literal wording that has been 21 proposed, and the wording proposed is that Dondero is 22 temporarily enjoined and restrained for communicating, whether 23 orally, in writing, or otherwise, directly or indirectly, with 24 any board member, unless Mr. Dondero's counsel and counsel for 25 the Debtor are included in such communications. Not ambiguous

57

1 Court next Wednesday, he needs to testify. And if NexPoint,
2 through whoever their decision-maker is, is wanting to urge a
3 position to the Court, they need a human being to testify.
4 And I'll hear Seery and I'll hear Dondero and I'll hear
5 whoever that person is, and that's what's going to matter, you
6 know, most to me. Yeah, we have some legal issues, certainly,
7 but I like to hear business people explain things, no offense
8 to the lawyers. But it's always very helpful to hear the 9 business people in addition to the lawyers. All right. So,
10 Mr. Morris, you're going to upload that TRO for me.

11 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Mr. Wright, you can upload your order
13 setting your motion for hearing next Wednesday at 1:30. And I
14 think we have our game plan for now. Anything else? All 15 right. We're adjourned.

16 THE CLERK: All rise.

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
BEFORE THE HONORABLE STACEY G.C. JERNIGAN,

WEBEX APPEARANCES:

Los Angeles, CA 90067-4003

1       The Movants are not parties to those agreements. The 2 testimony is undisputed that there are many holders of 3 preferred shares and notes that have had no notice of this 4 proceeding that will undoubtedly be impacted by the tying of 5 the hands of the portfolio manager. The chart that was 6 attached as Exhibit B expressly shows just what a large
7 portion of interested parties and people who would be affected
8 by this motion are not -- they didn't get notice. There was 9 no attempt to get notice. There was no attempt to get their 10 consent. All of that testimony is now in the record, and I
11 think due process alone would prevent the entry or even the 12 consideration of an order of this type.

13       There is nothing improper that's been alleged. There is 14 no -- there is no allegation of fraud. There is no allegation
15 of breach of contract of any kind. There's not even a 16 question of business judgment. The Movants didn't even do
17 their diligence to ask the Debtor why they made these 18 transactions. There is nothing in the record that shows that 19 the Debtor, as the portfolio manager of the CLOs, did anything
20 improper.

21       The only thing that the Movants care about is that they 22 don't like the results in two particular trades. I don't 23 think that that meets their burden of persuasion that the 24 Court should enter an order of this type, and I would like to 25 relieve Mr. Seery of the burden, frankly, and the Court, of

63

1 having to put on testimony to justify transactions that really
2 aren't even being questioned, Your Honor.

3 So the Debtor would respectfully move for the denial of 4 the motion and the relief sought therein.

5 THE COURT: All right. Your request for a directed 6 verdict, something equivalent to a directed verdict here, is 7 granted. I agree that the Movant has wholly failed to meet
8 its burden of proof here today to show the Court, persuade the 9 Court that, as Mr. Morris said, I should essentially tie the 10 hands of the Debtor as a portfolio manager here, as stated.
11 Nothing improper has been alleged. There has been no showing 12 of a statutory right here, or a contractual right here, on the 13 part of the Movants.

14 I am -- I'm utterly dumbfounded, really. I agree with the 15 -- I was going to say innuendo; not really innuendo -- I agree
16 with part of the theme, I think, asserted by the Debtor here
17 today that this is Mr. Dondero, through different entities, 18 through a different motion. I feel like he sidestepped the 19 requirement that I stated last week that if we had a contested
20 hearing on his motion, Dondero's motion, that I was going to 21 require Mr. Dondero to testify. He apparently worked out an 22 eleventh hour agreement with the Debtor on his motion to avoid 23 that. But, again, these so-called CLO Motions very clearly,
24 very clearly, in this Court's view, were pursued at his sole
25 direction here.

64

1 This is almost Rule 11 frivolous to me. You know, we're
2 -- we didn't have a Rule 11 motion filed, and, you know, I
3 guess, frankly, I'm glad that a week before the holidays begin
4 we don't have that, but that's how bad I think it was, Mr.
5 Wright and Mr. Norris. This is a very, very frivolous motion.
6 Again, no statutory basis for it. No contractual basis. You
7 know, you didn't even walk me through the provisions of the 8 contracts. I guess that would have been fruitless. But you
9 haven't even shown something equitable, some lack of 10 reasonable business judgment.

11 Bluntly, don't waste my time with this kind of thing
12 again. You wasted my time. We have 70 people on the video.
13 Utter waste of time.

14 All right. So, motion is denied. Mr. Morris, please
15 upload an order.

16 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: All right. Do we have any other business
18 to accomplish today?

19 MR. POMERANTZ: I don't think so, Your Honor. I know
20 we will see you tomorrow in connection with Mr. Daugherty's
21 relief from stay motion.

22 THE COURT: Well, yeah, we do have that. Okay. We 23 will see you tomorrow. We stand adjourned.

24 MR. CLEMENTE: Thank you, Your Honor.

25 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 David Klos, who is the person who put the model together, who
2 has been working on it for six or nine months, and no one else
3 S has a copy of? Yes. Yeah, I have to -- I have to access
4 him. I don't believe that's the -- inappropriate or in any 5 way violating the spirit of the TRO.

6 I believe settlement in this case is only going to happen
7 with somebody fostering communication. And Ellington's role,
8 which I thought was a good one and I thought he was performing 9 well as settlement counsel, was an important role. And I used
10 him for things like -- and Seery also used him for things. As 11 recently as two days before Ellington was fired, Seery gave 12 him a shared services proposal to negotiate with me.
13 Ellington has always been the go-between from a settlement and 14 a legal standpoint. I think his role there was -- it was 15 valued. To try to honor the TRO was things like Multi-Strat,
16 that I didn't remember correctly. Ninety percent of the time
17 or for the last 20 years I would have gone directly to 18 Accounting and Dave Klos for it, but I purposely went to 19 settlement counsel in terms of Ellington in order to get the 20 Multi-Strat information which we needed in order to put the 21 pot plan together that we went to the Independent Board with 22 at the end of December.

23 Q (faintly) And do you recall the questions that Debtor's
24 counsel had regarding the letters sent by K&L Gates to clients
25 of the Debtor?

Dondero - Cross

119

1 MR. MORRIS: I'm sorry, Your Honor. I had trouble
2 hearing that question.

3 THE COURT: Please repeat.

4 MR. BONDS: Sure.

5 BY MR. BONDS:

6 Q Do you recall the questions Debtor's counsel had regarding
7 the letters sent by K&L Gates to the clients of the Debtor --
8 to the Debtor?

9 A Yes.

10 Q You testified on direct that the letters were sent to do
11 the right thing; is that correct?

12 A Yes.

13 Q What did you mean by that?

14 A I don't want to repeat too much of what I just said, but 15 the Debtor has a contract to manage the CLOs, which in no way
16 is it not in default of. It doesn't have the staff. It
17 doesn't have the expertise. Seery has no historic knowledge
18 on the investments. The investment staff of Highland has been 19 gutted, with me being gone, with Mark Okada being gone, with 20 Trey Parker being gone, with John Poglitsch being gone.

21 And there's -- there's a couple analysts that are a year
22 or two out of school. The overall portfolio is in no way
23 being understood, managed, or monitored. And for it to be 24 amateur hour, incurring losses for no business purpose, when 25 the investors have requested numerous times for their account

120

1 not to be traded, is crazy to me. Where the investors say, We
2 just want our account left alone. We just want to keep the 3 exposure. And Jim Seery decides no, there's -- I'm going to 4 turn it into cash for no reason. I'm just going to sell your 5 assets and turn them to cash and incur losses by doing it the 6 week of Thanksgiving and the week of Christmas. I think it's 7 -- it's shameful. I'm glad the compliance people and the 8 general counsel at HFAM and NexPoint saw it the same way. I
9 didn't edit their letters, proof their letters, tell them how 10 to craft their letters. They did that themselves, with 11 regulatory counsel and personal liability. They put forward
12 those letters.

13 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor (garbled) the testimony that 14 Mr. Dondero just gave about these people saw it. They're not 15 here to testify how they saw it. We know that Mr. Dondero
16 personally saw and approved the letters before they went out.
17 He can testify what he thinks, what he believes. I have no
18 problem with that. But there should be no evidence in the 19 record of what the compliance people thought, believed,
20 understood, anything like that. It's not right.

21 THE COURT: All right. That's essentially a --

22 MR. BONDS: Your Honor?

23 THE COURT: -- a hearsay objection, I would say, or 24 lack of personal knowledge, perhaps. Mr. Bonds, what is your 25 response?

121

1 MR. BONDS: Your Honor, my response would be that
2 there are several exhibits the Debtor introduced today that
3 stand for the proposition that the compliance officers were 4 concerned. So I think there is ample evidence of that in the 5 record.

6 THE COURT: I didn't --

7 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, the letter --

8 THE COURT: I did not understand what you said is in 9 the record. Say again.

10 MR. BONDS: Your Honor, I'm sorry. The -- there are 11 -- there are references that are replete in the record that 12 have to do with the compliance officers' understanding of the 13 transactions.

14 THE COURT: I don't know what you're referring to.

15 THE WITNESS: Your Honor?

16 THE COURT: I've got a lot of exhibits. You're going
17 to have to point out what you think --

18 THE WITNESS: Can I -- can I -- can I -- can I answer
19 for -- that for a second? The letters that were signed by the 20 compliance people or by the businesspeople at NexPoint and 21 HFAM objecting to the transactions, those letters were their 22 beliefs, their researched beliefs. They weren't --

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 THE WITNESS: -- micromanaged by me. You know, they 25 weren't -- I agree with them, but those weren't my beliefs

122

1 that they've stated. Those were their own beliefs and their
2 own research, --

3 THE COURT: All right.

4 THE WITNESS: -- and the record should reflect --

5 THE COURT: This is clearly hearsay. I mean, it's 6 one thing to have a letter, but to go behind the letter and 7 say, you know, what the beliefs inherent in the words were is 8 inadmissible. All right? So I strike that.

9 THE WITNESS: Maybe ask your question again.

10 BY MR. BONDS:

11 Q Yeah. What is your understanding of the rights that these 12 parties had and what do you believe that was intended to be 13 conveyed by the compliance officers?

14 MR. MORRIS: Objection. Calls -- calls for Mr.
15 Dondero to divine the intent of third parties. Hearsay.

16 THE COURT: I sustain.

17 MR. BONDS: Your Honor, --

18 MR. MORRIS: No foundation.

19 MR. BONDS: -- I don't agree. I think that this is 20 asking Mr. Dondero what he thinks.

21 MR. MORRIS: The letters speak for themselves, Your 22 Honor.

23 THE COURT: Okay. I sustain --

24 MR. MORRIS: And Mr. --

25 THE COURT: I sustain the objection.

Dondero - Cross

123

1 MR. MORRIS: All right. Thank you.

2 THE WITNESS: Ask me what I know. Or ask me what my 3 concerns --

4 BY MR. BONDS:

5 Q Let me ask you this. What were your concerns relating to 6 the compliance officers' exhibit?

7 A My concerns regarding the transaction, the transactions,
8 which may repeat what I've said before, but I do want to make 9 sure it gets in the record. So if we have to make a -- these 10 were my concerns, whether or not they were the compliance
11 people's concerns. I believe they were, and I believe they 12 were similar, but I'm just going to say these are -- these 13 were my concerns.

14 The Debtor, with its contractual -- with its contract with 15 the CLOs, were in no way -- was in no way compliant with that 16 contract or not in default of that contract. Bankruptcy is a 17 reason for default. Not having the key men specified in the 18 contract currently employed by the Advisor is a violation.
19 Not having adequate investment staff to manage the portfolio
20 is a violation of that contract. Announcing that you're 21 laying off everybody and will no longer be a registered
22 investment advisor is proclaiming that you, if you even have 23 any -- any -- pretend that you're qualified or in compliance
24 with the contract now, you're broadcasting that you won't be 25 in three weeks, are -- are all mean that you're not in good

204

1 MR. BONDS: Thank you, Your Honor.

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
BEFORE THE HONORABLE STACEY G.C. JERNIGAN,
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE.

WEBEX APPEARANCES:

For the Debtor: Jeffrey Nathan Pomerantz
PACHULSKI STANG ZIEHL & JONES, LLP
10100 Santa Monica Blvd.,
13th Floor
Los Angeles, CA 90067-4003
(310) 277-6910

For the Debtor: John A. Morris
PACHULSKI STANG ZIEHL & JONES, LLP
780 Third Avenue, 34th Floor
New York, NY 10017-2024
(212) 561-7700

250

1 can't talk them about specifically, but they're at least 20
2 percent better than what the Debtor has put forward as far as
3 a plan. And what we put forward is elegant, it's simpler, it
4 treats the employees fairly, it gives the business continuity,
5 it gives investors continuity, and it's not just a harsh,
6 punitive liquidation that's going to end up in a myriad of 7 litigation.

8 We're paying a premium, it's a capitulation price, to try 9 and get to some kind of settlement. And I encourage you to 10 look at it. It's elegant. It's straightforward. It's 11 simple. And now that you've encouraged and gotten us up to a 12 number that's well in excess of the Debtor, maybe a little 13 pressure on other people to treat employees fairly, maybe not 14 liquidate a business that's important in Dallas, that has been 15 a big business for a number of years, doing enormous good
16 things for a lot of people.

17 You know, we went into bankruptcy with $450 million of 18 assets and almost no debt. And we've been driven into the 19 ground by the process. And then the plan is to just harshly
20 liquidate going forward. I -- I -- it's crazy. I don't know 21 what else to do to stop the train other than what we've 22 offered.

23 THE COURT: All right. Well, I hear what you're 24 saying, and I do, just because -- I don't know if you left the 25 room or not, but we did have discussion of Section 206 of the

251

1 Investment Advisers Act today. It was put on the screen. Mr.
2 Post was asked what was unlawful as far as what had happened
3 here, what was going on here, what was fraudulent, deceptive,
4 or manipulative, in parsing through the words of the statute.
5 And he said Mr. Seery engaged in deceptive acts because he 6 wasn't trying to maximize value. Okay? I'm not an expert on 7 the Investment Advisers Act, but I know that that was not a
8 deceptive act.

9 And so I'll allow the plan to be filed under seal, but
10 it's not going to be unsealed absent an order of the Court.
11 Okay? So we'll just leave it at that for now. And while I
12 still encourage good-faith negotiations here, I've said it
13 umpteen times, where you're tired of the cliché, probably:
14 The train is leaving the station. And if you want the Court
15 to have patience in the process and if you want the parties to 16 cooperate in good faith, it might help if we didn't have 17 things like Dugaboy and Get Good Trust filing a motion for an 18 examiner 15 months into the case.

19 I mean, it feels to me, Mr. Dondero, whether I'm right or 20 wrong, that it's like you've got a twofold approach here: I
21 either get the company back or I burn the house down. And I'm 22 telling you right now, if we don't have agreements, --

23 MR. DONDERO: That's not true.

24 THE COURT: -- if we don't have agreements and we 25 come back on the 5th for a continuation of this hearing and a

252

1 motion to hold you in contempt, you know, I'm leaning right
2 now, based on what I've heard so far, and I know I haven't
3 heard everything, but I'm leaning right now towards finding
4 contempt and shifting a whole bundle of attorneys' fees.
5 That, to me, seems like the likely place we're heading.

6 I mean, I commented at the December hearing on the 7 preliminary injunction against you personally that it had been
8 like a $250,000 hearing, I figured, okay, just guesstimating
9 everybody's billable rate times the hours we spent. Well,
10 here we were again, and I know we've got all this time outside
11 the courtroom preparing, taking depositions. I mean, what 12 else is a judge to think except, by God, let's drive up
13 administrative expenses as much as we can; if we can't win,
14 we're going to go down fighting? That's what this looks like.
15 Okay? So if it's not really what's going on, then you've got 16 to work hard to change my perceptions at this point.

17 MR. RUKAVINA: Your Honor, I hear everything what 18 you're saying, and I'm going to discuss it very bluntly with 19 my clients. But we're being asked not to exercise contract
20 rights in the future. This is not a contempt hearing. And 21 Your Honor, we did ask and offered the estate a million
22 dollars, found money, plus to waive almost all our plan
23 objections, if they would just put this case on pause for 30
24 days.

25 So we are trying. We are trying creative solutions here.

253

1 We know that the train is leaving. We've put our money where
2 our mouth is. We will continue trying. But Your Honor, this
3 is not a contempt proceeding, and my clients are not Mr.
4 Dondero. You've heard they're independent boards.

5 MR. POMERANTZ: I can't leave that last comment
6 without a response. Yes, there was an offer of a million
7 dollars, by an entity that owes the estate multiples of that.
8 So they are offering to pay us something that they already owe 9 us. So Mr. Rukavina continues try to do this. We will not 10 stand for it.

11 MR. RUKAVINA: That is not a fair statement, sir. I
12 misrepresented nothing. We were offering you a million
13 dollars, with no conditions, earned upon receipt, with no
14 credit, no deduction for any of our liability. So you're free
15 to say no, sir, but you're not going to tell the judge that I
16 misrepresented something.

17 THE COURT: All right.

18 MR. POMERANTZ: Should tell the Court --

19 THE COURT: You know what?

20 MR. POMERANTZ: -- that that entity owed the Debtor.

21 THE COURT: You know what? You know what? I am more
22 focused on, Mr. Rukavina, your comment that this Court can't 23 enjoin your clients from exercising contractual rights when,
24 again, in January of 2020, the representation was made and it
25 was ordered, "Mr. Dondero shall not cause any related entity

254

1 to terminate any agreements with the Debtor." Okay? That was
2 -- go back and look at the transcript. That was so meaningful
3 to me.

4 We were facing a possible trustee. And that's what I did
5 in the Acis case. Okay? I had a Chapter 11 trustee. And it
6 was not a perfect fit, to be sure. But it is where we were 7 heading in this case, had the lawyers and parties not
8 negotiated what they did. That was a very important
9 provision, convincing me that, you know what, I think the 10 structure they've got will be better than a trustee. And it
11 has, for the most part. But the fees have gone out the roof,
12 and I lay that at the feet of Mr. Dondero, for the most part.
13 Okay? We have a bomb thrown every five minutes by either him
14 personally or the Dugaboy or the Get Good Trust or the Funds
15 or the Advisors or I don't know who else. Okay?

16 So the train is leaving the station, unless you all come
17 to me and say, okay, we've maybe got a -- Mr. Pomerantz's word
18 -- grand solution here. Okay? If you get there in the next

20 except I'm tired of the carpet-bombing, and if I had to rule
21 this minute, there would be a huge amount of fee-shifting for 22 what we went through today, for what we went through in 23 December, for the restriction motion that, after I called it

25 regurgitating the same arguments. All right. So, not a happy

1 of evidence, considering testimony from five witnesses and
2 thousands of pages of documentary evidence, in considering
3 whether to confirm the Plan pursuant to Sections 1129(a) and 4 (b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

5 The Court finds and concludes that the Plan meets all of 6 the relevant requirements of Sections 1123, 1124, and 1129 of 7 the Code, and other applicable provisions of the Bankruptcy
8 Code, but is issuing this detailed ruling to address certain 9 pending objections to the Plan, including but not limited to 10 objections regarding certain Exculpations, Releases, Plan
11 Injunctions, and Gatekeeping Provisions of the Plan.

12 The Court reserves the right to amend or supplement this 13 oral ruling in more detailed findings of fact, conclusions of 14 law, and an Order.

15 First, by way of introduction, this case is not your 16 garden-variety Chapter 11 case. Highland Capital Management,
17 LP is a multibillion dollar global investment advisor,
18 registered with the SEC pursuant to the Investment Advisers
19 Act of 1940. It was founded in 1993 by James Dondero and Mark
20 Okada. Mr. Okada resigned from his role with Highland prior 21 to the bankruptcy case being filed. Mr. Dondero was in 22 control of the Debtor as of the day it filed bankruptcy, but 23 agreed to relinquish control of it on or about January 9,
24 2020, pursuant to an agreement reached with the Official
25 Unsecured Creditors' Committee, which will be described later.

1 Although Mr. Dondero remained on as an unpaid employee and 2 portfolio manager with the Debtor after January 9, 2020, his
3 employment with the Debtor terminated on October 9, 2020. Mr.
4 Dondero continues to work for and essentially control numerous
5 nondebtor companies in the Highland complex of companies.

6 The Debtor is headquartered in Dallas, Texas. As of the 7 October 2019 petition date, the Debtor employed approximately 8 76 employees.

9 Pursuant to various contractual arrangements, the Debtor
10 provides money management and advisory services for billions
11 of dollars of assets, including CLOs and other investments.
12 Some of these assets are managed pursuant to shared services
13 agreements with a variety of affiliated entities, including 14 other affiliated registered investment advisors. In fact,
15 there are approximately 2,000 entities in the Byzantine
16 complex of companies under the Highland umbrella.

17 None of these affiliates of Highland filed for Chapter 11
18 protection. Most, but not all, of these entities are not 19 subsidiaries, direct or indirect, of Highland. And certain 20 parties in the case preferred not to use the term "affiliates"
21 when referring to them. Thus, the Court will frequently refer 22 loosely to the so-called, in air quotes, "Highland complex of 23 companies" when referring to the Highland enterprise. That's 24 a term many of the lawyers in the case use.

25 Many of the companies are offshore entities, organized in

1 such faraway jurisdictions as the Cayman Islands and Guernsey.

2 The Debtor is privately owned 99.5 percent by an entity
3 called Hunter Mountain Investment Trust; 0.1866 percent by the 4 Dugaboy Investment Trust, a trust created to manage the assets
5 of Mr. Dondero and his family; 0.0627 percent by Mark Okada,
6 personally and through family trusts; and 0.25 percent by 7 Strand Advisors, Inc., the general partner.

8 The Debtor's primary means of generating revenue has 9 historically been from fees collected for the management and 10 advisory services provided to funds that it manages, plus fees
11 generated for services provided to its affiliates.

12 For additional liquidity, the Debtor, prior to the 13 petition date, would sell liquid securities in the ordinary
14 course, primarily through a brokerage account at Jefferies, 15 LLC. The Debtor would also, from time to time, sell assets at 16 nondebtor subsidiaries and distribute those proceeds to the 17 Debtor in the ordinary course of business.

18 The Debtor's current CEO, James Seery, credibly testified 19 that the Debtor was "run at a deficit for a long time and 20 then would sell assets or defer employee compensation to cover
21 its deficits." This Court cannot help but wonder if that was 22 necessitated because of enormous litigation fees and expenses
23 that Highland was constantly incurring due to its culture of 24 litigation, as further addressed hereafter.

25 Highland and this case are not garden-variety for so many

1 11 case is its postpetition corporate governance structure.
2 Highland filed bankruptcy October 16, 2019. Contentiousness
3 with the Creditors' Committee began immediately, with first
4 the Committee's request for a change of venue from Delaware to 5 Dallas, and then a desire by the Committee and the U.S.
6 Trustee for a Chapter 11 or 7 trustee to be appointed due to 7 concerns over and distrust of Mr. Dondero and his numerous
8 conflicts of interest and alleged mismanagement or worse.

9 After many weeks of the threat of a trustee lingering, the 10 Debtor and the Creditors' Committee negotiated and the Court
11 approved a corporate governance settlement on January 9, 2020
12 that resulted in Mr. Dondero no longer being an officer or 13 director of the Debtor or of its general partner, Strand.

14 As part of the court-approved settlement, three eminently-
15 qualified Independent Directors were chosen by the Creditors'
16 Committee and engaged to lead Highland through its Chapter 11
17 case. They were James Seery, John Dubel, and Retired
18 Bankruptcy Judge Russell Nelms. They were technically the 19 Independent Directors of Strand, the general partner of the 20 Debtor. Mr. Dondero had previously been the sole director of 21 Strand, and thus the sole person in ultimate control of the 22 Debtor.

23 The three independent board members' resumes are in 24 evidence. James Seery eventually was named CEO of the Debtor.
25 Suffice it to say that this changed the entire trajectory of

1 the case. This saved the Debtor from a trustee. The Court
2 trusted the new directors. The Creditors' Committee trusted
3 them. They were the right solution at the right time.

4 Because of the unique character of the Debtor's business,
5 the Court believed this solution was far better than a
6 conventional Chapter 7 or 11 trustee. Mr. Seery, in 7 particular, knew and had vast experience at prominent firms
8 with high-yield and distressed investing similar to the 9 Debtor's business. Mr. Dubel had 40 years of experience
10 restructuring large, complex businesses and serving on their 11 boards of directors in this context. And Retired Judge Nelms
12 had not only vast bankruptcy experience but seemed 13 particularly well-suited to help the Debtor maneuver through 14 conflicts and ethical quandaries.

15 By way of comparison, in the Chapter 11 case of Acis, the 16 former affiliate of Highland that this Court presided over two 17 or three years ago, which company was much smaller in size and 18 scope than Highland, managing only five or six CLOs, a Chapter 19 11 trustee was elected by the creditors that was not on the 20 normal rotation panel for trustees in this district, but 21 rather was a nationally-known bankruptcy attorney with more
22 than 45 years of large Chapter 11 case experience. This 23 Chapter 11 trustee performed valiantly, but was sued by 24 entities in the Highland complex shortly after he was 25 appointed, which this Court had to address. The Acis trustee

1 could not get Highland and its affiliates to agree to any
2 actions taken in the case, and he finally obtained
3 confirmation of a plan over Highland and its affiliates'
4 objections in his fourth attempted plan, which confirmation
5 then was promptly appealed by Highland and its affiliates.

6 Suffice it to say it was not easy to get such highly-
7 qualified persons to serve as independent board members and 8 CEO of this Debtor. They were stepping into a morass of 9 problems. Naturally, they were worried about getting sued, no
10 matter how defensible their efforts might be, given the 11 litigation culture that enveloped Highland historically. It 12 seemed as though everything always ended in litigation at 13 Highland.

14 The Court heard credible testimony that none of them would 15 have taken on the role of Independent Director without a good
16 D&O insurance policy protecting them, without indemnification
17 from Strand, guaranteed by the Debtor; without exculpation for 18 mere negligence claims; and without a gatekeeper provision,
19 such that the Independent Directors could not be sued without 20 the bankruptcy court, as a gatekeeper, giving a potential
21 plaintiff permission to sue.

22 With regard to the gatekeeper provision, this was 23 precisely analogous to what bankruptcy trustees have pursuant 24 to the so-called "Barton Doctrine," which was first
25 articulated in an old U.S. Supreme Court case.

1 The Bankruptcy Court approved all of these protections in
2 a January 9, 2020 order. No one appealed that order. And Mr.
3 Dondero signed the settlement agreement that was approved by 4 that order.

5 An interesting fact about the D&O policy came out in 6 credible testimony at the confirmation hearing. Mr. Dubel and 7 an insurance broker from Aon, named Marc Tauber, both credibly
8 testified that the gatekeeper provision was needed because of 9 the so-called, and I quote, "Dondero Exclusion" in the 10 insurance marketplace.

11 Specifically, the D&O insurers in the marketplace did not 12 want to cover litigation claims that might be brought against 13 the Independent Directors by Mr. Dondero because the 14 marketplace of D&O insurers are aware of Mr. Dondero's
15 litigiousness. The insurers would not have issued a D&O
16 policy to the Independent Directors without either the 17 gatekeeping provision or a "Dondero Exclusion" being in the 18 policy.

19 Thus, the gatekeeper provision was part of the January 9, 20 2020 settlement. There was a sound business justification for 21 it. It was reasonable and necessary. It was consistent with 22 the Barton Doctrine in an extremely analogous situation --
23 i.e., the independent board members were analogous to a three-
24 headed trustee in this case, if you will. Mr. Dondero signed
25 off on it. And, again, no one ever appealed the order

1 approving it.

2 The Court finds that, like the Creditors' Committee, the 3 independent board members here have been resilient and 4 unwavering in their efforts to get the enormous problems in
5 this case solved. They seem to have at all times negotiated
6 hard and with good faith. As noted previously, they changed
7 the entire trajectory of this case.

8 Still another reason why this was not your garden-variety
9 case was the mediation effort. In summer of 2020, roughly 10 nine months into the Chapter 11 case, this Court ordered
11 mediation among the Debtor, Acis, UBS, the Redeemer Committee,
12 and Mr. Dondero. The Court selected co-mediators, since this 13 seemed like such a Herculean task, especially during COVID-19,
14 where people could not all be in the same room. Those co-
15 mediators were Retired Bankruptcy Judge Allan Gropper from the 16 Southern District of New York, who had a distinguished career
17 presiding over complex Chapter 11 cases, and Ms. Sylvia Mayer,
18 who likewise has had a distinguished career, first as a
19 partner in a preeminent law firm working on complex Chapter 11
20 cases, and subsequently as a mediator and arbitrator in 21 Houston, Texas.

22 As noted earlier, the Acis claim was settled during the 23 mediation, which seemed nothing short of a miracle to this 24 Court, and the UBS claim was settled many months later, and 25 this Court believes the groundwork for that ultimate

1 settlement was laid, or at least helped, through the 2 mediation. And as earlier noted, other enormous claims have
3 been settled during this case, including that of the Redeemer
4 Committee, who, again, had asserted approximately or close to 5 a $200 million claim; HarbourVest, who asserted a $300 million
6 claim; and Patrick Daugherty, who asserted close to a $40
7 million claim.

8 This Court cannot stress strongly enough that the 9 resolution of these enormous claims and the acceptance of all
10 of these creditors of the Plan that is now before the Court
11 seems nothing short of a miracle. It was more than a year in 12 the making.

13 Finally, a word about the current remaining Objectors to 14 the Plan before the Court. Once again, the Court will use the 15 phrase "not garden-variety." Originally, there were over one
16 dozen objections filed to this Plan. The Debtor has made
17 various amendments or modifications to the Plan to address
18 some of these objections. The Court finds that none of these 19 modifications require further solicitation, pursuant to 20 Sections 1125, 1126, 1127 of the Code, or Bankruptcy Rule
21 3019, because, among other things, they do not materially
22 adversely change the treatment of the claims of any creditor
23 or interest holder who has not accepted in writing the 24 modifications.

25 Among other things, there were changes to the projections

1 that the Debtor filed shortly before the confirmation hearing
2 that, among other things, show the estimated distribution to 3 creditors and compare plan treatment to a likely disbursement
4 in a Chapter 7.

5 These do not constitute a materially adverse change to the 6 treatment of any creditors or interest holders. They merely 7 update likely distributions based on claims that have now been 8 settled, and they've otherwise incorporated more recent 9 financial data. This happens often before confirmation
10 hearings. The Court finds that it did not mislead or 11 prejudice any creditors or interest holders, and certainly 12 there was no need to resolicit the Plan.

13 The only Objectors to the Plan left at this time were Mr.
14 Dondero and entities that the Court finds are controlled by 15 him. The standing of these entities to object to the Plan
16 exists, but the remoteness of their economic interest is 17 noteworthy, and the Court questions the good faith of the 18 Objectors. In fact, the Court has good reason to believe that 19 these parties are not objecting to protect economic interests
20 they have in the Debtor, but to be disruptors.

21 Mr. Dondero wants his company back. This is 22 understandable. But it's not a good faith basis to lob
23 objections to the Plan. The Court has slowed down
24 confirmation multiple times on the current Plan and urged the 25 parties to talk to Mr. Dondero. The parties represent that

1 they have, and the Court believes that they have.

2 Now, to be specific about the remoteness of the objectors'
3 interests, the Court will address them each separately.
4 First, Mr. Dondero has a pending objection. Mr. Dondero's
5 only economic interest with regard to the Debtor at this point
6 is an unliquidated indemnification claim. And based on 7 everything this Court has heard, his indemnification claim
8 will be highly questionable at this juncture.

9 Second, a joint objection has been filed by the Dugaboy
10 Trust and the Get Good Trust. As for the Dugaboy Trust, it
11 was created to manage the assets of Mr. Dondero and his 12 family, and it owns a 0.1866 percent limited partnership
13 interest in the Debtor. The Court is not clear what economic 14 interest the Get Good Trust has, but it likewise seems to be 15 related to Mr. Dondero, and it has been represented to the 16 Court numerous times that the trustee is Mr. Dondero's college
17 roommate.

18 Another group of Objectors that has joined together in one
19 objection is what the Court will refer to as the Highland and 20 NexPoint Advisors and Funds. The Court understands they 21 assert disputed administrative expense claims against the 22 estate. While the evidence presented was that they have 23 independent board members that run these companies, the Court
24 was not convinced of their independence from Mr. Dondero.
25 None of the so-called independent board members of these

1 entities have ever testified before the Court. Moreover, they
2 have all been engaged with the Highland complex for many 3 years.

4 The witness who testified on these Objectors' behalves at 5 confirmation, Mr. Jason Post, their chief compliance officer,
6 resigned from Highland after more than twelve years in October
7 2020, at the same time that Mr. Dondero resigned or was 8 terminated by Highland. And a prior witness recently for 9 these entities whose testimony was made part of the record at 10 the confirmation hearing essentially testified that Mr.
11 Dondero controlled these entities.

12 Finally, various NexBank entities objected to the Plan.
13 The Court does not believe they have liquidated claims. Mr.
14 Dondero appears to be in control of these entities as well.

15 To be clear, the Court has allowed all of these objectors
16 to fully present arguments and evidence in opposition to 17 confirmation, even though their economic interests in the 18 Debtor appear to be extremely remote and the Court questions
19 their good faith. Specifically on that latter point, the 20 Court considers them all to be marching pursuant to the orders
21 of Mr. Dondero.

22 In the recent past, Mr. Dondero has been subject to a TRO
23 and preliminary injunction by the Bankruptcy Court for 24 interfering with the current CEO's management of the Debtor in 25 specific ways that were supported by evidence. Around the

1 time that this all came to light and the Court began setting
2 hearings on the alleged interference, Mr. Dondero's company
3 phone supplied to him by Highland, which he had been asked to 4 turn in, mysteriously went missing. The Court merely mentions
5 this in this context as one of many reasons that the Court has 6 to question the good faith of Mr. Dondero and his affiliated 7 objectors.

8 The only other pending objection besides these objections
9 of the Dondero and Dondero-controlled entities is an objection
10 of the United States Trustee pertaining to the release,
11 exculpation, and injunction provisions in the Plan.

12 In juxtaposition to these pending objections, the Court
13 notes that the Debtor has resolved earlier-filed objections to 14 the Plan filed by the IRS, Patrick Daugherty, CLO Holdco,
15 Ltd., numerous local taxing authorities, and certain current
16 and former senior-level employees of the Debtor.

17 With that rather detailed factual background addressed,
18 because certainly context matters here, the Court now
19 addresses what it considers the only serious objections raised
20 in connection with confirmation. Specifically, the Plan
21 contain certain releases, exculpation, plan injunctions, and a
22 gatekeeper provision which are obviously not fully consensual,
23 since there are objections. Certainly, these provisions are 24 mostly consensual when you consider that parties with hundreds
25 of millions of dollars' worth of legitimate claims have not

1 Now, after all of that, this Court believes the following
2 can be gleaned from Pacific Lumber. First, the Fifth Circuit
3 hinted that consensual exculpations and/or consensual
4 nondebtor third-party releases are permissible. The Court
5 was, of course, dealing with nonconsensual exculpations in 6 Pacific Lumber. In this regard, I note Page 252, where the 7 Court cited various prior Fifth Circuit authority and then
8 stated, "These cases seem broadly to foreclose nonconsensual
9 nondebtor releases and permanent injunctions."

10 The second thing that can be gleaned from Pacific Lumber:
11 The Fifth Circuit hinted that nondebtor releases may be 12 permissible in cases involving global settlements of mass
13 claims against the debtors and co-liable parties. The Court, 14 of course, referred to 524(g), but various other cases which 15 approved nondebtor releases where mass claims were channeled
16 to a specific pool of assets.

17 Third, the Fifth Circuit outright held that exculpations
18 from negligence for a Creditors' Committee and its members are 19 permissible because the concept is both consistent with 20 1103(c), "which implies Committee members have qualified
21 immunity for actions within the scope of their duties," and a 22 good policy result, since "if members of the Committee can be 23 sued by persons unhappy with the outcome of the case, it will 24 be extremely difficult to find members to serve on an official
25 committee."

1 Fourth, the Fifth Circuit recognized in Pacific Lumber
2 that res judicata may bar complaints regarding an
3 impermissible plan release, citing to its earlier Republic
4 Supply v. Shoaf opinion.

5 Now, being ever-mindful of the Fifth Circuit's words in 6 Pacific Lumber, this Court cannot help but wonder about at 7 least three things.

8 First, did the Fifth Circuit leave open the door that 9 facts/equities might sometimes justify approval of an 10 exculpation for a person other than a Creditors' Committee and 11 its members? For example, the Fifth Circuit stated, in 12 referring to the plan proponents Marathon and MRC, that "Any 13 costs the released parties might incur defending against suits
14 alleging such negligence are unlikely to swamp either of these 15 parties or the consummated reorganization." Here, this Court
16 can easily expect the proposed exculpated parties to incur
17 costs that could swamp them and the reorganization based on 18 the past litigious conduct of Mr. Dondero and his controlled
19 entities. Do these words of the Fifth Circuit hint that 20 equities/economics might sometimes justify an exculpation?

21 Second, did the Fifth Circuit's rationale for permitted
22 exculpations to Creditors' Committee and their members, which 23 was clearly policy-based, based on their implied qualified
24 immunity flowing from their duties in Section 1103 and their 25 disinterestedness, and the importance of their role in a

Chapter 11 case, did this rationale leave open the door to sometimes permitting exculpations to other parties in a particular Chapter 11 case besides Creditors' Committees and their members? For example, in a situation such as the Highland case, in which Independent Directors, brought in to avoid a trustee, are more like a Creditors' Committee than an incumbent board of directors.

Third, the Fifth Circuit's sole statutory basis was Section 524(e). This Court would humbly submit that this is a statute dealing with prepetition liability in which some nondebtor is liable with the Debtor. Exculpation is a concept dealing with postpetition liability.

The Ninth Circuit recently, in a case called Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 961 F.3d 1074 (9th Cir. 2020), approved the validity of an exculpation clause incorporated into a confirmed Chapter 11 plan that purported to absolve certain nondebtor parties that were "closely involved" in drafting the plan. They were the largest secured creditor, a purchaser, and an individual who was an indirect owner of certain of the debtor companies. The exculpation was from any negligence, liability, for "any act or omission in connection with, related to, or arising out of the Chapter 11 cases."

By the time the appeal was before the Ninth Circuit, the only issue was the propriety of the exculpation clause as to the large secured creditor, which was also a plan proponent,

1 since all the other exculpated parties had settled with the 2 appellant.

3 The Court, in determining that the exculpation clause was
4 permissible as to the secured lender, concluded that Section
5 524(e) "does not bar a narrow exculpation clause of the kind
6 here at issue -- that is, one focused on actions of various 7 participants in the plan approval process and relating only to 8 that process," Page 1082. Why? Because "Section 524(e)
9 establishes that discharge of a debt of the debtor does not 10 affect the liability of any other entity on such debt." In 11 other words, the discharge in no way affects the liability of 12 any other entity for the discharged debt. By its terms,
13 524(e) prevents a bankruptcy court from extinguishing claims
14 of creditors against nondebtors over the very discharged debt
15 through the bankruptcy proceedings.

16 The Court went on to explicitly disagree with Pacific
17 Lumber in its analysis of 524(e), reiterating that an 18 exculpation clause covers only liabilities arising from the 19 bankruptcy proceedings and not of any of the debtor's
20 discharged debt. Footnote 7, Page 1085.

21 Ultimately, the Court held that under Section 105(a),
22 which empowers a bankruptcy court to issue any order, process,
23 or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the 24 provisions of Chapter 11 and Section 1123, which establishes 25 the appropriate content of the bankruptcy plan, under these

1 sections, the bankruptcy court had authority to approve an
2 exculpation clause intended to trim subsequent litigation over
3 acts taken during the bankruptcy proceedings and so render the 4 plan viable.

5 This Court concludes that, just as the Fifth Circuit left
6 open the door for consensual exculpations and releases in 7 Pacific Lumber, just as it left open the door for consensual
8 exculpations and releases in Pacific Lumber, its dicta
9 suggests that an exculpation might be permissible if there is 10 a showing that "costs that the released parties might incur
11 defending against suits alleging such negligence are likely to 12 swamp either the Exculpated Parties or the reorganization."
13 Again, that was a quote from the Fifth Circuit.

14 If ever there were a risk of that happening in a Chapter
15 11 reorganization, it is this one. The Debtor's current CEO
16 credibly testified that Mr. Dondero has said outside the 17 courtroom that if Mr. Dondero's own pot plan does not get 18 approved, that he will "burn the place down." Here, this 19 Court can easily expect the proposed exculpated parties might 20 expect to incur costs that could swamp them and the 21 reorganization process based on the past litigious conduct of 22 Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities.

23 Additionally, this Court concludes that the Fifth
24 Circuit's rationale in Pacific Lumber for permitted
25 exculpations to Creditors' Committees and their members, which

1 was clearly policy-based based on their implied qualified
2 immunity flowing from Section 1103 and their importance in a
3 Chapter 11 case, leaves the door open to sometimes permitting
4 exculpations to other parties in a particular Chapter 11 case
5 besides a UCC and its members.

6 Again, if there was ever such a case, the Court believes
7 it is this one, in which Independent Directors were brought in 8 to avoid a trustee and are much more like a Creditors'
9 Committee than an incumbent board of directors. While,
10 admittedly, there are a few exculpated parties here proposed
11 beyond the independent board, such as certain employees, it
12 would appear that no one is invulnerable to a lawsuit here if 13 past is prologue in this Highland saga.

14 The Creditors' Committee was initially not keen on 15 exculpations for certain employees. However, Mr. Seery
16 credibly testified that there was a contentious arm's-length
17 negotiation over this and that he needs these employees to 18 preserve value implementing the Plan. Mr. Dondero has shown 19 no hesitancy to litigate with former employees in the past, to 20 the nth degree, and there is every reason to believe he would 21 again in the future, if able.

22 Finally, in this situation, in the case at bar, we would
23 appear to have a Shoaf reason to approve the exculpations.
24 The January 9, 2020 order of this Court, Docket Entry 339,
25 which approved the independent board and an ongoing corporate

1 appropriate. They are entirely consistent with and
2 permissible under Bankruptcy Code Sections 1123(a) (5),
3 1123(a) (6), 1141(a) and (c), and 1142, as well as Bankruptcy
4 Rule 3016(c), which articulates the form that a plan
5 injunction must be set forth in a plan.

6 The Court finds the objections to the Plan Injunctions to 7 be unfounded, and they are thus overruled without much
8 discussion here.

9 Now, lastly, the Gatekeeper Provision. It appears at 10 Paragraph 4 of Article IX.F of the Plan and provides, in 11 pertinent part, "Subject in all respects to Article XII.D, no
12 Enjoined Party may commence or pursue a claim or cause of 13 action of any kind against any Protected Party that arose or 14 arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 case, the 15 negotiation of the Plan, the administration of the Plan, or 16 property to be distributed under the Plan, the wind-down of 17 the business of the Debtor or Reorganized Debtor, the 18 administration of the Claimant Trust or the Litigation Sub-
19 Trust, or the transactions in furtherance of the foregoing,
20 without the Bankruptcy Court (1) first determining, after 21 notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action
22 represents a colorable claim of any kind, including but not 23 limited to negligence, bad faith, criminal misconduct and 24 willful misconduct, fraud, or gross negligence against a 25 Protected Party; and (2) specifically authorizing such

1 Enjoined Party to bring such claim or cause of action against
2 such Protected Party, provided, however, that the foregoing
3 will not apply to a claim or cause of action against Strand or 4 against any employee other than with respect to actions taken,
5 respectively, by Strand or any such employee from the date of 6 appointment of the Independent Directors through the effective
7 date. The Bankruptcy Court will have sole and exclusive
8 jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or cause of action
9 is colorable and, only to the extent legally permissible and 10 as provided for in Article XI, shall have jurisdiction to 11 adjudicate the underlying colorable claim or cause of action."

12 This gatekeeper provision appears necessary and reasonable
13 in light of the litigiousness of Mr. Dondero and his 14 controlled entities that has been described at length herein.
15 Provisions similar to this have been approved in this district
16 in the Pilgrim's Pride case and the CHC Helicopter case. The 17 provision is within the spirit of the Supreme Court's Barton
18 Doctrine. And it appears consistent with the notion of a pre-19 filing injunction to deter vexatious litigants that has been 20 approved by the Fifth Circuit in such cases as Baum v. Blue
21 Moon Ventures, 513 F.3d 181, and in the In re Carroll case,
22 850 F.3d 811, which arose out of a bankruptcy pre-filing
23 injunction.

24 The Fifth Circuit, in fact, noted in the Carroll case that 25 federal courts have authority to enjoin vexatious litigants

1 under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651. And additionally,
2 under the Bankruptcy Code, a bankruptcy court can issue any
3 order, including a civil contempt order, necessary or 4 appropriate to carry out the provisions of the Code, citing,
5 of course, 105 of the Bankruptcy Code.

6 The Fifth Circuit stated that, when considering whether to 7 enjoin future filings against a vexatious litigant, a
8 bankruptcy court must consider the circumstances of the case,
9 including four factors: (1) the party's history of 10 litigation; in particular, whether he has filed vexatious,
11 harassing, or duplicative lawsuits; (2) whether the party had 12 a good faith basis for pursuing the litigation, or perhaps 13 intended to harass; (3) the extent of the burden on the courts
14 and other parties resulting from the party's filings; and (4)
15 the adequacy of alternatives.

16 In the Baum case, the Fifth Circuit stated that the 17 traditional standards for injunctive relief -- i.e.,
18 irreparable harm and inadequate remedy at law -- do not apply
19 to the issuance of an injunction against a vexatious litigant.

20 Here, although I have not been asked to declare Mr.
21 Dondero and his affiliated entities as vexatious litigants per
22 se, it is certainly not beyond the pale to find that his long 23 history with regard to the major creditors in this case has 24 strayed into that possible realm, and thus this Court is 25 justified in approving this provision.

1       One of the Objectors' lawyers stated very eloquently in 2 closing argument, in opposing the plan injunction and
3 gatekeeping provisions, that "Even a serial killer has 4 constitutional rights," suggesting that these provisions would 5 deprive Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities of fundamental 6 rights or due process somehow. But to paraphrase the district
7 court in the Carroll case, no one, rich or poor, is entitled
8 to abuse the judicial process. There exists no constitutional 9 right of access to the courts to prosecute actions that are 10 frivolous or malicious. The Plan injunction and gatekeeper
11 provisions in Highland's plan simply set forth a way for this 12 Court to use its tools, its inherent powers, to avoid abuse of 13 the court system, protect the implementation of the Plan, and 14 preempt the use of judicial time that properly could be used
15 to consider the meritorious claims of other litigants.

16       Accordingly, the Objectors' objections to this provision
17 are overruled.

18       As earlier stated, this Court reserves the right to alter
19 or supplement this ruling in a written order. In this regard,
20 the Court directs Debtor's counsel -- I hope you are still 21 awake; it's been a long time -- the Court directs Debtor's
22 counsel to submit a form of order. And specifically, I assume 23 that you've already prepared or have been in the process of 24 preparing a set of findings of fact, conclusions of law, and 25 confirmation order that tracks the confirmation evidence and

50

1 to win, I turned it off.

2 I'm sorry. That's terrible. You know, my law clerk, my
3 law clerk that you can't see, Nate, he is from Ann Arbor,
4 Michigan, University of Michigan, and he almost cried when I
5 said I didn't like Tom Brady the other day. So, I apologize.

6 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, one other comment. We
7 had our motion to assume our nonresidential real property
8 lease that was also on. It got missed in all the fanfare, but 9 it was -- it has been unopposed and essentially done pursuant 10 to stipulation. So we'd like to submit an order on that as 11 well.

12 THE COURT: Okay. I have seen that, and I approve it
13 under 365. You may submit the order. Okay. Thank you.

14 MR. POMERANTZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

15 THE CLERK: All rise.

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
BEFORE THE HONORABLE STACEY G.C. JERNIGAN,
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE.

WEBEX/TELEPHONIC APPEARANCES:

For the Debtor/Plaintiff: Jeffrey N. Pomerantz
PACHULSKI STANG ZIEHL & JONES, LLP

13th Floor
Los Angeles, CA 90067-4003

1 really was just a termination of the agreement, in accordance
2 with the terms. And I had put the provisions up before the 3 Court during my opening and walked Mr. Seery through. That's 4 the basis for the --

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. MORRIS: -- termination of the agreement. It's 7 not rejection at all.

8 THE COURT: Fair point.

9 MR. RUKAVINA: And Your Honor, there's no -- there's 10 no -- yeah, there's no problem. There's no problem on that.
11 We do not disagree. We do not disagree with Mr. Morris.

12 THE COURT: Fair point. I made the mistake of belts
13 and suspenders, trying to fill in any hole there might be.
14 But yes, I had the evidence that there was a termination of 15 both agreements on November 30th. One of them had a 60-day
16 window before it became effective, the other a 30-day. So
17 they are terminated.

18 All right. Mr. Morris, anything else from you?

19 MR. MORRIS: No. We'll prepare a form of order.

20 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Rukavina, anything
21 further from you?

22 MR. RUKAVINA: Your Honor, obviously, I have 23 questions. I have reservations. I need to look at whether 24 the Court's findings are going to be binding in this adversary
25 proceeding. So, at this point in time, I'm just not prepared

232

1 to really say anything lest I get myself in trouble. But I
2 thank you for your time today.

3 THE COURT: All right. Well, they are what they are,
4 and I hope we're not in an argument about that down the road.
5 But it seems like my hopes are always dashed when I want
6 things to be worked out.

7 I don't want you to think my calm demeanor means I am a
8 happy camper. I am not. I am beyond annoyed. I mean, I
9 can't even begin to guesstimate how many wasted hours were 10 spent on the drafting Option A, Option B. Wait. Let me pull
11 up the exact words. Mr. Norris confirming, We withdrew Option
12 B after the Debtor accepted it.

13 I mentioned fee-shifting once before in a different
14 context, and, of course, we haven't even gotten to the motion
15 for a show cause order declaring Mr. Dondero in contempt. I
16 don't know if the lawyers fully appreciate how this looks.
17 Mr. Rukavina, you said that I have formed opinions that you
18 don't think are fair and made comments about vexatious
19 litigation and whatnot. But while I continue, I promise you,
20 to have an open mind, it is days like this that make me come
21 out with statements that Mr. Dondero, repeating his own words,
22 apparently, he's going to burn the house down if he doesn't
23 get his baby back.

24 I mean, it seems so obviously transparent that he's just 25 driving the legal fees up. It's as though he doesn't want the 233

1 creditors to get anything, is the way this looks. If he wants
2 me to have a different impression, then he needs to start
3 behaving differently. I mean, I can't even imagine how many 4 hundreds of thousands of dollars of legal fees were probably 5 spent the past two weeks on Option A, Option B, and all the 6 different sub-agreements and whatnot. And as recently as 7 Friday afternoon, the K&L Gates lawyer saying we have a deal,
8 and then, oh, wait, maybe not, maybe we do, maybe we don't.
9 And then Mr. Dondero acting like he had no clue what the K&L
10 Gates lawyers were saying as far as we have a deal. And Mr.
11 Norris distancing himself from having seen any of that, and I
12 didn't have power. You know, I'm sure he had a cell phone,
13 like the rest of us, that gets emails. I'm making a 14 supposition. I shouldn't make that. But it just feels like 15 sickening games.

16 And again, if this keeps on, if this keeps on, one day,
17 one day, there may be an enormous attorney fee-shifting order.
18 And, of course, I would have to find bad faith, and I wouldn't 19 be surprised at all if I get there.

20 So I don't know if Mr. Dondero is listening. I suspect,
21 if he is, he doesn't care much. But I am --

22 MR. DONDERO: I'm on the line, Judge.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. DONDERO: I'm on the line.

25 THE COURT: I'm glad you're on the line. I cannot

234

1   overstate how very annoyed I am by hearing all these hours of
2   testimony and to feel like none of it was necessary. None of 3   it was necessary. Okay? There could have been a consensual
4   deal --

5               MR. DONDERO: Judge, you have to pay attention --
6   Judge, you have to pay attention to what's going on, okay?

7               THE COURT: I am --

8               MR. DONDERO: When I was president of Highland, --

9               THE COURT: -- razor-sharp focused on what is going 10   on. Okay? I read every piece of paper. I listen to every 11   sentence of testimony. And what is going on --

12              MR. DONDERO: Okay. How about this, Your Honor?

13              THE COURT: -- is an enormous waste of parties and 14   lawyer time and resources. People need to get their eye on 15   the ball. Well, certain people do have their eye on the ball, 16   but certain people do not. Okay? So we're done. You've got 17   your divorce now. Okay? And if the operating plan is all 18   shored up, as Mr. Norris testified, it sounds like you're in 19   good shape. All right?

20              Mr. Morris, I'll look for the order from you.

21              MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

22              THE CLERK: All rise.

23              (Pause.)

24              THE COURT: Oh, Michael?

25              (Court confers with Clerk.)

235

1 THE CLERK: Hello? Hang on. Mr. Morris?

2 THE COURT: Is anyone still there?

3 THE CLERK: Mr. Rukavina is still there. Mr.

4 Rukavina, Mr. Morris, are you all still there?

5 MR. RUKAVINA: Judge, this is Davor.

6 THE COURT: All right.

7 MR. RUKAVINA: I think we're all wondering whether 8 we're going to have the contempt hearing.

9 THE COURT: Well, yes, that's why I came back in.

10 MR. RUKAVINA: I can't hear you, Judge. We can't 11 hear you.

12 THE COURT: I realized I -- it's 4:19 Central time.
13 We are not starting the contempt hearing.

14 Mr. Morris, are you there now?

15 MR. MORRIS: I am. I did have one suggestion.

16 THE COURT: All right. I neglected to mention our 17 other setting, but we are not going to start at 4:19 Central 18 time. Do we want to talk about scheduling on that?

19 MR. MORRIS: I did, Your Honor. And it's just an 20 idea, and I understand we've had a long day. But I was going 21 to suggest if there was any way to just get their motion in 22 limine out of the way today, so that when we come back for the 23 evidentiary hearing parties are fully prepared. If you don't 24 want to do it, that's fine. Otherwise, I'm available at Your 25 Honor's convenience.

5 THE COURT: Okay. Unfortunately, you have

22 THE COURT: Okay. We're going to have to -- we're 23 going to have to cut this --

24 MR. WILSON: I'm going to try to log off and log on.

25 THE COURT: No. I'm ready to be finished with this

1 hearing. You need to go back and look at this, because I am
2 leaning towards what Mr. Morris is arguing, and that is that 3 this is really bad faith. Okay? There is no change of 4 issues. It's been the same issue at the TRO hearing, at the 5 preliminary injunction hearing. Okay. The motion for 6 contempt, we were looking backwards a little at behavior. But 7 the issues are not expanded. Okay? It's just duration of the 8 injunction. And now a slightly skinnied-down injunction.

9 So, of course, I am willing to consider evidence I've 10 heard at the TRO hearing and the preliminary injunction
11 hearing. And I would note that on many, many, many of these 12 exhibits, you didn't object. Or if you did, you argued it and 13 I overruled it.

14 So you need to go back and look at this and think hard
15 whether you're really going to press these issues at the 16 trial. Okay? This is -- again, Dondi, we require counsel to 17 work in good faith to streamline trials and work with people.
18 If you can agree, if you can stipulate to evidence, that's 19 what you need to do. And this looks like -- I don't know what 20 it looks like. But if this is any guidance to you, it should 21 be, if I admitted it at the TRO hearing, if I admitted it at 22 the preliminary injunction hearing, it's fair game to consider 23 it now.

24 Here's the last thing I want to say, and this is very big-
25 picture, not unique to this adversary proceeding.

1 Can everyone hear me okay? I don't know if we're having
2 connectivity issues. Can everyone hear me?

3 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Can you hear me, Mr. Wilson?

5 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

6 MR. WILSON: Yes, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay. I have been pondering something
8 the past few days. And I haven't figured out how I want to 9 address it, but maybe Mr. Dondero's counsel and counsel from 10 some of the Dondero-controlled entities, maybe they can listen
11 to what I'm about to say and figure out a solution.

12 As you all know, there are so many law firms, so many 13 lawyers involved now that are basically singing the same tune
14 at a lot of these hearings as far as objections, me too, me
15 too, me too. And so just quickly eyeballing what we have, we 16 obviously have Mr. Dondero represented by Bonds Ellis. There
17 is another firm that represents Mr. Dondero that filed a
18 motion asking that I recuse myself. I can't remember the name
19 of that firm, but I think they appealed my denial of that 20 motion. So, I can't remember who that was. Then we have the 21 various affiliates. We have -- well, I'll just start
22 chronologically. Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. has historically 23 been represented by King & Spalding. I don't know if that's 24 -- I know there were some changes there with the ownership of 25 that entity, so maybe they're gone. But then we have NexPoint

54

1 Can we just have an hoc committee each time?

2 I don't even think I listed all the law firms. I know a
3 new law firm filed a lawsuit in front of Judge Jane Boyle
4 recently. We've got a hearing on that coming up in June. I
5 mean, and now you're -- I'm hearing there are going to be 6 more. Well, if you don't figure out a way to rein it in, then 7 I'm just going to have to get that list of who are the 8 stakeholders in these entities, under oath, because I don't 9 understand it. I don't understand why we need these many 10 lawyers filing position papers.

11 So, all right. Well, we're going to adjourn, and I guess
12 I'll see you next Monday, right?

13 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor. Yes.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

15 THE CLERK: All rise.

19

1 We – it was more just a coordination thing. We intend that he
2 will be at all hearings before, Your Honor, you know, Friday's
3 hearing and substantive hearings. I just – I think this is more
4 of a coordination issue, Your Honor, and I apologize.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. ASSINK: There has been a lot going on.

7 THE COURT: Oh, don't I know. There's two of us, me
8 and my Law Clerk working on this, and there are a bunch of 9 y'all. So, yes, I feel – I feel absolutely what you feel and 10 more as far as a lot going on.

11 So let me clarify. My language that ordered Mr.
12 Dondero to be at every hearing was in the preliminary injunction
13 that's now superseded by the agreed order y'all announced
14 Tuesday. So are you telling me you thought now that mandate
15 didn't apply? Is that one of the things –

16 MR. ASSINK: Not – not specifically, Your Honor, –

17 THE COURT: – I'm hearing?

18 MR. ASSINK: Not specifically, Your Honor. We thought
19 perhaps the formal mandate in the order was no longer applying,
20 but our understanding was you would want Mr. Dondero at 21 substantive hearings going forward, and that has been our 22 understanding. And we would expect him to be before Your Honor
23 at all such hearings. Part of the basis, the reasoning he's not 24 here today was perhaps as an oversight on my part due to the 25 scheduling, and I had a lot of deadlines yesterday and I think

Adversary 21-3003, Motion to Compel Discovery

20

1 it just maybe fell through the cracks, and I apologize, Your
2 Honor.

3 THE COURT: All right.

4 MR. ASSINK: You know, we — Your Honor, —

5 THE COURT: Well, I'm going to say a couple of things.
6 You know this could have been raised Tuesday, when we were here
7 on the adversary proceeding, in which the preliminary injunction
8 was issued, okay, it would have been — it would have been wise,
9 it would have been very wise to raise the issue.

10 Second, it screams irony, if nothing else, that at a
11 time when I have under advisement a motion to hold Mr. Dondero
12 in contempt of Court that there would be a trip-up, the 13 second-recent trip-up, by the way, where he didn't appear at a
14 hearing. There was a time a few weeks ago, two or three weeks
15 ago, can't remember what hearing it was then, but he wasn't 16 here.

17 Okay. The —

18 MR. ASSINK: Well, Your Honor, I just want to say —

19 THE COURT: — the third thing I'm going to say — the 20 third thing I'm going to say is I guess I'll issue an order in 21 the main case now, you know, a one- or two-sentence order in the 22 main case saying repeating the sentence that was in the 23 preliminary injunction, that he's going to show up at every 24 hearing. I never said only at substantive hearings. The only 25 thing I hesitated on at all, because I've done this in other

Adversary 21-3003, Motion to Compel Discovery

21

1 cases, is sometimes I'll say any hearing at which, you know, the
2 person is taking a position, okay, an opposition, an objection,
3 you know, even if you file a pleading taking a neutral stand, if 4 he's going to file a pleading that requires the Court and all
5 the lawyers' attention to some extent, he's going to need to be 6 in court. So that's something I thought about doing, but then I
7 was reminded, that I said, no, he's just going to be at all
8 hearings in the future.

9 And procedural, substantive, I never made that 10 distinction and I never would because – because it's taking up
11 time, it's taking up time of the Court, lawyers, parties. And 12 if he is going to use the offices of this Court or, you know,
13 take up the time of any lawyers, then he needs to be a part of 14 it, okay?

15 MR. ASSINK: Your Honor, yes, I –

16 THE COURT: So I thought I made that very clear the 17 last time he didn't show up, but I think –

18 MR. ASSINK: Your Honor, I apologize. You know that's 19 certainly not our intention here. We've been rushing around. I
20 think this is more – this is more on – on me and just the fast
21 pace with everything. We would intend that he would be here at 22 all hearings. We're not trying to make any exception. We're 23 not trying to say that the preliminary injunction got rid of his 24 obligation to be before, Your Honor. You know, we weren't clear
25 exactly what the directive was for these kinds of hearings, or

Adversary 21-3003, Motion to Compel Discovery

22

1 at least perhaps I wasn't fully, and – but, nevertheless, Your
2 Honor, we would – we would have had him be here. I think the 3 fast pace with the hearing settings and just everything going
4 on, it might have slipped through the cracks. It's not – there
5 was no ill will with him not being here, Your Honor. I
6 apologize. It's just an oversight on our part. We would
7 anticipate that he will be here for all future hearings. You
8 know it's no disrespect to the Court. It was not an intentional
9 thing. We apologize, Your Honor. So I understand the Court's 10 comments. It's – but I just want to make clear it's we're not 11 trying to be cute, we're not trying to say that, oh, the 12 preliminary injunction is gone, he doesn't have to be here.
13 That's not our intention, Your Honor. It was I think just an 14 oversight and a scheduling issue this time, but Mr. Dondero will 15 of course appear before Your Honor in all matters going forward,
16 so I apologize.

17 THE COURT: All right. Well, again, you're 18 scheduling. You sought the scheduling, you sought the emergency
19 hearing, and this is the second time we've had this discussion
20 in less than a month.

21 All right. So, Mr. Morris, back to you. I think –

22 MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

23 THE COURT: – you were about to answer the question of 24 if Mr. Seery is going to be produced and talk about 13 different 25 topics, why is it a big deal to talk about these other seven

The Court's Ruling on the Motion to Compel

33

1 that condition subsequent was, it was the liquidation of certain
2 assets. Since the liquidation of those assets has not been
3 completed, by definition, no other maker could have had a note
4 or an oral agreement or an agreement of any kind of the type
5 that Mr. Dondero has. So yet another reason why it fails to 6 meet the burden, they fail to meet the burden under Rule 26.
7 Nobody could have ever had the same note forgiven or agreement,
8 because the condition subsequent hasn't been met yet.

THE COURT'S RULING ON THE MOTION TO COMPEL

10 THE COURT: All right. Well, I'm going to deny the 11 motion to compel. I don't think that the burden has been met to 12 establish the relevance of these, I guess it's — one, two,
13 three, four, five — six topics that are now at issue, topics 9, 14 14 through 17, or 20, and, you know, I don't think the 15 proportionality standard is met here.

16 I do think it would be not proportionate to the needs
17 of the case for the CEO, who came in place in 2020,
18 postpetition, two years after these notes were executed, to have 19 to go do research about any loans made by Highland to any 20 officers and employees over the years and, you know, I don't 21 know who he's going to question, what policy he is going to look
22 into that might be some substance or evidence as to oral
23 agreements or forgiveness. I don't think he should have any 24 obligation to search files and interview people to figure out
25 what the affirmative defenses and Mr. Dondero are all about or

The Court's Ruling on the Motion to Compel

34

1 based in. And, again, no one would have better information
2 about his own compensation than Mr. Dondero himself.

3 I mean I want to stress that this comes against a
4 backdrop of – well, it seems like some antagonism, to say the 5 least, on the part of Mr. Dondero where Mr. Seery's concerned.
6 It seems like it's always a fight with Mr. Seery. And you say,
7 well, we didn't handpick him as the 30(b)(6) witness, but, you
8 know, the motion to compel names him by name. It just – it
9 feels like another antagonistic move.

10 You've got him for a deposition next Monday on 13 or 11 so different topics. I think it is appropriate to draw the line
12 on these six or so topics that again just don't seem relevant or 13 proportional to the needs of the case.

14 All right. So, Mr. Morris, would you please upload
15 just a simple order reflecting the Court's ruling?

16 MR. MORRIS: I would be happy to, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Actually I'm going to ask Mr. Aigen
18 to do it. I'm sorry. I need to be thinking about attorney's 19 fees and who should bear the costs of what.

20 So, Mr. Aigen, would you please electronically submit 21 an order?

22 MR. AIGEN: Yes.

23 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

24 All right. Well, if there's nothing else on this 25 particular adversary, let me just double check. Any

1 housekeeping matters before I move onto the other adversary?

2 MR. AIGEN: Not from the debtor, Your Honor.

3 MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, —

4 THE COURT: All right.

5 MR. CLUBOK: I don't know if you're about to move on.

6 Your Honor, can you hear me?

7 THE COURT: I'm sorry, Mr. Clubok?

8 MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, —

9 THE COURT: Were you weighing in on —

10 MR. CLUBOK: Yeah, I'm — I'm sorry. It's not about 11 that proceeding, but are you about to move on beyond — beyond
12 the Highland matters?

13 THE COURT: No, no, no.

14 MR. CLUBOK: There was another Highland matter —

15 THE COURT: I was next — I was next going to go to the 16 other adversary, the dispute between the committee and seven or 17 so defendants. And, yes, I know we have UBS I guess all day
18 tomorrow unless anything has changed. So we'll — we'll hear
19 before we're done any previews about tomorrow.

20 All right, so moving on —

21 MR. CLUBOK: Thank you.

22 THE COURT: — the Committee versus CLO Holdco,
23 20-3195. We have a committee motion to basically stay the 24 adversary proceeding for 90 days. So I will get lawyer
25 appearances on that.

1 the Committee maintaining a two-person membership at this
2 point.

3 In terms of whether the MGM transaction is a game-changer,
4 we've not yet seen, to Your Honor's point, how all of that 5 rolls up through the various interests that the Debtor may or 6 -- you know, may have --

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. CLEMENTE: -- that would be implicated by the MGM
9 transaction. If ultimately the MGM transaction has to 10 actually occur, right? I mean, so, you know, just based on 11 what I read in the public documents, we're not sure when that 12 transaction may actually happen. But obviously it's a good
13 thing for the Debtor's estate because it's going to recognize 14 value for the estate.

15 In terms of whether it ultimately changes how Mr. Dondero, 16 you know, wishes to proceed, that's entirely up to him, Your 17 Honor. But we don't see it as something at this point that 18 would suggest that there's an overall back to let's talk about 19 a pot plan because of where the MGM transaction might 20 ultimately come out.

21 So I don't know if that's helpful to Your Honor, but those 22 are -- that's my perspective.

23 THE COURT: Well, and I'm not trying to, you know,
24 push a pot plan on anyone.

25 MR. CLEMENTE: No, I understand.

294

1 THE COURT: I'm just saying it looked like an
2 economic windfall. I just -- I don't know how much is 3 Highland versus other entities in the so-called byzantine
4 complex, but, gosh, I just hoped that there might be something
5 there to change the dynamic of, you know, lawsuit, lawsuit,
6 lawsuit, lawsuit, motion for contempt, motion for contempt.

7 MR. CLEMENTE: Agreed, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

9 MR. CLEMENTE: And like I said, it was a very 10 positive development obviously for the creditors for the 11 Debtor. But whether it's the game-changer that Your Honor
12 would envision, I'm not sure that I can suggest at this point
13 that it is.

14 I think that, you know, obviously, we don't like to see 15 these lawsuits continue to be filed. That's the whole point
16 of the gatekeeper order, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

18 MR. CLEMENTE: I didn't say anything during the 19 hearing, but obviously the January 9th order, as Your Honor
20 has said many times, was in the context of a trustee being 21 appointed.

22 THE COURT: Right. Right.

23 MR. CLEMENTE: Right? So, and the July 16th order, 24 very similar vein, it's an outshoot of that. In fact, it was 25 contemplated in the January 9th settlement that a CEO could be

295

1 appointed.

2 So I think, again, it's just -- it's important, the 3 context in which that January 9th order came into play, for 4 this very reason, so we could avoid this type of litigation,
5 Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

7 MR. CLEMENTE: And so again, I didn't -- I obviously
8 didn't rise to mention that during the hearing, but Your Honor
9 is already aware of that. I didn't need to remind Your Honor
10 of that.

11 THE COURT: Uh-huh. Okay.

12 MR. CLEMENTE: Anything else for me, Your Honor?

13 THE COURT: No. Thank you.

14 MR. CLEMENTE: Okay, then, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Sorry I picked on you. But, all right.
16 Well, again, I hope the message has landed in the way I hope
17 will matter, and that is I'm going to look at your documents
18 but I feel very strongly that, unless there's something in 19 there that, whoa, is somehow eye-opening, I'm going to find 20 contempt of court. It's just a matter of who and what the 21 damages are. There's just not a thing in the world ambiguous
22 about Paragraph 5 of the July 9th, 2020 order. So I'll get to 23 it as soon as we humanly can get to it.

24 Mr. Morris, anything else?

25 MR. MORRIS: Nothing. No, thank you.

296

1 THE COURT: I guess I'll see you Thursday on the

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
BEFORE THE HONORABLE STACEY G.C. JERNIGAN,
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE.

1 MS. DRAWHORN: Uh-huh. Yes. And I understand that,
2 Your Honor. And the issue, I think, with you -- we need to 3 have this motion resolved, because it -- unless the Court is 4 going to continue discovery or stay. You know, one of the 5 reasons why we had initially requested the expedited hearing
6 was because of the discovery is continued -- continuing to --
7 discovery deadlines are continuing to move. And obviously 8 whatever the Court decides on this motion for leave to amend
9 will determine what the scope of that discovery is.

10 Similarly, if the Debtor decides to amend, that could
11 change the scope of discovery as well.

12 So we are open to continuing deadlines, and I think, you
13 know, might end up filing a motion to continue. I haven't 14 conferred with Mr. Morris yet. I suspect he's opposed, based 15 on our prior conversations. But that's something that might 16 be helpful, especially if the Court is concerned on how it
17 will affect the motion to withdraw the reference, to -- maybe 18 we continue some of these upcoming deadlines, and that might 19 appease, you know, solve some of your concerns.

20 THE COURT: All right. Well, Rule 15(a), of course,
21 is the governing rule here, and the case law is abundant that 22 courts "should freely give leave when justice so requires."
23 And the law is also abundantly clear that the rule "evinces a 24 bias in favor of granting leave to amend." And again and 25 again, cases say that leave should be granted unless there's

1 substantial reason to deny leave, and courts may consider
2 factors such as delay or prejudice to the non-movant, bad
3 faith or dilatory motives on the part of the movant, repeated
4 failure to cure deficiencies, or futility of the amendment.

5 While the Debtor has presented arguments that there might 6 be bad faith here on the part of the Movants and there might 7 be futility in allowing the amendments because of various 8 strong arguments and defenses the Debtor believes it has to 9 this issue of agreements with regard to the notes that 10 allegedly provide affirmative defenses, the Court believes the 11 rule requires me to allow leave to amend the answer.

12 Now, a couple of things. I am going to require, though,
13 that the amended answer be more specific than has been
14 suggested. I am going to agree that if new affirmative
15 defenses are made that there was this agreement to forgive
16 when certain conditions happened, then there does need to be 17 identification of who the human beings were that were involved
18 in making the agreement, the date of any agreement or 19 agreements, and disclose what documents substantiate the 20 agreement or reflect the agreement. All right? So if that 21 could --

22 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor?

23 THE COURT: Yes?

24 MR. MORRIS: John Morris. I apologize for 25 interrupting, but just a fourth thing is what is the 88

1 agreement? I mean, what is the agreement?

2 THE COURT: Well, okay. That's fair enough. What is
3 the agreement? I guess --

4 MR. MORRIS: And -- and --

5 THE COURT: -- that needs to be spelled out. I mean,
6 I guess I was assuming that that would be spelled out in --
7 but maybe it's not. So we'll go ahead and add that.

8 As far as extension of the discovery, Ms. Drawhorn has 9 offered that. I think it would be reasonable if the Debtor or 10 Plaintiff wants that. Do you want an extension of discovery?

11 MR. MORRIS: What I really want, Your Honor, is a 12 direction for them to serve this amended answer within 24 or 13 48 hours and grant leave to the Debtor to promptly file
14 written discovery. We've got Nancy Dondero -- if it turns out
15 -- and maybe Ms. Drawhorn can just answer the question right
16 now. Who entered the agreement on behalf of the Debtor?
17 Because I'm already taking Nancy Dondero's deposition on the 18 28th. And it seems to me, if they would just answer the 19 question of whether Ms. Dondero is the person who did that, I
20 could just add a notice of deposition and take the deposition
21 on that date, too, and it would be, really, more efficient for 22 everybody.

23 THE COURT: Ms. Drawhorn, who was the human being?

24 MS. DRAWHORN: Yes. It was -- yes, Nancy Dondero
25 entered into the -- the subsequent agreement.

90

1 THE COURT: Please upload an order, Ms. Drawhorn,
2 granting your motion with these specific requirements that
3 I've orally worked in.

4 I think clients need to be careful what they ask for. I'm
5 very concerned. And I know it was just argument and I'll hear
6 evidence, but of all of the things that I guess -- well, I'm
7 concerned about a lot of things, but do we have audited
8 financial statements that didn't disclose these agreements
9 with regard to --

10 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: I mean, that's -- I'm just -- you know,
12 there's a lot to be concerned about on that point alone, I
13 would think. But, all right. If there's nothing further, we 14 are adjourned. Thank you.

15 THE CLERK: All rise.

1 any exceptional circumstances to declare the order or any of
2 its provisions void. The Movants have put on no evidence that
3 constitutes surprise or constitutes newly-disputed evidence.
4 So why are there no exceptional circumstances here such that
5 the Court might find, you know, a void order or void
6 provisions of an order?

7 First, this Court concludes that there's no credible
8 argument that the Court overreached its jurisdiction with the 9 gatekeeping provisions in the order. Gatekeeping provisions
10 are not only very common in the bankruptcy world -- in 11 retention orders and in plan confirmation orders, for example
12 -- but they are wholly consistent with the Barton case, the 13 U.S. Supreme Court's Barton's case, and its progeny that has 14 become known collectively as the Barton doctrine. Gatekeeping
15 provisions are wholly consistent with 28 U.S.C. Section
16 959(a)'s complete language.

17 The Fifth Circuit has blessed gatekeeping provisions in 18 all sorts of contexts. It has blessed them in the situation
19 of when Stern claims are involved in the Villegas case. It
20 even blessed Bankruptcy Courts' gatekeeping functions a long
21 time ago, in 1988, in a case that I don't think anyone
22 mentioned in the briefing, but as I've said, my brain
23 sometimes goes down trails, and I'm thinking of the Louisiana
24 World Exposition case in 1988, when the Fifth Circuit blessed
25 there a procedure where an unsecured creditors' committee can

1 bring causes of action against persons, such as officers and
2 directors or other third parties, if they first come to the 3 Bankruptcy Court and show a colorable claim. They have to 4 come to the Bankruptcy Court, show they have a colorable claim
5 and they're the ones that should be able to pursue them. Not
6 exactly on point, but it's just one of many cases that one
7 could cite that certainly approve gatekeeper functions of 8 various sorts of Bankruptcy Courts.

9 It doesn't matter which court might ultimately adjudicate
10 the claims; the Bankruptcy Court can be the gatekeeper.

11 And the Court agrees with the many cases cited from 12 outside this circuit, such as the case in Alabama, in the 13 Eleventh Circuit, and there was another circuit-level case, at 14 least one other, that have held that the Barton doctrine
15 should be extended to other types of case fiduciaries, such as 16 debtor-in-possession management, among others.

17 Finally, as I pointed out in my confirmation ruling in 18 this case, gatekeeping provisions are commonplace for all
19 types of courts, not just Bankruptcy Courts, when vexatious
20 litigants are involved. I have commented before that we seem 21 to have vexatious litigation behavior with regard to Mr.
22 Dondero and his many controlled entities.

23 Now, as far as the Movants' argument that there was not
24 just improper gatekeeping provisions but actually an improper
25 discharge in the Seery retention order of negligence claims or

110

1 other claims that don't rise to the level of gross negligence
2 or willful misconduct, again, I reiterate there's nothing
3 exceptional in the bankruptcy world about exculpation
4 provisions like this. They absolutely are a term of 5 employment very often. Just like compensation, they're 6 frequently requested, negotiated, and approved. They are 7 normal in the corporate governance world, generally. They are 8 normal in corporate contracts between sophisticated parties.
9 And most importantly of all, even if this Court overreached
10 with the exculpation provisions in the Seery retention order,
11 even if it did, res judicata bars the attack of these 12 provisions at this late stage, under cases such as Shoaf,
13 Republic Supply v. Shoaf from the Fifth Circuit, the Espinosa
14 case from the U.S. Supreme Court, and even Applewood, since 15 the Court finds the language in this order was clear,
16 specific, and unambiguous with regard to the gatekeeping
17 provisions and the exculpation provisions.

18 Last, and this is the part where I said I'm going to get
19 to this agreement that has been submitted, the Second Amended
20 and Restated Investment Advisor Agreement or whatever the 21 title is. I am more than a little disturbed that so much of 22 the theme of the Movants' pleadings and arguments, and I think 23 even representations to the District Court, have been they 24 have these sacred jury trial rights, these inviolate jury
25 trial rights, and an Article I Court like this Court should

121

1 annoyance or anything like that. I guess what I'm trying to
2 do is I don't want anyone to mistake the delay in ruling on 3 the contempt motion to mean I'm just not that -- you know, I'm 4 not prioritizing it, other things are more serious to me or 5 important to me, or I'm going to take two months to get to it.
6 It's literally been I've been in trial almost all day long
7 every day since you were here. But trust me, I'm about as 8 upset as upset can be about what I heard on June 8th, and I'm 9 going to get to that ruling, and I know what I'm going to do.
10 And, well, like I said, it's just a matter of figuring out
11 dollars and whom, okay? There's going to be contempt. I just 12 haven't put it on paper because I've been in court all day and 13 I haven't come up with a dollar figure. Okay?

14 So I hope -- I don't know if that matters very much, but 15 it should.

16 All right. We stand adjourned.

1 consent to Bankruptcy Court adjudication or are we going to
2 have a motion for remand.

3 So I don't know what we're going to attempt to accomplish
4 here because later in this month we have set a hearing on Mr.
5 Ellington's motion for remand and abstention. So I'll ask
6 counsel, did you all view this setting as something that, you
7 know, we needed to address issues on, or is it premature
8 before we have the hearing on the motion for remand and 9 abstention?

10 MR. YORK: Your Honor, this is Drew York from Gray
11 Reed. I represent Mr. Daugherty in the adversary action. And 12 I agree with the Court that it is, based upon the motion to 13 abstain and remand that was filed, it's premature. We set the 14 status conference at the Court's request immediately after we 15 filed the removal notice. I think we can address all of the 16 issues at the hearing at the end of the month.

17 THE COURT: All right. Ms. --

18 MS. DANDENEAU: Your Honor?

19 THE COURT: Go ahead.

20 MS. DANDENEAU: We agree with Mr. York and the Court,
21 Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Well, so I guess we will see you
23 at the end of the month. I think, what is it, maybe March 24 28th, something like that? March 29th?

25 MS. DANDENEAU: I believe it's March 29th.

1 THE COURT: Okay. And you know that I tend to
2 sometimes share my views just to see if it will spur a fit of 3 reasonableness or encourage people to settle or walk away.
4 I'm pretty exasperated with that attempt in this case. But 5 this litigation is -- I'm going to call it the stalking
6 lawsuit. Okay? Every time -- I don't know how much longer it
7 will be in my court, but as long as it's in my court I'm going
8 to call it what it is, a stalking lawsuit. It is one grown
9 man accusing another grown man of stalking. You know, it's 10 just embarrassing to me, and it should be embarrassing to 11 those involved.

12 Now, I have read the lawsuit and I have read that Mr.
13 Ellington accuses Mr. Daugherty of driving by his house,
14 driving by his father's house, driving by his sister's house,
15 driving by his office, 143 sightings, he's taking pictures.
16 And you know, if that's true, again, that's embarrassing. If 17 -- I don't even know what to say except this is embarrassing.
18 One grown man accusing another grown man of stalking. Okay?
19 A statute, by the way, that was designed to protect, you know,
20 ex-wives, girlfriends, battered women, from abusive men. You
21 know, gender doesn't matter, but wow. It's just -- I don't 22 know what to say except people should be embarrassed, and so
23 that's what I'm going to say.

24 I don't know if it's going to make a whit of difference in 25 anyone's litigation posture. But we'll come back on March

1 And when he, being Judge Kinkeade, after the briefs were 2 filed, he obviously was looking at it, he questioned his
3 jurisdiction, he requested briefing on the jurisdiction,
4 because in that order that he sent out requesting the 5 briefing, he pointed out -- you know, one of the issues he
6 pointed out was the Court's language, the reservation language
7 in the order. And, again, Highland argued that because of 8 that language, among other things, that language made the 9 order not final.

10 So all we're saying, all we're asking is just remove that 11 language so when we file the writ of mandamus that argument
12 isn't there. The Court is done dealing with the issue.
13 Nobody can disagree with it.

14 You know, nobody -- Highland is not agreeing that we, you
15 know, can seek mandamus, so I'm not saying that. And I'm not 16 asking the Court to agree to that. Mandamus is a -- we 17 believe is an option. It's still on the table. And we're 18 just dealing with one issue that came up before and just 19 trying to head it off before -- so that we don't have to come
20 back down and ask the Court to remove it later.

21 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Pomerantz, what do you
22 want to say about this?

23 MR. POMERANTZ: So, Your Honor, this is extremely 24 frustrating. I know Your Honor had said you didn't want to 25 waste Court time. There has already been a tremendous amount

1 of Court time that's wasted.

2 When we got this motion, it was a head-scratcher. We read
3 it as seeking way more things than what Mr. Lang is saying
4 now. If he had called up and asked us if we had any issue,
5 subject to Your Honor's agreement, to remove that last
6 sentence, we would have said we don't, because the briefing
7 before the District Court and the District Court's decision
8 have really nothing to do with that last sentence. Maybe the 9 -- Judge Kinkeade mentioned it in his December order, but it's 10 clear, as Your Honor mentions, from the reading of the 11 District Court opinion that it is irrelevant.

12 And the argument that the Court, the District Court which 13 denied interlocutory appeal is somehow, once that sentence is 14 eliminated, going to entertain and grant a writ of mandamus is 15 farcical. It's just not going to happen. And unfortunately,
16 what's going to happen is we're going to have to spend more
17 time, more money, and more effort.

18 And Your Honor, I know the motion to strike has been 19 resolved, but I'd just like to mention it, because this is -- 20 continues to be frustrating from the Highland side. They 21 filed an appendix that sought to slip in three letters written 22 by attorneys for various Dondero entities that were 23 essentially a smear campaign, a smear campaign on Mr. Seery, a
24 smear campaign on the Independent Directors, incidentally,
25 which may be actionable in its own right.

14

1 That had nothing to do with bias. They wanted to slip
2 that in, somehow it would get into the appellate record, if
3 and when they ever got to an appeals court.

4 So what do we do, Your Honor? We called them up, called 5 Mr. Lang up and said, will you withdraw the letters? There's 6 no basis for those to be included in the appendix. He said
7 no. Said, okay, will you make the deponents -- the people who
8 wrote the letters available for deposition? Wouldn't agree to 9 that, either.

10 And then we go to the time and the money, we file our 11 motion to strike, and lo and behold, which has become a
12 considerable pattern in this case, Your Honor, what does Mr.
13 Lang do? He calls up and says, I will withdraw the letters.
14 Okay? That's aside. We got what we wanted. There's nothing
15 we can do. But it is kind of frustrating, how that -- how 16 that played out.

17 Your Honor, this motion, to the extent it asks for that 18 sentence to be removed, that's fine. Again, we think it's a 19 legal nullity. What Mr. Lang asked for in his motion is for 20 Your Honor to issue a final order. Your Honor can't determine 21 whether your order is final. We've made that point in our 22 opposition. It seems maybe now Mr. Lang is walking back on 23 that. There's nothing you can do. Your Honor can issue an 24 order; it'll be up to the District Court.

25 With respect to the supplement, Your Honor, as we put in 15

1 the record, we think all the quote/unquote evidence that was
2 submitted just is a severe mischaracterization of the record.
3 And it's important, Your Honor, that not only does the -- we
4 agree that the evidence can come in, but we think Your Honor
5 has to make a determination whether those additional 6 allegations of bias and evidence do in fact demonstrate bias.
7 What we think Mr. Lang wanted to do, or the Appellants wanted
8 to do, or the Movants, they wanted to have that information
9 come in and argue at first blush to the Appellate Court that 10 that is bias, without having had Your Honor make the initial 11 determination, as you would have if there was a motion to 12 reconsider, as you would have if there was a new motion.

13 And so we think it's very important that Your Honor
14 consider those additional allegations. We think categorically
15 they do not demonstrate any bias, and our Exhibit A goes
16 through each item and points out the severe
17 mischaracterizations.

18 So, Your Honor, we've wasted a lot of time. We've wasted
19 a lot of money. But if all they want is to remove that 20 sentence, supplement the record, have Your Honor deny the 21 motion yet again after considering the additional evidence, we 22 do not have an opposition to that. But it was -- kind of took 23 a long time and a lot of money to get to this place.

24 Thank you, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: All right. And Mr. Lang, on the subject

16

1 of it took a lot of time and a lot of money, estate resources,
2 to get to this place, I just want to note a couple of things.
3 And I guess I'm happy to hear any response to these things
4 that I feel very frustrated about.

5 Again, my focus at this point is judicial resources as 6 well as estate resources. And no judge, no judge looks
7 lightly on a motion to recuse. Okay? Any judge, I would 8 think, is going to have some self-introspection. Like, oh my 9 goodness, what would motivate someone to think this needs to 10 be urged?

11 But, so on the topic of -- again, I want you to respond to 12 this, Mr. Lang -- my concern about judicial resources and 13 estate resources.

14 The timeline here -- and I always talk about timelines, I
15 know -- but this Court signed the confirmation order in this
16 case February 22, 2021, and your motion to recuse was filed
17 about a month later, March 18, 2021. Now, here's the first
18 thing I'll mention about judicial resources and estate
19 resources. Your motion and brief to recuse included an 20 appendix that was 200 -- no, excuse me, 2,722 pages long.
21 Okay?

22 So any judge, again, has to take it seriously when a 23 motion to recuse is filed. And the standard is I have to 24 stand back and look at would a reasonable person have concerns
25 here. So I can't just say, I know I'm not biased, I don't

17

1 think I'm biased; I have to look at what a reasonable person
2 might think.

3 So you presented to me a 2,722-page appendix for me to do
4 my job and look at what would a reasonable person think. So,
5 then would it raise a doubt in the mind of a reasonable
6 observer as to the judge's impartiality?

7 So I think here's another point that goes to judicial
8 resources. I had my law clerk, just out of curiosity, count
9 up for me how many orders that I had signed as of the day that 10 the motion to recuse was filed, March 18, 2021, and I had 11 presided over the bankruptcy case for 15 months at that point,
12 but it had been in Delaware for two months before Dallas. On 13 the day you had filed your motion to recuse, March 18, 2021, I
14 had signed 263 orders in the Highland bankruptcy case and the 15 adversary proceedings. It's a lot more now, of course. But 16 so I suppose, if I was really to do my job thoroughly, I might 17 look not merely at your 2,722 pages of appendix attached to 18 your motion to recuse, but all 263 orders I had entered to 19 see, hmm, would a reasonable observer question my 20 impartiality?

21 So, anyway, this is all about judicial resources and 22 estate resources. So, going down the timeline, March 23, 23 2021, five days after you filed the motion to recuse -- after,
24 I will tell you, I won't say I dropped everything to pore
25 through this, but spent a lot of time -- I issued an order

1 denying the motion to recuse.

2 Now, here's inside baseball, okay, if there ever was: The
3 last sentence, reserving the right to supplement or amend,
4 here's why I did it. I didn't know it would cause a brouhaha.
5 Maybe I didn't give it enough thought. But in reading the 6 case law during those many days and hours I spent focusing on 7 your motion to recuse, I realized that most of the case law
8 says you don't have to have a hearing, okay, the statute
9 doesn't require a hearing, the case law says you don't have to 10 have a hearing. And I cited some of that my order. But I
11 thought, these Movants, after seeing this order, they may come
12 back and say, you didn't give us our day in court. We wanted
13 a hearing. We weren't just going to rely on our 2,722-page
14 appendix. We wanted to put on witnesses.

15 So I didn't have to stick that sentence in there, but I
16 was just sort of anticipating what the Movants might do.

17 Okay. So, live and learn. I guess I won't, if I'm ever 18 confronted with the situation again, do that. But that's what 19 that was about.

20 So, my law clerk went and looked at the appellate record
21 in the past few days, because, I mean, again, head-scratcher.
22 We were trying to get a feel for how big a deal was this
23 sentence, okay, to the District Court, if at all. But anyway,
24 we happened to note that in July, July 20, 2021, the District
25 Court record on appeal was supplemented with 1,001 more pages

19

1 of record. So I guess, goodness gracious, poor Judge Kinkeade
2 and his staff, they had 3,723 pages of appendix. I don't even
3 know if that's all. You know, I don't know.

4 But so Judge Kinkeade dismissed the appeal because he said
5 my order was interlocutory on February 9, 2022, and then we
6 didn't see a motion for rehearing or an appeal to the Fifth 7 Circuit or a petition for writ of mandamus to the Fifth
8 Circuit. Five and half months later, this new motion for 9 final appealable order and supplement to the motion to recuse
10 is filed, containing 365 more pages. And then I see that, Mr.
11 Lang, you filed an amended motion to take out certain of the 12 items, with the agreement, the stipulation that was reached
13 with Debtor's counsel, so it's now a 154-page appendix.

14 But I should add that, in Highland's objection to your 15 latest motion, they attached 86 exhibits, and I couldn't count
16 all those exhibits, but it was more than 5,500 pages. And it
17 was, as I understood it, sort of almost like a rule of 18 optional completeness. If you're going to submit these 154
19 pages to supplement the record, we think you need to attach 20 more than snippets of a transcript here and there. You need 21 to have the whole context.

22 So, anyway, I -- you know, look at what you're doing. I'm 23 just -- and I guess I could totally appreciate and understand
24 if there had been a brief order from Judge Kinkeade saying,
25 because of that one sentence, this is an interlocutory order,

20

1 no leave to appeal an interlocutory order is warranted, end of 2 order. And, frankly, when you filed your motion, this latest
3 motion, having not seen Judge Kinkeade's order, I thought
4 that's what it was going to say.

5 So, from the tone of your motion, it sounded like that's 6 all his order was about, just: I have a problem with this 7 last sentence, it makes the whole order interlocutory. And 8 then I go back and read it and he gives four or five different 9 reasons why an order denying a motion to recuse is 10 interlocutory until the end of the case. I know that's a 11 bizarre concept in the world of bankruptcy, but he considered
12 this is even the rule in the world of bankruptcy.

13 So, anyway, help me to understand why this isn't 14 unnecessary carpet-bombing the Court, me and whoever might 15 hear your petition for writ of mandamus, and the Debtor
16 estate, carpet-bombing us with paper and causing us to expend
17 resources. And, again, we've got this backdrop of the 18 original motion to recuse being filed 15 months after I
19 started presiding over the case and after I had signed 263
20 orders.

21 Please, Mr. Lang, please help me to understand if this is 22 warranted. Why, I mean, help me to understand why this is not 23 wasting resources in your view and why this isn't just some 24 strategy. Again, I'm trying to not play psychologist, I'm 25 really trying to understand why you think this is fine.

1 MR. LANG: Well, Your Honor, we've moved to recuse,
2 and we've stated the grounds, and we have put in documents
3 from the record that we think support those grounds. We have 4 not unnecessarily carpet-bombed. We've cited to the various 5 transcripts. The length of the record is directly related to 6 the length of the transcripts mostly, the various transcripts
7 throughout the proceeding. And so, you know, with respect to 8 the 2,722 pages of appendix, most of those are just complete
9 copies of transcripts.

10 But again, we're just creating our record to support our 11 position on our motion. And the current motion is eight 12 pages. It's got reference to the additional grounds that 13 we've set forth that we think support our motion. And we 14 attached the various documents and transcripts that, again,
15 support -- we think support our position. And we're making
16 our record for appeal.

17 And as far as Mr. Pomerantz and the withdrawing of the 18 letters, you know, I was getting ready for trial when Mr.
19 Morris called. And he said, they're hearsay. We had a brief
20 conversation. I disagreed. They filed their motion. When I
21 got the time to look at it, I read through it, and Mr. Morris 22 and I had a conversation, and we decided, you know what, we 23 don't need them, we'll pull them out. Let's just do away with 24 this issue. It's not worth the time to deal with it.

25 I'm sorry they had to file their motion. But, you know, I

22

1 couldn't drop everything at that moment to look through. And
2 again, the reason that he gave was hearsay. So, you know,
3 it's not gamesmanship. It was just, look, you know, when we
4 got down to looking at it, when I looked at it, I decided it
5 wasn't worth the effort and the hassle, and we agreed to pull
6 them down and withdraw them. And that's why I filed the 7 amended motion.

8 As far as the current appendix, Your Honor, we're just 9 making a record. You know, we're trying to get this thing
10 reviewed. We're making sure the Court is aware of all the 11 grounds and having considered all the grounds and all the 12 actions that we think support our motion. We're giving the 13 Court the opportunity to look at it, and then just enter the 14 order without that language and we'll deal with the mandamus.

15 Again, the issue is ultimately going to be reviewed.
16 We're trying to get it reviewed. And you're right, you know,
17 we don't have to, you know, you didn't have to have a hearing
18 on the first deal, you don't have to have a hearing on this 19 one.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, this is -- this is just 22 one more match in furtherance of Mr. Dondero's stated desire,
23 as you've heard many times, to burn the place down. We would 24 have hoped, and I guess it would have been naïve to hope, as I
25 know Your Honor has hoped throughout the case, that at some

23

1 point in time the Dondero side would stop blaming Your Honor,
2 blaming Mr. Seery, blaming the estate, and actually look at 3 what he can do to put an end to this. Pay his notes, stop
4 raising frivolous claims, so everyone can go on with his life.
5 That's what the estate wanted to do and wants to do. That's
6 what Mr. Seery wants to do. Unfortunately, Mr. Dondero
7 doesn't seem capable of it, and this is just one more match on 8 the flames. And Mr. Lang, doing his job, following his 9 client's wishes, is just one more player in that. But it is 10 extremely frustrating.

11 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Here's what I'm going
12 to do. First, I'm simply going to deny the pending amended
13 motion for final appealable order and supplement to motion to 14 recuse, as it is procedurally improper as framed. Okay? It
15 was kind of like a Rule 54 motion. It was kind of like a new 16 motion to recuse. It was kind of like a Rule 59 motion for,
17 you know, new -- to put in new evidence, have a new trial, but 18 way untimely for that.

19 So I'm just denying the motion that's before me. Okay?
20 And by doing that, I mean, I guess, I guess the stipulation
21 and order that's before me on the motion to strike and the 22 motion to compel, I guess I'll -- it's in my queue, I'll sign
23 it, unless someone tells me there is a reason it doesn't make 24 sense to sign it.

25 But I'm denying the motion before me. But just so it's

1 clear, Mr. Lang, it's without prejudice to you either filing a
2 simple Rule 54 motion, without attachments, that simply asks
3 me to strike the last sentence of my original order denying 4 your motion to recuse from March 2021.

5 If you give me a simple Rule 54-based motion simply asking
6 me to strike that sentence, I'll sign it. Without a waiting
7 period. Without a hearing. And I assume Mr. Pomerantz
8 doesn't have a problem with that.

9 MR. POMERANTZ: That is correct, Your Honor. If all 10 that motion asks for, we would not oppose that.

11 THE COURT: Okay. It's also, my ruling today denying 12 your motion, is without prejudice to you filing a new motion
13 to recuse, if that's what you want to do, to start this over
14 and supplement the record.

15 But, you know, proceed as you will. This Court is going
16 to do its duty. And, well, if you want to do that, you do
17 that, but I'll have a more elaborate order if I have to rule
18 on a new motion to recuse. Among other things, I'm going to 19 point out to the Court above, whoever hears this, that because 20 I think timeliness was always an issue I raised in your 21 original order, you know, filing a motion to recuse after 22 confirmation, 15 months after this judge was assigned to the 23 case, and after the judge had signed 263 orders.

24 You know, we have case authority, as I'm sure you
25 researched and know, that talk about timeliness. Even though

25

1 it's not baked into the statute, 28 U.S.C. Section 455, it is
2 a factor. And so this is not A v. B litigation. This is a
3 case affecting many, many people. And at some point, don't we 4 have to wonder why a motion would be filed after 263 orders?
5 If your clients legitimately think there was bias, I don't 6 know why they didn't raise the issue way, way earlier in the 7 case.

8 And that's why these appendices are so huge, right? It
9 dovetails with the timeliness. Okay? Fifteen months.
10 There's a huge, huge, huge, huge record.

11 So, anyway, do you have any questions, Mr. Lang?

12 Again, I will say it for at least the third time this 13 morning: I'm worried about judicial resources and estate
14 resources. Okay? And, you know, I have to worry about I'll 15 loosely call my bosses, okay, you know, the courts that grade
16 my papers. The District Court who hears appeals and hears 17 petitions for writ of mandamus. The Fifth Circuit. They're 18 going to get frustrated with me if -- well, you know, if, for 19 example, I had ruled on this motion before me today, a clearly 20 procedurally defective motion. And if I just willy-nilly let 21 people put things in the record without a procedurally proper
22 basis, it just makes more work for the Court of Appeals,
23 right?

24 So it's not just about the lawyers here. It's not just 25 about me and my staff. It's about the people who grade my

26

1 papers. If I granted your motion as it's pending here before
2 me today, I have every reason to think, whether it's Judge
3 Kinkeade or the Fifth Circuit, they would think, what is this
4 judge doing? Okay? So it's just procedurally defective, what
5 you filed. Okay? But, again, you've got the ruling. Do you
6 have any questions?

7 MR. LANG: I don't.

8 THE COURT: We're adjourned.

9 THE CLERK: All rise.

31

1 we've already said the Court should allow us to withdraw the
2 proof of claim and condition it with prejudice.

3           There is no other lawsuit out there. There is no
4 other position being taken anywhere. Frankly, Your Honor, the 5 reason why I said admit the exhibits and I question their 6 relevance is because none of them go to actual legal prejudice.
7 Can't show it, hasn't shown it, hasn't demonstrated it. It
8 says they did a lot of work, gave you the greatest hits of some 9 email, but quite frankly, Your Honor, that goes to merit, not 10 legal prejudice. That goes to, I believe, part of their story
11 as to what happened.

12           The story that matters to me is we think things were 13 going to happen during the estate, he's right. We didn't move
14 for them. We looked back at it and said we don't need the 15 proof of claim anymore, we should withdraw it. That's the only 16 thing that's happened, and that's why we're here. We don't 17 think he's entitled to discovery as to why we withdrew the 18 proof of claim.

19           It's his burden to show legal prejudice. He can show
20 it or he can't. He hasn't.

21           THE COURT: Okay.

22           MR. GAMEROS: The estate hasn't.

23           THE COURT: Mr. Gameros?

24           MR. GAMEROS: (Indiscernible) Mr. Dondero.

25           THE COURT: I have a question. I mean I'm looking at 32

1 your pleading, your motion to withdraw the proof of claim, and
2 I'm looking at this wonderful chart you have on Page 7 saying
3 here are the standards under Bankruptcy Rule 3006, you, Court,
4 should consider. They were articulated in the Manchester case.

5 And it's not merely about is there any prejudice to 6 the estate. I mean you set forth five factors. One is "reason
7 for dismissal." One is diligence in bringing the motion to 8 withdraw. One is undue vexatiousness. One is the matter's
9 progression including trial preparation. One is duplication of 10 expense of relitigation.

11 This is your own authority, which I believe actually 12 is correctly articulating the standards. It's not just about 13 prejudice. Yes, I agree that some of the case law has zeroed
14 in on that one in particular. But I mean you say yourself
15 reason for dismissal is a factor the Court must consider.

16 MR. GAMEROS: That's correct, Your Honor. Those are 17 the factors, and I think our analysis on them is correct.

18 If we go all the way to trial and the result is that 19 our proof of claim is denied, we're in the same position we are 20 right now. So why should the parties, the estate, and the 21 Court go through that exercise?

22 THE COURT: Okay. Well, that's another issue, I
23 think, other than the reason for dismissal. But a follow-up
24 question to what you just said is this.

25 Would you agree to a condition on the withdrawal of 33

1 your proof of claim that your client agrees that Highland has a
2 46-point whatever it was percent interest in SE Multifamily
3 Holdings and your client waives any right in the future to 4 challenge that interest?

5 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if that's what the Court
6 wants to put in an order and I have a chance to confer with my 7 client on it, I'm pretty sure that would be agreeable.

8 THE COURT: Today's the day. I'm not going to 9 continue. I've got, you know, the whole day booked if I needed
10 it because I wasn't sure what you all were going to want to put 11 on.

12 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we'd agree with that.

13 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I'm sorry to interrupt, but 14 a waiver of any appeal, too. I just hard that if that's what 15 you want to put in the order, that's okay. But this case has 16 to end, and that's what we're looking for.

17 We're a post-confirmation estate that will not go
18 forward with the possibility hanging over its head that it may 19 be divested of this asset. That is what this proof of claim
20 and this dispute is about.

21 And what the debtor needs in order to avoid legal 22 prejudice is the complete elimination of any uncertainty that 23 it owns 46.06 percent of SE Multifamily. And if HCRE is not 24 willing to give that comfort today, we again renew our request 25 for a direction that the three HCRE witnesses appear for

34

1 substantive depositions and we get this on the trial calendar.

2 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we'll agree to it.

3 THE COURT: Well, you know what, this is such a big
4 deal I really need a client representative to say that. It
5 would be that --

6 MR. GAMEROS: I don't have one here today, but I can 7 get you one.

8 THE COURT: How soon --

9 MR. GAMEROS: Do you want me to file a stipulation or 10 an affidavit?

11 THE COURT: Pardon?

12 MR. GAMEROS: Do you want me to file an affidavit?

13 THE COURT: Well, let's be a hundred percent clear.
14 Your client would state that with the granting of the motion to 15 withdraw proof of claim number 146, HCRE is irrevocably waiving
16 the right to ever challenge Highland Capital Management's 46
17 percent interest -- and I know it's 46-point something -- 46
18 percent interest in SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC and is,
19 likewise, waiving the right to appeal or challenge the order to 20 this effect.

21 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may, perhaps we can 22 take a ten-minute recess and allow him to consult with his 23 client and perhaps get a client representative on the phone who 24 can make that representation?

25 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, you think you

35

1 can get a client rep on the WebEx?

2 MR. GAMEROS: I'm pretty sure I can, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: All right. Well, how about we take a 15-
4 minute recess. Does that sound a reasonable amount of time?
5 We've got, you know, two dozen people --

6 MR. GAMEROS: It does, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Two dozen people on the WebEx. I don't
8 know if maybe one is a client representative, but we'll take a
9 15-minute break and I'll come back. Okay.

10 THE CLERK: All rise.

11 (Recess at 10:33 a.m./Reconvened at 10:50 a.m.)

12 THE CLERK: All rise.

13 THE COURT: Please be seated.

14 We're back on the record in Highland.

15 Mr. Gameros, how did you want to proceed now?

16 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor wanted me to get a 17 representative of NexPoint Real Estate Partners to state that 18 they agree that the estate has its 46 percent interest in the 19 company agreement subject to the company agreement. And I've 20 got Mr. Sauter here who has authority to speak on behalf of 21 NexPoint Real Estate Partners.

22 THE COURT: All right. Well, so what is his position
23 with HCRE?

24 MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, I don't have -- this is DC
25 Sauter. I don't have an official position with HCRE, but I

36

1 have spoken with Mr. Dondero and he has authorized me to appear
2 here today and agree to the conditions that Mr. Gameros just 3 outlined.

4 THE COURT: All right. Well, it sounds like hearsay
5 to me. I don't know -- Counsel, let me have you both respond.
6 You know, I worry about this will fall apart the minute Mr.
7 Dondero is instructing a lawyer, I never agreed to that. I
8 mean I just don't know. This is highly unusual.

9 First --

10 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if I might?

11 THE COURT: Please.

12 MR. GAMEROS: Mr. Sauter is an officer of the Court.
13 He works, you know, with Mr. Dondero at his business at 14 NexPoint; certainly an authorized agent on behalf of NexPoint
15 Real Estate Partners to make this agreement on behalf of 16 NexPoint Real Estate Partners.

17 To the extent that the condition that you originally 18 described as a conclusory matter, in other words, how to end
19 the withdrawal, we already agreed to that, that we also can 20 agree on the record to waive any appeal. Mr. Sauter is 21 authorized to agree to that, as well.

22 So I think as an agent and a lawyer on behalf of 23 NexPoint Real Estate Partners, he's fully able to do that.

24 THE COURT: How do I know he's able to do that?

25 And, by the way, if Mr. Dondero is in I guess the

37

1 last 15 minutes given him authority to testify before the
2 Court, why couldn't Dondero just get on the WebEx himself?

3 MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, I think he felt more
4 comfortable with me being a lawyer agreeing to those terms so
5 that he wouldn't misstate something. He has been listening. I
6 believe he's still on, although I'm not certain.

7 THE COURT: Mr. Morris, do you want to respond? I
8 mean I'm not sure, frankly, I care what you say, no offense. I
9 don't think I have a person with clear authority here.

10 MR. MORRIS: I'll just be quick and say I agree.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Gameros --

12 MR. GAMEROS: As an attorney for NexPoint Real Estate
13 Partners, I have the authority to make that agreement on the 14 record and it be binding. Mr. Sauter is confirming that 15 authority having spoken with Mr. Dondero about it.

16 I think that the Court is fully --

17 THE COURT: Mr. Gameros --

18 MR. GAMEROS: -- capable of doing that --

19 THE COURT: Mr. Gameros, come on. You know this is 20 the client's decision to make. Okay. I don't have a client
21 representative. I don't have an officer or controlling 22 equityholder as evidence here of --

23 MR. MORRIS: Mr. Dondero --

24 THE COURT: -- the willingness to make the agreement.

25 Pardon?

38

1 MR. MORRIS: Can Mr. Dondero make the representation
2 on the record to the Court that he is authorizing Mr. Sauter to 3 waive any claim that HCRE has to Highland's 46.06 percent
4 interest in SE Multifamily along with any appeal? This is just
5 step one. But if Mr. Dondero was on the phone, let him speak
6 up and make it crystal clear that he is delegating the full
7 authority to Mr. Sauter to negotiate and enter into this 8 consensual order on behalf of HCRE.

9 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, do you want to 10 give your client authority to speak up? Your client
11 representative, someone who's actually an officer or a
12 controller or equity owner?

13 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if Mr. Dondero can do that, 14 that would be great. I don't know if he's in a place where he 15 can do that.

16 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Dondero, if you can hear
17 us, are you willing to give some quick testimony in that 18 regard?

19 (No audible response)

20 MR. DONDERO: I can't see the box --

21 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Surprising that -- surprising
22 he was on the phone before, but now he's not after delegating.
23 Just I'm not --

24 MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, he's on the phone. I'm just 25 -- if you will give me a minute, I got to run around the corner

39

1 and try to make sure he knows how to unmute himself.

2 THE COURT: Star 6. If he's on a phone, star 6 is
3 the way to unmute himself. But I want to see video, too.

4 THE OPERATOR: There we go. Try again.

5 MR. DONDERO: Hello?

6 THE COURT: All right.

7 MR. DONDERO: Hello?

8 THE COURT: Mr. Dondero, is that you?

9 MR. DONDERO: It's me. I've been on the entire time.

10 THE COURT: All right. Can you turn your video on,
11 please?

12 MR. DONDERO: I am on my cell phone.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Well, so I guess you just called 14 in on your cell phone, you don't have a WebEx connection on 15 your cell phone?

16 MR. DONDERO: I don't have a WebEx.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Well -- yeah, it sounded like you
18 were in the same office as Mr. Sauter. Is that -- did I
19 misunderstand?

20 MR. DONDERO: We work in the same office. I'm in my 21 car. I just stepped out of my car.

22 THE COURT: All right. Well, this is not ideal, you
23 know, without us seeing you. But I'll go ahead and swear you 24 in. All right. Can you hear me okay? I need to swear you in.

25 MR. DONDERO: Yes.

40

1 THE COURT: All right.

2 JAMES DONDERO, HCRE'S WITNESS, SWORN

3 THE COURT: All right.

4 Mr. Gameros, do you want to ask him the questions we
5 need to hear answers on, please?

6 MR. GAMEROS: Thank you, Your Honor.

7 DIRECT EXAMINATION

8 BY MR. GAMEROS:

9 Q Mr. Dondero, on behalf of HCRE, do you agree as a
10 condition for withdrawing the proof of claim that HCRE will not
11 challenge the estate's ownership or equity interest in SE
12 Multifamily subject to the company agreement?

13 A Yes.

14 Q Do you agree that you will not appeal and that, therefore,
15 HCRE is waiving any appeal right to that determination as a 16 condition of withdrawing the proof of claim?

17 A Yes.

18 MR. GAMEROS: Those are the questions for Mr.
19 Dondero.

20 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may?

21 THE COURT: Mr. Morris, you may.

22 MR. MORRIS: I'm very uncomfortable. I'm very 23 uncomfortable with the inclusion of the language subject to the 24 company agreement. It sounds like a very conditional waiver.
25 We need an irrevocable unconditional admission by HCRE that

41

1 Highland owns 46.06 percent of SE Multifamily, period, full
2 stop. If they want to keep conditions in there and make it
3 conditional and make it subject to other things, let's please
4 deny the motion and proceed to trial.

5 THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. --

6 MR. GAMEROS: The equity that they own is part of the 7 company agreement. It's not modifying the company agreement by 8 saying.

9 THE COURT: Well --

10 MR. MORRIS: Our ownership is not subject to the 11 agreement. We either have an ownership interest or we don't.
12 Our rights and obligations as a member of SE Multifamily are 13 subject to the agreement, but our ownership interest is not.
14 And that's the ambiguity that we need to remove.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Well, Mr. Gameros, do you want to 16 rephrase the question or are you not willing to make the 17 agreement as specific as Mr. Morris says he needs it?

18 MR. GAMEROS: That's what I'm -- I guess I don't
19 understand what his complaint is. If the estate owns 46
20 percent of the equity of SE Multifamily, it owns that subject
21 to the company agreement. It's not a separate ownership
22 interest. So I don't know what the problem is.

23 THE COURT: Okay. Let me try to phrase it as I
24 understand it.

25 What I understand has been asserted in the proof of

1 claim is that what was set forth in the agreement was a
2 mistake, okay. A mistake. And it sounds like you're using 3 language that says we'll agree the agreement, you know, they
4 have a 46 percent interest pursuant to the agreement. But that
5 doesn't change -- that does not really zero in on the argument
6 made in the proof of claim that there was a mistake in the 7 agreement, right?

8           So you'd have to go broader to completely resolve the 9 issues raised in your proof of claim and say we agree, Highland 10 has a 46.06 interest in SE Multifamily and we agree that is 11 correct and we waive any right to challenge it in the future
12 and we waive any right to appeal this order.

13           MR. GAMEROS: And, Your Honor, if that's the 14 condition, I guess my concern is that the 46 percent is still 15 part of the company agreement. We agree not to challenge it on 16 the basis of anything asserted in the proof of claim, that 17 being mistake, lack of consideration, or failure of 18 consideration. Their 46 percent is their ownership interest in 19 SE Multifamily and HCRE won't challenge that.

20           Is that sufficient?

21           THE COURT: Well, I need to hear from your client. I 22 mean he needs to be asked every which way from Sunday whether 23 he is waiving the right to challenge Highland's 46.06 interest
24 from now until eternity, okay. That's basically, you know, we 25 either have that agreement or we'll just have a trial.

Dondero - Direct

43

1 CONTINUED DIRECT EXAMINATION

2 BY MR. GAMEROS:

3 Q Mr. Dondero, do you agree that NexPoint Real Estate
4 Partners will not challenge in any way the estate's interest in 5 SE Multifamily, its 46-point whatever percent interest that is?

6 A I think the nuance is that agreement is okay in current as 7 of today. But it's part of an operating agreement, and that 8 percentage ownership can change due to capital calls and other
9 things. And it could change over time. It's never in a
10 partnership agreement fixed into perpetuity. And so no
11 businessman can agree to that.

12 If the Court wants it fixed into perpetuity, that would be 13 very odd.

14 MR. MORRIS: Can we go to trial, Your Honor? Can we 15 just deny the motion and go to trial? Let me have my 16 depositions and go to trial. This is -- if Mr. Dondero wants
17 to take that position, he's welcome to do that. But I'm 18 entitled to finality, and I'd like to get there.

19 THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. Gameros, anything
20 else you want to ask your client that you think might be 21 helpful?

22 BY MR. GAMEROS:

23 Q Mr. Dondero, you desire to withdraw the proof of claim.
24 Correct?

25 A Yes.

44

1 Q And you agree to an order denying the proof of claim with
2 prejudice. Correct?

3 A Yes.

4 Q And can you agree that HCRE will not challenge the equity
5 ownership of its member in SE Multifamily of the estate?

6 A Yes.

7 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, I think there it is.

8 THE COURT: Mr. Morris, do you have any --

9 MR. GAMEROS: He agrees.

10 THE COURT: -- do you have any follow-up questions --

11 MR. MORRIS: The waiver of the right to --

12 THE COURT: -- Mr. Dondero?

13 MR. MORRIS: The waiver of the right to any appeal
14 whatsoever. And I do have -- you know, there are the other 15 conditions that we mentioned earlier, right? Either they have 16 to also agree that Mr. Seery's deposition transcript shall 17 never be used for any purpose at any time or they need to level
18 the playing field and submit their witnesses to examination.

19 The playing field needs to be level here. Either if 20 they want to use that deposition transcript for some purpose, I
21 have no problem with that. Just let me take my depositions.
22 If they don't want to submit their witnesses to depositions,
23 then they also have to agree that that transcript will never be 24 used for any other purpose. It's as if this proof of claim has 25 never been filed, right, for that purpose, right. Because

1 that's just not fair. That's the legal prejudice.

2 How do you take my client's deposition on Wednesday
3 and file this motion on Friday knowing your client's supposed
4 to be deposed on Tuesday? Level the playing field. That's 5 conditional number two.

6 And condition number three, frankly, Your Honor, this 7 proof of claim was fraudulent. I mean my client has been 8 damaged. My client has spent an enormous amount of money on 9 this, and I'd like them to agree to if not make us whole, you
10 know, do something because it's wrong. It's just wrong that 11 Mr. Dondero files proofs of claim under penalty of perjury that 12 have absolutely no basis in fact.

13 It's distressing. I'd like those two last issues
14 addressed, as well.

15 MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, in terms of the Court's 16 questions in terms of finality with respect to the membership
17 interest in SE Multifamily, Mr. Dondero agrees with the Court.
18 He's already said that he won't waive -- that he waives, rather 19 -- I'm sorry, let me start again.

20 He has said very clearly that he has waived appeal of 21 this order allowing the withdrawal of the proof of claim with 22 the conditions that you asked for. I think you should grant
23 the motion to withdraw and we can put an end to all of this.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. MORRIS: Here's the thing, Your Honor. We know

1 but it's also a big deal because we want to make sure only
2 parties with legitimate claims are given a seat at the table,
3 so to speak, in bankruptcy as far as, you know, their right to 4 a distribution, their right to be heard in a case.

5           So, you know, that's the reason for the rule. We 6 don't see it come into play very often, but it's there because 7 we want to make sure that we protect the integrity of the 8 bankruptcy process. And if someone files a proof of claim and 9 it's pending and, you know, activity happens in the bankruptcy
10 case as a result of it, that we don't just let a party say
11 never mind.

12           So the Manchester case, which you both cited in your 13 pleadings, has set forth fact-intensive factors -- fact-
14 intensive inquiry. And, again, I'm just looking at HCRE's
15 motion, Page 7. There was a chart and it sets forth the 16 Manchester factors. Factor number one, diligence in bringing 17 the motion to withdraw the proof of claim.

18           In Mr. Gameros' chart, his response to that factor is 19 that HCRE brought its motion to withdraw immediately after 20 conferring with debtor's counsel. I don't even know what that 21 means, okay. But what I do know is in looking at diligence of 22 bringing the motion, the proof of claim was filed April 8th,
23 2020. It was objected to, the proof of claim, July 30th, 2020.
24 And then on August 12th, 2022, this motion to withdraw the 25 proof of claim was filed.

52

1           So two years and one month after the objection was
2 filed to the proof of claim HCRE withdraws it. So that doesn't
3 seem very diligent. It's not diligent at all, to be honest.

4           Your second factor, you cited, Mr. Gameros, undue
5 vexatiousness, and you say HCRE has not been vexatious in 6 pursuing its proof of claim. And outside the motion to 7 disqualify previous counsel, which is not substantive,
8 everything in the matter has proceeded by agreement and there
9 have been no hearings set or held.

10           Okay. Well, debtor has represented in its pleadings
11 and today through counsel on the record that it has spent 12 hundreds of thousands of dollars litigating this. It has 13 mentioned that four depositions have been taken. It was Mr.
14 Mark Patrick. It was the tax accounting firm. We had the B --
15 the entity -- BH Equities, LLC, their representative. And then 16 Mr. Seery. So four depositions, and I'm told a lot of written 17 discovery.

18           And on the day before the -- well, the day after, day
19 or two after the Seery deposition, the motion to withdraw the 20 proof of claim was filed after 5:00 in the evening on a Friday,
21 August 12th, and I guess a couple of business days before the 22 depositions were to occur of Mr. Dondero and the fellow, Mr.
23 McGraner, and I feel like there was one other deposition. I'm 24 losing track of those.

25           But --

WWW.LIBERTYTRANSCRIPTS.COM

1 THE CLERK: The 30(b)(6).

2 THE COURT: Oh, the 30(b)(6). The 30(b)(6)
3 representative.

4 So on top of all of that, you know, Highland argues
5 there was just simply no good-faith basis for the proof of 6 claim. Proof of claim asserted the membership interest,
7 Highland's 46.06 interest, set forth in the Multifamily LLC
8 agreement were the result of mistake.

9 Mr. Dondero signed the agreement for both parties,
10 HCRE and Highland. And then now the motion to withdraw says
11 something to the effect of the anticipated issues have not 12 materialized. So anyway, the undue vexatiousness factor I
13 think weighs -- because of these factors I've mentioned, weighs 14 in favor of there has been undue vexatiousness.

15 Factor number three, according to HCRE's motion to 16 withdraw the proof of claim, is matter's progression including 17 trial preparation. Again, four depositions, thousands of pages
18 of written discovery. We were days away from the last 19 depositions occurring, those of HCRE's potential witnesses and 20 we have trials set. We have a trial set in November. So that 21 factor, again, seems to weigh heavily in favor of Highland's
22 objection here.

23 Duplication of expense of relitigation, here's why we 24 got Mr. Dondero on the phone or wanted to have a witness with 25 authority. Highland is saying we are concerned about

54

1 relitigation of this ownership interest issue. And as part of
2 its argument, Highland has said we've got claims, we've got our
3 own claims for breach of agreement and different things that
4 are going to cause us to have to drill down on terms of the LLC
5 agreement.

6 And we can't -- we don't want to face exposure on 7 this issue of, well, you don't have the ownership interest or 8 the rights you say you do, Highland. So, you know, if we could 9 get ironclad language here of, you know, we waive the right, we 10 agree that Highland has the 46.06 interest and we waive the 11 right to challenge that, then I don't think we'd have to worry
12 about relitigation of the issues in the proof of claim. But it
13 feels like we had a little bit of reluctance to say it as 14 forcefully as we would need to have it said to avoid 15 relitigation.

16 Reason for dismissal, I don't know. I don't know
17 what the reason for dismissal. Again, to quote HCRE's pleading 18 on Page 7, the reason for dismissal is, "The operation of the 19 company" -- I think that means SE Multifamily -- "during the 20 case and the anticipated issues therewith have not materialized
21 and NREP no longer desires to proceed in the matters raised in 22 the proof of claim."

23 I mean that's just not in sync with the theory
24 espoused in the proof of claim that we think there was a 25 mistake made in the LLC agreement. So, again, looking at these

55

1 legal factors, I do not think that the correct result is to
2 grant the motion to withdraw the proof of claim under Rule 3006
3 under the Manchester factors. I will throw in that I think
4 there is potential for prejudice here of the debtor.

5 I mean not even considering that hundreds of 6 thousands of dollars have been spent over two-plus years on 7 this issue, you know, I remember very well the disqualifying
8 motion. And I said Wick Phillips should be disqualified. I
9 didn't shift fees because I just wasn't sure at the time that,
10 frankly, HCRE should be imposed with the fees attributable to 11 its lawyers, not recognizing the conflict of interest when they 12 saw one. It was just a little fuzzy in my mind.

13 But I'm just letting you know that now that we are 14 here many years later, many months later and we have all the 15 sudden, okay, never mind, this is just a situation where I have 16 some regrets I didn't shift fees, to be honest. But -- so the 17 motion is denied. The depositions shall go forward. I'm not 18 sure, you know, if the dates that have been proposed are still 19 workable, but if someone wants to speak up now about those 20 deposition dates to avoid an emergency hearing, I'm willing to 21 hear that.

22 I think what I heard was, well, I don't know what --
23 have you talked about dates at all? Probably not, Mr. Morris,
24 in light of this hearing today.

25 MR. MORRIS: We have not, Your Honor. But I do think

56

1 that Counsel and I can work that out. I'm not available until 2 the week of the 26th. So it won't be early that week but 3 sometime between let's say the 28th of September and the 7th of 4 October, I'll be prepared to take these depositions. And I
5 would respectfully request, and we can work with Ms. Ellison to 6 try to find a trial date sometime the last week of October,
7 first week of November so we can get this finished.

8 THE COURT: Okay. Did I dream up that there was a
9 trial set already in November?

10 MR. MORRIS: You know what?

11 You know what, let's just keep that date, Your Honor.
12 Let's just keep that date.

13 THE COURT: All right. Traci, are you still on the 14 line? Can you confirm my memory? I thought we had a two-day
15 trial set aside for this in November.

16 MS. ELLISON: Is this on the merits of HCRE's claims,
17 Judge Jernigan? I have a note holding November 1 and 2.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

20 THE COURT: So we'll go ahead and mark that down.

21 Now the last -- so you'll work on an a mutually 22 agreeable date for these three remaining depositions sometime,
23 you know, late September, early October. And I trust you will 24 --

25 MR. MORRIS: Yeah. I would respectfully request that

57

1 Counsel just propose dates for the depositions. I'll wait to
2 hear from him. But I think -- I'm representing to the Court
3 that any time between September 28th and let's just give it two 4 full weeks, October 12th. That's plenty of time in advance of 5 the trial.

6 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, anything you
7 want to add on that?

8 MR. GAMEROS: No, Your Honor. I'm sure we can work
9 with Mr. Morris to get those scheduled.

10 THE COURT: All right. And here's actually the last 11 thing I wanted to say.

12 You know, I had thought about, you know, waiting 24
13 hours to give you a ruling on this motion to withdraw the proof
14 of claim and directing you all to kind of talk and see if maybe 15 you could work out language, you know, without the pressure of 16 the Court hovering over you that could make both of your 17 clients satisfied.

18 I still encourage you to do that, but I'm going to 19 pick on our U.S. Trustee. I see she's observing today, and I'm 20 not going to ask you to say anything, Ms. Lambert. But if you
21 all do agree, if you all in the next, you know, 24 hours come
22 to some sort of agreement, I don't mean to be alarming, but I
23 want it run by the U.S. Trustee because, you know, I've heard 24 some things that have troubled me about the, you know, lack of 25 good faith with regard to the proof of claim and, you know,

1 alleged gamesmanship.

2           And, you know, I talked earlier about this goes to
3 the integrity of the system, you know, filing a proof of claim
4 under penalty of perjury. Anyway, I'm feeling a little bit
5 uncomfortable about signing off on an agreed order where there
6 may be quid pro quos that went back and forth in connection
7 with withdrawing a proof of claim. I mean at some point --
8 well, that's why we have scrutiny of these things under Rule
9 3006, right?

10           Again, there are integrity issues. And so I just --
11 you know, if you were to work out language, I want you to run
12 it by Ms. Lambert and I want to hear that either she was okay
13 with it or she wasn't okay with it or maybe she declines to 14 comment. You know, I'm not going to tell her how to do her
15 job, but I feel like that needs to happen, okay?

16           It's just something uncomfortable going on in my
17 brain about, you know, again a proof of claim being on file
18 two, almost two and a half years and then, you know, okay,
19 never mind, okay, I agree to never mind as long as you agree to 20 XYZ.

21           And I have no idea what's in the Seery transcript. I
22 don't have it before me. But, you know, I don't even know what 23 that's all about. I don't even know if I care what that's all
24 about. I just know if there are quid pro quos I feel like, you
25 know, maybe I need to have the U.S. Trustee, you know, not per

59

1 se signing off on any agreed order but at least kind of looking
2 at it and telling me either U.S. Trustee's fine with it, U.S.
3 Trustee is not fine with it, or U.S. Trustee declines to 4 comment. Just I know that I've gone through the drill, okay?

5 So just letting you know I am still, you know, all
6 open to an agreed resolution of this, okay. But we're going
7 forward as if you can't get there, okay?

8 All right. I'll look for -- what am I going to look 9 for? I'm going to look for an order denying the motion to 10 withdraw proof of claim. I'm going to look for an order
11 granting the -- well, an order resolving the objection to 12 motion to quash and cross-motion for subpoenas saying that 13 these three witnesses are going to appear at a mutually 14 agreeable time either late September or early October.

15 All right. We're adjourned.

16 THE CLERK: All rise.

17 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 motions.

2 THE COURT: All right. Anything else before I give a
3 ruling?

4 All right. Well, the Court, of course, has jurisdiction
5 over these two motions. I'll call them the Maple Avenue
6 Motion and the PetroCap III Motion. The Court will 7 specifically note for the record that notice has been proper
8 under the Rules and sufficient. I'd note that July 8th these 9 motions were filed.

10 The Court will also note for the record that the only
11 objections that were lodged to these motions were withdrawn
12 during the hearing before the evidence, as were separate bids
13 that had been submitted. Thus, there are no pending
14 objections, no pending bids at this juncture.

15 363(b) of the Bankruptcy Code applies to these proposed
16 transactions.

17 With regard to Maple Holdings, this is, of course,
18 technically a motion under 363(b) for approval for the Debtor
19 to exercise its management rights in Maple Avenue Holdings,
20 LLC to cause Maple Avenue Holdings, LLC to sell the real
21 property at 2817 Maple Avenue, Dallas, Texas. So it's a
22 usage, I guess you could say, of property outside the ordinary 23 course of business.

24 And then with regard to the PetroCap III transaction, once
25 again, 363(b) is the governing authority. The transaction is

1 either in the nature of a sale or usage in the form of a
2 forfeiture of certain of the limited partnership interests and
3 other rights in the agreements described in the motion.

4 The Court finds that the evidence very well demonstrated a
5 sound business justification for both of these transactions
6 and a reasonable business judgment has been exercised and 7 these transactions are in the best interests of the estate.

8 First, with regard to the Maple Avenue transaction, the 9 evidence showed that the purchase price, $9.75 million, is 10 certainly within the range of market values that expert
11 brokers and the Debtor's informal marketing process revealed.
12 The Court believes that the Debtor and its professionals
13 marketed the property appropriately, and this appears to be a 14 sale process that has been undertaken in good faith without 15 conclusion -- without collusion, I should say. The purchaser,
16 Stonelake Capital Holdings, LP, is not an insider, and again
17 appears to be a participant in an arm's length, good faith,
18 and fair transaction.

19 The Court is not in the least troubled that we didn't have 20 an auction. While auctions in the universe of Chapter 11 are 21 a very common protocol, there's nothing in the Bankruptcy Code
22 or Bankruptcy Rules that requires a public auction. And when 23 we're talking about real estate, it's very common not to have 24 an auction.

25 But in any event, the Court reiterates that the marketing

1 of this property and the sale process appear to be in all ways
2 adequate and in good faith and have yielded fair value for the
3 property. In any event, this is the highest and best offer
4 the Debtor received.

5 So the Court approves the Maple Avenue Holdings, LLC
6 transaction. The Court reserves the right to supplement this 7 ruling in a written form of order.

8 Turning now specifically to PetroCap III, the Court
9 likewise believes that there has been a reasonable effort on 10 the part of the Debtor to maximize the value of these 11 interests and rights. The Court believes that this 12 transaction is the highest and best transaction that can be 13 achieved by the estate. The Court believes this was arm's
14 length and that all parties, including PetroCap, have acted in 15 good faith. And so I should add both of these transactions
16 are going to be free and clear of any interests, with those 17 interests to attach to the proceeds.

18 The Court once again reserves the right to supplement in a 19 more fulsome written ruling, but the Court hereby approves the 20 PetroCap transaction.

21 To the extent these parties have asked for waiver of the 22 14 days under 6004, I can't remember if that request was made
23 on both transactions or just the real estate transaction. Is 24 that a request for both transactions, Mr. --

25 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, I'm not sure it's even a

79

1 request for the Maple, because I think the closing is not
2 expected to occur until after that 14-day period.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. POMERANTZ: With respect to PetroCap, I'll ask
5 Mr. Demo. Since he was going to present the specific facts,
6 he may know the answer to whether we asked for the 14-day stay
7 waiver there.

8 MR. DEMO: We did ask, Your Honor. Again, this is 9 Greg Demo from Pachulski Stand Ziehl & Jones. So if we could 10 have the 14-day waiver, that would be wonderful.

11 THE COURT: All right. Well, given that we have no
12 objection and so no concern for an appeal, and otherwise given
13 the circumstances of this transaction, I think that it is a 14 reasonable request -- I see it right now -- to waive 6004(h).
15 And so that request is granted. All right.

16 MR. DEMO: Thank you.

17 THE COURT: Well, is there any more business before
18 we adjourn?

19 MR. POMERANTZ: Nothing from the Debtor, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: All right. Well, I thank you all. You
21 know, I'm --

22 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, I just may point out that 23 we do expect to be going effective either the end of this week
24 or sometime beginning to middle of next week. So there'll
25 obviously be a watershed event in the case that has been --

81

1 pretty much gone with these contempt motions.

2 And, again, read my last paragraph. I can understand
3 getting bored reading that thing, but please read the last
4 paragraph to know that it's going to get worse if we have
5 another one of these hearings and I do find contempt.

6 So, all right. Well, we will see you all I guess on the 7 19th is my next -- I think that's where we have our next
8 hearing.

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”), by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this objection (the “Objection”)<sup>1</sup> to James Dondero, Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., NexPoint Advisors, L.P., The Dugaboy Investment Trust, Get Good Trust, and NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC, f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC, a Delaware Limited Liability Company’s Renewed Motion to Recuse [Docket Nos. 3541, 3542] (the “First Renewed Motion”),<sup>2</sup> as amended by Docket Nos. 3570 and 3571 (as amended, the “Renewed Motion”).<sup>3</sup> In support of its Objection, Highland states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT<sup>4</sup>

1. Under Mr. Dondero’s direction, Highland was forced to file bankruptcy in October 2019 to protect itself from an avalanche of adverse rulings that had either been entered against it and its Dondero-controlled affiliates or were about to be entered. For nearly a decade, courts and arbitration panels in Texas, Delaware, New York, and in foreign jurisdictions such as the Cayman Islands, Bermuda, and Guernsey, have issued a series of rulings against Mr. Dondero and his enterprise, some with stinging rebukes.

2. Now, Mr. Dondero has filed the Renewed Motion to recuse this Court in the misguided belief that he might have more success with a different judge. But the lengthy record proves that Mr. Dondero’s problem is not judicial bias. It is the never-ending, meritless, vindictive, and vexatious litigation strategy that Mr. Dondero stubbornly clings to regardless of the burdens

---

<sup>1</sup> Concurrently herewith, Highland is filing its Appendix in Support of Highland’s Objection to Renewed Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 and Brief in Support (the “Appendix”). Citations to the Appendix are annotated as follows: Ex. #, Appx. #.

<sup>2</sup> Citations to the First Renewed Motion refer to Movants’ Memorandum of Law in Support of Renewed Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 [Docket No. 3542].

<sup>3</sup> Citations to the Renewed Motion refer to Movants’ Amended Memorandum of Law in Support of Amended Renewed Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 [Docket No. 3571].

<sup>4</sup> All capitalized terms used but not defined in this Preliminary Statement have the meanings given to them below.

imposed on the judicial system, the havoc wrought, and the damage inflicted on himself, Highland's creditors, and even his own steadfast loyalists.

3. The Renewed Motion is Movants'<sup>5</sup> third attempt to recuse this Court from all matters relating to Highland's bankruptcy. Like Movants' Initial and Supplemental Motions to recuse, it is untimely, replete with factual misstatements and omissions, premised on final orders or orders upheld on appeal, and must be denied.

4. The Initial Motion was filed on March 18, 2021—(a) sixteen months after the Petition Date, (b) fourteen months after venue was transferred to this Court, (c) one month after entry of the Confirmation Order, (d) just before the first contempt hearing, and (e) after more than 2,000 documents were filed on the main docket.<sup>6</sup> The Supplemental Motion was filed on July 19, 2022—(a) twenty-two months after the Petition Date, (b) twenty months after venue was transferred, (c) eleven months after entry of the Confirmation Order, (d) five months after the District Court denied Movants' appeal of the Initial Motion, and (e) after more than 3,400 documents were filed on the main docket, all in an effort to prevent this Court from adjudicating the Kirschner Adversary. Now, nearly three years after Highland's bankruptcy proceeding was transferred to this Court, Movants—for the third time—complain that this Court is biased against Mr. Dondero—as if no other judge or fact-finder had previously ruled against him and the entities he controls.

5. Movants' Renewed Motion largely regurgitates the “evidence” in the untimely Initial Motion; namely, snippets of out-of-context quotes and eight rulings out of the hundreds entered by this Court (some of which have now been affirmed by the appellate courts). However, Movants do cite to five additional orders as “new” evidence of this Court’s alleged bias. Like the old evidence, the “new” evidence is untimely<sup>7</sup> and fails to support any credible claim of bias or prejudice.

---

<sup>6</sup> This does not include hundreds of docket entries in adversary proceedings in which Mr. Dondero and/or his affiliates were parties.

6. Movants thus failed to seek disqualification “at the earliest possible moment.” They instead sat on their hands for almost a year and a half before filing the Initial Motion (and substantially longer before filing the Supplemental and Renewed Motions) after supposedly concluding that this Court was biased. As this Court previously ruled, Movants’ indefensible delay in seeking recusal is fatal, and the Renewed Motion, like the Initial Motion, must be denied as untimely. The Renewed Motion also fails on the merits—largely for the same reasons the Initial Motion did. Movants have not, and cannot, meet their heavy burden of proving this Court is biased or somehow prejudiced against Movants. Seen in context, the record demonstrates that (a) numerous courts and tribunals have consistently ruled against Mr. Dondero and his enterprise, thereby demonstrating that this Court does not stand alone, (b) this Court’s rulings and orders are sound (and have largely been upheld on appeal), (c) there is no evidence presented of extrajudicial bias or prejudice, and (d) no objective person would find that Mr. Dondero and his enterprise are the victims of improper judicial conduct rising to the extraordinary remedy of recusal. Mr. Dondero’s desire to re-litigate the record using the Renewed Motion is both unavailing and procedurally improper.

7. Further, this Court, respectfully, cannot grant Movants’ alternative request to “make clear that any order denying recusal is final so that Movants may appeal the Court’s order to the Northern District of Texas.” This request is precluded by the District Court’s February

Order dismissing Movants’ appeal of the denial of the Initial Motion; as Movants concede, this Court simply lacks the authority to unilaterally determine that its orders are final and appealable. And, while this Court could remove the reservation of rights from its Recusal Order, it cannot force the District Court to hear an appeal of that interlocutory order.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

I. General Background to the Bankruptcy Case

8. On October 16, 2019 (the “Petition Date”), Mr. Dondero caused Highland to file a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the “Delaware Court”). The Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of Highland’s bankruptcy case to this Court [Docket No. 186]<sup>8</sup> on December 4, 2019.

9. On February 22, 2021, this Court, over the objections of Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates, entered the Order Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and (ii) Granting Related Relief [Docket No. 1943] (the “Confirmation Order”), which confirmed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [Docket No. 1808] (the “Plan”). The Plan became effective on August 11, 2021 [Docket No. 2700].

10. On September 8, 2022, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (the “Fifth Circuit”) affirmed, in material part, the Confirmation Order’s factual findings and legal conclusions. NexPoint Advisors, L.P., et al. v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 25107 (5th Cir. Sept. 7, 2022).

II. Movants' Initial Motion Is Denied

11. On March 18, 2021, Movants—Mr. Dondero and entities he controls<sup>9</sup>—filed their motion to recuse this Court [Docket Nos. 2060, 2061, 2062] (the “Initial Motion”).<sup>10</sup> The Initial Motion asked this Court to recuse itself from any adversary proceedings and future contested matters involving Movants or any entity connected to Mr. Dondero.

12. On March 23, 2021, this Court denied the Initial Motion [Docket No. 2083] (the “Recusal Order”) finding that “the timing does not seem to pass muster.” The Initial Motion (a) “was filed more than 15 months after” this case was transferred to this Court; (b) “comes after many dozens of orders have been issued by the [Bankruptcy] Court,” and (c) “comes on the eve of a contempt hearing.”<sup>11</sup> Recusal Order at 7. This Court further found that, even if the Initial Motion had been timely, recusal was not warranted on the merits.<sup>12</sup> Accordingly, this Court determined, in an exercise of its discretion, that Movants’ assertions did not “rise to the threshold standard of <sup>11</sup> On June 7, 2021, Mr. Dondero was held in contempt for violating this Court’s injunction. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 1533 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jun. 7, 2021). Mr. Dondero subsequently appealed this Court’s ruling. On August 17, 2022, the District Court affirmed this Court’s findings in all material respects. Order, Case No. 3:21-cv-01590-N, Docket No. 42 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2021). Ex. 1, Appx. 1-14. Notably, Movants do not contend that this Court’s contempt order is evidence of its bias.

<sup>12</sup> This Court noted that Movants’ allegations of “extrajudicial” bias resulting from the Acis Bankruptcy (defined below) were “at the heart of the” Initial Motion (Recusal Order at 7) but explained it did not form any animus or bias toward Movants during the Acis Bankruptcy and concluded that any knowledge learned from the Acis Bankruptcy did not constitute “extrajudicial” knowledge warranting recusal. Id. This Court also found that “more generally,” it did not harbor, and has not shown, any “personal bias or prejudice” against Movants. Recusal Order at 10. This Court explained that it “has merely addressed motions, objections and other pleadings as they have been presented,” and “has issued and enforced orders where requested and warranted.” Id. “This court and all courts sometimes use strong words as part of managing a complex and contentious case. None of this should be interpreted as ‘bias’ or ‘prejudice ... clashes between a court and counsel for a party [are] an insufficient basis for disqualification under Section 455.’” Id. (citations omitted). This Court stated it has “the utmost respect for [Movants]” and has “no disrespect for Mr. Dondero on a personal level or any of the [Movants].” Id.

raising a doubt in the mind of a reasonable observer as to” this Court’s impartiality.<sup>13</sup> (Id. at 10).

III. Movants’ Appeal of the Recusal Order Is Dismissed

13. Movants appealed the Recusal Order to the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “District Court”) on April 1, 2021.<sup>14</sup> On June 28, 2021, Movants filed their appellate brief<sup>15</sup> (a) arguing the Initial Motion was “timely” and (b) otherwise restating their baseless arguments that this Court is prejudiced and biased and exhibits antagonism towards Movants. On July 28, 2021, Highland filed its appellate brief (the “Highland Brief”).<sup>16</sup> Exs. 5-6, Appx. 184-2048.

14. On December 10, 2021, the District Court, sua sponte, issued an order questioning the finality of the Recusal Order, directing supplemental briefing, and observing that this Court “expressly ‘reserve[d] the right to supplement or amend’” the Recusal Order. Ex. 9, Appx. 2069-2073. On December 15, 2021, Movants filed their supplemental brief. Ex. 10, Appx. 2074-2084. Highland filed its supplemental brief on December 20, 2021. Ex. 11, Appx. 2085-2097).

15. On February 9, 2022, the District Court denied Movants’ appeal finding that under clear Fifth Circuit precedent, the Recusal Order was per se interlocutory, could only be reviewed upon final judgment, and was not subject to the collateral order doctrine (the “February Order”).<sup>17</sup>

---

<sup>13</sup> Movants contend that “the Court ... applied a subjective standard [in the Recusal Order], based entirely on self-assessment.” Renewed Motion at 1. This contention is spurious and belied by this Court’s explicit statements to the contrary. See, e.g., Ex. 2, Appx. 31-32 (“And the standard is I have to stand back and look at what a reasonable person have concerns here. So I can’t just say, I know I’m not biased, I don’t think I’m biased; I have to look at what a reasonable person might think. So you presented to me a 2,722-page appendix for me to do my job and look at what a reasonable person would think. So, then would it raise a doubt in the mind of a reasonable observer as to the judge’s impartiality?”).

<sup>16</sup> The District Court granted Highland’s motion to intervene over Movants’ objection. Exs. 7-8, Appx. 2049-2064.

<sup>17</sup> The February Order did not rely on this Court’s reservation of rights in its analysis but simply held that the Recusal Order, like all orders denying recusal, was interlocutory and could not be appealed until a final judgment in this case, which the record reflected had not—and still has not—occurred. See Ex. 36, Appx. 4165-4169.

The District Court also rejected Movants' arguments that (a) a different standard of finality applied in bankruptcy proceedings and (b) the Recusal Order was appealable under the "collateral order doctrine." Id. Appx. 2105-2106.<sup>18</sup>

16. Movants did not appeal the February Order or file a petition for rehearing.

IV. Movants File the Supplemental Motion

17. On July 20, 2022, more than five months after the District Court entered the February Order, Movants filed their supplemental motion to recuse this Court [Docket No. 3406] (the "Supplemental Motion") asking this Court to enter a final, appealable version of the Recusal Order (implying this Court could dictate to the District Court that its orders are appealable and could do so by deleting the reservation of rights from the Recusal Order).<sup>19</sup> Movants also sought to introduce new "examples" of this Court's bias "to preserve their record for appeal and to ensure that all potential grounds for recusal may be considered by an appellate court." Supplemental Motion ¶ 8.

18. On August 15, 2022, Highland objected [Docket No. 3444] (the "Highland Objection") arguing that (a) this Court lacked the authority to determine whether the Recusal Order was final; (b) the Supplemental Motion was procedurally improper as it required (i) a motion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ("FRCP") 54(b) or (ii) an entirely new motion predicated solely on Movants' "new" examples of bias; and (c) Movants' new "examples" of bias were meritless. The Highland Objection included an extensive, annotated chart [Docket No. 3444-1] proving that Movants' new "examples" (a) were premised on material distortions or omissions of (i) fact, (ii)

<sup>18</sup> The District Court also ruled on Movants' request for leave to appeal an interlocutory order (i.e., the Recusal Order) under 28 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3). After a lengthy analysis, the District Court held that Movants "failed to satisfy any of the three § 1292(b) criteria" and denied Movants' request to appeal the Recusal Order. Ex. 12, Appx. 2106-2110.

<sup>19</sup> Supplemental Motion ¶ 6 ("On appeal of the [Recusal Order] ... Judge Kinkeade dismissed the appeal, holding that the [Recusal Order] was non-final and non-appealable. In doing so, Judge Kinkeade pointed to language in the [Recusal Order] in which the Court expressly 'reserve[d] the right to amend or supplement' its ruling.")

this Court’s rulings, and/or (iii) statements on the record and (b) viewed fairly, were not the product of bias, prejudice, or lack of impartiality.

19. On August 22, 2022, Movants filed their reply seeking to have their Supplemental Motion treated as a motion to supplement the record pursuant to FRCP 54 and, again, reiterating their procedurally and substantively improper request that this Court “amend the [Recusal Order] to make it final.” [Docket No. 3463].

V. The Court Holds a Status Conference

20. On August 31, 2022, this Court held a status conference on the Supplemental Motion during which it asked Movants to clarify their position, the relief requested, and the procedural basis for that relief.<sup>20</sup> Movants responded that, notwithstanding the confusion caused by their procedurally and substantively deficient Supplemental Motion, they were seeking two things: (a) removal of the reservation of rights from the Recusal Order and (b) supplementation of the appellate record. At the Status Conference, Highland stated that it was not opposed to Movants’ requested relief per se but would not consent to Movants’ procedurally improper request to have this Court designate the Recusal Order “final.” Ex. 2, Appx. 29.

21. Ultimately, on September 1, 2022, this Court denied the Supplemental Motion as “procedurally improper” but allowed Movants to file “(1) a simple motion ... seeking only a revised and amended Recusal Order that removes” the reservation of rights or “(2) a new motion to recuse ... based on any alleged new evidence or grounds for recusal that were not considered ... at the time of [this Court’s] consideration of the original Recusal Order” [Docket No. 3479] (the “September Order”).

<sup>20</sup> On August 19, 2022, this Court entered an order [Docket No. 3462] converting the hearing on the Supplemental Motion to a status conference and requiring Movants to clarify the legal and procedural basis for the Supplemental Motion.

VI. Movants File the Renewed Motion

22. On September 27, 2022, Movants filed the First Renewed Motion—their third motion to recuse—and amended it on October 17, 2022. In the Renewed Motion, Movants incorporate the entirety of the Initial Motion by reference (Renewed Motion at n. 11)<sup>21</sup> and ask this Court to recuse itself. In the alternative, Movants reiterate their improper request that this Court “make clear that any order denying recusal is final so that Movants may appeal the Court’s order to the Northern District of Texas.” Id. at 24.

23. The Renewed Motion, and the relief it requests, thus violates this Court’s September Order.<sup>22</sup>

24. Moreover, like the Initial and Supplemental Motions, the Renewed Motion is untimely and is, again, premised on material distortions or omissions of fact, this Court’s rulings, and/or statements on the record. In the Renewed Motion, Movants argue the following are a basis to recuse this Court:

- This Court’s knowledge gained during the 2019 Acis Bankruptcy (defined below);
- The February 2020 hearing on Highland’s retention of Foley Gardere, Foley & Lardner LLP (“Foley”);
- The June 2020 hearing regarding the release of approximately $2.5 million from the court registry;

<sup>21</sup> In contrast, the Renewed Motion does not incorporate the Supplemental Motion or cite to the “examples” of this Court’s bias included therein nor does it include certain of the “examples” of bias raised in the appeal of the Recusal Order. Consequently, Movants have waived their right to rely on those un-cited “examples” of alleged bias and Highland will not address them here. Movants’ First Renewed Motion also referenced an Appendix A which allegedly “list[ed] many other, similar examples” of this Court’s bias. First Renewed Motion at 6 n.27. However, Movants amended the First Renewed Motion to eliminate footnote 27 and the reference to Appendix A. Docket No. 3571. Highland reserves all rights to object if Movants ever seek to rely on any alleged “examples” of bias not specifically identified or incorporated in the Renewed Motion.

<sup>22</sup> On August 31, 2022, this Court stated from the bench that Movants could file (a) a simple motion to remove the reservation of rights under FRCP 54 or (b) “a new motion to recuse ... to start this over and supplement the record.” Ex. 2, Appx. 39. Based on the entirety of the August 31, 2022, transcript and the clear language of the September Order, however, it is clear that this Court did not intend Movants to re-argue the entirety of the Initial Motion.

- The July 2020 hearing at which this Court inquired as to whether Highland had received PPP loans;
- The December 2020 hearing on the Dondero Parties' (defined below) attempt to halt Highland's trading in the CLOs;
- The January 2021 injunction prohibiting the Dondero Parties from interfering with Highland's management of the CLOs;
- The January 2021 motion to appoint an examiner filed by Dugaboy and Get Good, Mr. Dondero's family trusts, and joined by Mr. Dondero;
- The February 2021 confirmation hearing and Confirmation Order;
- The January 2021, May 2021, and July 2021 orders requiring Mr. Dondero and Dugaboy, respectively, to appear at certain hearings;
- The May 2021 denial, in part, of Mr. Dondero's motion to compel the deposition testimony of James P. Seery, Jr.;
- The August 2021 order finding certain Movants and others in contempt for violation of this Court's orders; and
- The September 2022 hearing denying HCRE's motion to withdraw its proof of claim.

Of the foregoing "examples," twelve are orders entered by this Court. Movants appealed only two of those orders; the appellate courts denied both appeals and affirmed this Court's orders. All Movants' "examples" (other than the August 2021 contempt order and the September 2022 denial of claim withdrawal) were previously asserted by Movants in either the Initial Motion or Supplemental Motion and debunked as false by Highland at great expense.<sup>23</sup> Yet, Movants double down on these "examples" as if they were true and ignore Highland's detailed factual corrections.

25. Ultimately, the Renewed Motion, like Movants' prior attempts to recuse, provides no credible evidence of this Court's bias, prejudice, or lack of impartiality and, like the Initial Motion which it largely duplicates, should be summarily denied.

ADDITIONAL BACKGROUND

I. Multiple Courts Have Questioned Mr. Dondero's Conduct or Sanctioned Him and His Controlled Entities

26. Between 2008 and the Petition Date, courts and arbitration panels in multiple domestic and foreign jurisdictions issued a plethora of judgments and orders against Mr. Dondero, Highland, and other entities then under Mr. Dondero's control.<sup>24</sup>

27. For example, in March 2019, a blue-ribbon arbitration panel issued a 56-page decision in which it (a) rejected nearly every argument advanced by Highland and made highly critical assessments of the credibility of Highland's witnesses; (b) found Highland had breached its fiduciary duties to its investors, breached certain agreements, and engaged in other wrongful conduct; and (c) rendered an award against Highland in excess of $150 million.<sup>25</sup> Just two months later, in an unrelated case, the Delaware Chancery Court found that the Dondero-related defendants improperly withheld dozens of documents in discovery on privilege grounds and ruled that there was "a reasonable basis to believe that a fraud has been perpetrated" such that the Chancery Court applied the "crime-fraud exception" to the attorney-client privilege.<sup>26</sup>

<sup>25</sup> See Partial Final Award rendered in the arbitration captioned Redeemer Comm. of the Highland Crusader Fund v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 01-16-0002-6927. Ex. 13, Appx. 2113-2175. The Partial Final Award was incorporated into the arbitration panel's final award (Ex. 14, Appx. 2176-2199), and a hearing in the Delaware Chancery Court to have the award confirmed was about to begin when Mr. Dondero caused Highland to file for bankruptcy protection for the purpose of gaining the protection of the automatic stay.

<sup>26</sup> Daugherty v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P., C.A. No. 2018-0488-MTZ, May 17, 2019 transcript (bench ruling on motion to compel production of documents) at 10-15. Ex. 15, Appx. 2210-2215. The Dondero-related defendants made three desperate but unsuccessful attempts to overturn or stay the Chancery Court's rulings. See Order Denying Application to Certify Interlocutory Appeal, entered in C.A. No. 2018-0488-MTZ on July 8, 2019 ¶ K-L. Ex. 16, Appx. 2303-2304.

28. The adverse rulings against Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities are legion<sup>27</sup>— and have resulted in the imposition of judgments and awards totaling more than $1 billion (inclusive of interest). This Court had no involvement in any of these cases (except, in certain cases, to adjudicate proposed claim settlements under Bankruptcy Rule 9019).

29. This Court’s experience with Mr. Dondero and Highland began in January 2018, when it was assigned a case captioned In re Acis Capital Management, L.P. (the “Acis Bankruptcy”).<sup>28</sup> The Acis Bankruptcy was involuntarily commenced by Joshua Terry, a former Highland executive who had obtained an $8 million arbitration award against the Acis entities then under Mr. Dondero’s control, but who could not collect on the judgment because Mr. Dondero allegedly orchestrated a fraudulent transfer of assets that left the Acis debtors judgment proof. Mr. Dondero and Mr. Terry were the chief antagonists in the highly contested Acis Bankruptcy, and this Court made numerous credibility findings against Mr. Dondero and his associates before confirming a plan of reorganization that effectively transferred control of a valuable business from Mr. Dondero and Highland to Mr. Terry.<sup>29</sup> Mr. Dondero and entities controlled by him appealed

---

<sup>27</sup> Movants argue that, prior to the bankruptcy, Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities were merely defendants in litigation (Renewed Motion at 2) and that Mr. Dondero had never been held personally “liable for any misconduct in relation to his management of [Highland’s] business” (Id.). Movants ignore that each Movant is controlled by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Dondero’s controlled entities have incurred significant liability to third parties at Mr. Dondero’s direction and under his oversight. In any event, as relevant here, there is no dispute that—regardless of whether he or an entity he controlled was the plaintiff or the defendant—numerous tribunals entered a string of adverse orders and judgments just as this Court has. Again, the problem is not this Court; it is that Mr. Dondero and his loyalists advance meritless positions and therefore lack credibility.

II. Highland Files Bankruptcy; the Case Is Transferred to this Court

30. With various judgment creditors bearing down, on October 16, 2019, Mr. Dondero caused Highland to file this case in the Delaware Court hoping it would be a more hospitable forum. Less than two weeks later, on November 1, 2019, the Committee sought to transfer the case to this Court [Docket No. 86] (the “Transfer Motion”). Ex. 21, Appx. 2637-2796. The Committee set out its intentions in filing the Transfer Motion:

[T]he Dallas Bankruptcy Court is already intimately familiar with the Debtor’s principals and complex organizational structure [because the Acis Bankruptcy is pending in that Court]. Specifically, the Dallas Bankruptcy Court has (a) heard multiple days’ worth of material testimony from the Debtor’s principal owner (James Dondero), the Debtor’s minority owner (Mark Okada), the Debtor’s general counsel, at least two assistant general counsels, and numerous other employees of the Debtor and other witnesses; and (b) issued at least six published opinions . . . [This Court is] intimately familiar with the Debtor’s business, principal owner, and key executives. For these reasons, the Dallas Bankruptcy Court is uniquely positioned to oversee this chapter 11 case.

Id. Appx. 2639.

31. The Delaware Court agreed. At a December 2, 2019 hearing, the Delaware Court stated that it would grant the Transfer Motion, reasoning:

This is a unique case . . . [T]his case is very focused on responding to existing [Acis] litigation. And that existing litigation of a former affiliate, as of a few months ago, and a pending appeal that could make it a current affiliate, is located in the Northern District of Texas. The [Bankruptcy Court] has done a tremendous amount of work and has . . . issued a number of opinions, had a number of trials. That work creates a familiarity with the facts, issues, and players in a case ....

---

<sup>30</sup> See (a) Opinion affirming Confirmation Order Case, No. 3:19-cv-00291-D, Docket No. 75 (N.D. Tex. July 18, 2019), Ex. 19, Appx. 2547-2631; (b) Opinion affirming Confirmation Order, Case No. 19-10847 (5th Cir. June 17, 2021), Ex. 20, Appx. 2632-2636.

See Ex. 22, Appx. 2905-2906. Mr. Dondero and Movants knew on December 2, 2019 they were being sent back to the very Court that took a serious and informed view of Mr. Dondero and his associates. Indeed, that is exactly why Highland (then under Mr. Dondero's control) opposed the Transfer Motion. [Docket No. 122].

32. Fully cognizant that he would soon face this Court, which had substantial knowledge of (some of) his business practices, Mr. Dondero never caused Highland to appeal the Delaware Court's order granting the Transfer Motion or seek this Court's recusal on the basis of bias or prejudice (at least not until March 2021, more than fourteen months after he was forced to relinquish control of Highland).

III. The Basis for Recusal Asserted in the Renewed Motion

33. As set forth above, on September 27, 2022—nearly three years after this case was transferred to this Court and seven months after the District Court entered the February Order—Movants filed the Renewed Motion restating the request that this Court recuse itself relying on much of the same “evidence” set forth in the Initial Motion. Like the Initial Motion, the Renewed Motion is untimely and premised on a mischaracterization of facts, cherry-picked and out-of-context quotations, and a willful ignorance of the considerable evidence supporting each of the orders at issue.

A. The December 2019 Transfer Motion

34. Movants argue that the risk of prejudice to Mr. Dondero was first noted when this case was filed in the Delaware Court, citing comments made during the hearing on the Transfer Motion by Highland's counsel about this Court's pre-existing, negative view of Mr. Dondero from the Acis Bankruptcy and resulting “baggage.” Renewed Motion at 5-6; Initial Motion ¶¶ 4-5. As noted supra, Mr. Dondero controlled Highland and directed its counsel to oppose the Transfer Motion on this basis during the December 2, 2019 hearing. The Delaware Court rejected this argument and in fact relied on this Court's extensive familiarity with the parties as one of the bases for transferring venue of this case to this Court. Ex. 22, Appx. 2905.

35. No party appealed the order transferring venue to this Court.

B. The January 2020 Settlement Hearing

36. Movants cite to this Court's comments made during a January 9, 2020, hearing as evidence of this Court's alleged bias toward Mr. Dondero resulting from the Acis Bankruptcy. Renewed Motion at 6; Initial Motion ¶¶ 9-13. This hearing occurred fourteen months prior to the Initial Motion and thirty-three months prior to the Renewed Motion.

37. On January 9, 2020, this Court held an evidentiary hearing on a motion to approve a settlement [Docket No. 281] (the "Settlement Motion") between Highland and its Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the "Committee"), which was necessitated by (a) the Committee's and the Office of the U.S. Trustee's (the "UST") concerns about the integrity of Highland's management (under Mr. Dondero's stewardship) due to its history of self-dealing, creditor-avoidance asset transfers, and other breaches of fiduciary duty and (b) the possibility that the Committee and the UST might seek the appointment of a trustee.

38. Following the hearing, this Court entered an order granting the Settlement Motion [Docket No. 339] (the "Settlement Order").<sup>31</sup> Pursuant to the Settlement Order, Mr. Dondero, Highland's founder and former Chief Executive Officer, voluntarily surrendered control of Highland to an independent board of three directors, Russell Nelms, John Dubel, and James P. Seery, Jr. (the "Independent Board"). The Settlement Order directed Mr. Dondero not to "cause any Related Entity to terminate any agreements with the Debtor." Id. at ¶ 9. In finding that this "language is very important" to protect Highland, this Court noted that in the Acis Bankruptcy,

<sup>31</sup> Notwithstanding the Settlement Order, the UST still sought to appoint a chapter 11 trustee [Docket No. 271].

Mr. Dondero was “surreptitiously liquidating funds” and “doing things behind the scenes that were impacting the value of Highland in a bad way.” Ex. 23, Appx. 3015. Notwithstanding Movants’ implications that this language unfairly targeted Mr. Dondero, Mr. Dondero did not object to the inclusion of this language in the Settlement Order and, in fact, affirmatively approved and signed off on the Settlement Order and the documents which effectuated it.

39. No party appealed the Settlement Order.

C. The February 19, 2020 Application-to-Employ Hearing

40. Movants cite to the February 19, 2020 hearing on Highland’s application to retain Foley as special Texas counsel [Docket No. 68] (the “Foley Application”) as another manifestation of this Court’s “early distrust” of and “predisposition against” Mr. Dondero. Renewed Motion at 6-8; Initial Motion ¶¶ 14-15. This hearing occurred thirteen months prior to filing the Initial Motion and thirty-one months prior to filing the Renewed Motion.

41. Movants argue that this Court discounted the testimony of Russell Nelms—an Independent Board member—concerning Highland’s business judgment and the need to retain Foley and “sua sponte expressed a belief (untethered to evidence) that Mr. Dondero may have used his ‘powers of persuasion’ to unduly influence the Independent Board’s business judgment.” Renewed Motion at 7; see also Initial Motion ¶¶ 14-16. Movants’ further note this Court’s “unsolicited commentary” regarding Highland’s litigiousness—not Mr. Dondero’s—and that of its past officers and directors as further evidence of this Court’s predisposition against Mr. Dondero. Renewed Motion at 7. Movants mischaracterize the facts of this hearing.

42. First, as set forth above, Highland had a history and culture of litigiousness while under Mr. Dondero's control.<sup>32</sup> That culture was necessarily propagated by human beings, not corporate entities, and the suggestion that Mr. Dondero—the person with sole authority over Highland and its employees—can shift the blame for Highland's litigiousness from himself to those employees is extremely disingenuous. This Court's observations were accurate.

43. Second, Movants are wrong about the Foley Application. Through the Foley Application, Highland sought to retain Foley on behalf of both Highland and a non-Debtor entity, Neutra Ltd. ("Neutra"), in the appeal of the Acis confirmation order and related matters (the "Acis Appeal"). In support of the Foley Application, Highland disclosed that: (a) Neutra was owned by Mr. Dondero and his partner, Mark Okada, and (b) Highland intended to pay for Foley's representation of Neutra in the Acis Appeal.<sup>33</sup> The Committee and Acis objected to the Foley Application on the ground that Highland should not be permitted to use estate assets to support Neutra, a Dondero-controlled entity. [Docket No. 120]

44. Mr. Nelms testified in support of the Foley Application but was subject to a lengthy cross-examination which undermined Highland's arguments. Ex. 24, Appx. 3086-3142. This Court approved Highland's retention of Foley but determined that the evidence was insufficient to justify expending estate assets to pay Neutra's legal fees, a non-Debtor entity in which Highland

<sup>32</sup> In light of the substantial orders and judgments entered against Highland and other entities controlled by Mr. Dondero in other forums, Movants' attempt "to play the victim" is absurd. Renewed Motion at 7 n.30. Movants also imply that Highland, while under the control of the Independent Board, was equally litigious as it had objected to proofs of claim filed in this bankruptcy. Again, Movants ignore the facts, including that, postpetition, Highland actually settled the claims against its estate.

<sup>33</sup> Highland justified its payment of Neutra's fees under 11 U.S.C. § 330 (which does not allow the payment of non-debtor legal fees) by arguing, inter alia, that if Neutra were successful in its appeal of the involuntary petition entered in the Acis Bankruptcy (a) the Acis Bankruptcy would be unwound, (b) the equity in Acis would return to Highland, (c) Highland would regain the benefit of certain management fees that were otherwise being paid to Acis for the benefit of its new owner, Mr. Terry, and (d) Highland would have negotiating leverage with respect to Acis' $75 million claim against Highland's estate. Ex. 24, Appx. 3180-3181; Docket Nos. 69, 165.

held no interest. Id. Appx. 3204-3209. This Court’s ruling on the Foley Application was not, as Movants contend, a magnification of this Court’s “early distrust” of Mr. Dondero or evidence of bias towards him. Renewed Motion at 7. Rather, it was based on its determination that Highland failed to prove that the estate would benefit by paying a non-Debtor’s legal fees, as required by applicable law.

45. No party appealed this Court’s denial of the Foley Application.

D. The June 2020 CLO HoldCo, Ltd., Hearing

46. Movants argue this Court’s animus towards Mr. Dondero is evidenced by its rulings with respect to CLO HoldCo, Ltd. (“CLOH”), a wholly owned subsidiary of the “Charitable” Donor Advised Fund, Ltd. (the “DAF”), and its questioning CLOH’s good faith in filing its motion in April 2020 [Docket No. 590] seeking release of $2.5 million from the court registry. Again, Movants’ arguments are premised on factual inaccuracies.<sup>34</sup>

47. First, neither CLOH nor the DAF are Movants, and Movants make no effort to explain how alleged bias towards CLOH or the DAF constitutes bias towards Movants. This is perplexing. Movants argue at length (see ¶¶ 81-87 infra) that this Court’s factual findings regarding Mr. Dondero’s control over CLOH and the DAF are baseless and are themselves examples of bias. Movants cannot have it both ways. Either CLOH and the DAF are controlled by Mr. Dondero or they are not.<sup>35</sup>

48. Second, Movants ignore that the $2.5 million was deposited into the court registry at CLOH’s request. The Settlement Order implemented certain operating protocols [Docket Nos.

<sup>34</sup> Movants had initially argued that this Court was biased because it “has not released [the $2.5 million] to CLO HoldCo.” First Renewed Motion at 8. That statement is not true. Movants amended the First Renewed Motion to correct this error but elected not to correct any of the myriad other factual errors.

<sup>35</sup> This statement is rhetorical; there is clear evidence that Mr. Dondero controls the DAF and CLOH. Movants’ attempt to hide behind corporate forms is a further example of Mr. Dondero’s misuse of his controlled entities and abuse of the judicial process.

354, 466], which prohibited distributions (a) from Highland or entities managed by Highland (b) to certain “Related Entities,” such as CLOH. On February 24, 2020, Highland filed a motion seeking authority to cause two of its managed funds to make distributions to CLOH and Mark Okada—both “Related Entities.” The Committee objected, arguing, among other things, the distributions to CLOH should be offset against amounts CLOH owed to Highland. [Docket No. 624] At the March 4, 2020, hearing on the motion, CLOH’s counsel asked this Court to resolve Highland’s motion by depositing the funds directly into the court’s registry.<sup>36</sup> This Court, with the consent of the Committee, adopted CLOH’s proposal and entered an order requiring the $2.5 million be deposited into the court’s registry. Despite its conduct in March, CLOH filed a motion with this Court seeking the release of the $2.5 million from the registry in April 2020—less than one month later. [Docket No. 590] CLOH’s April motion to release the funds was vigorously opposed by the Committee. [Docket No. 624]

49. Consequently, there was evidence of CLOH’s bad faith—CLOH entered into a settlement in open court and then attempted to unwind that settlement a month later. But despite CLOH’s conduct, this Court, again, did not leave it without a remedy or deny its motion outright. Instead, this Court entered an order that provided for the release of the $2.5 million to CLOH

We’d like to suggest the following should the Court determine that the motion should be denied. And that is that instead of the debtor retaining the funds, that the debtor distribute the funds into the registry of the Court. That way, they lose control over the funds and they can say that they’ve distributed them in accordance with their agreements and applicable law.

The funds would remain there until either a recipient or prospective recipient posts a bond or other suitable collateral or the Creditors Committee agrees to the distribution to the insider or there is a Court entered for another reason after a showing made before Your Honor. The debtor and the Creditors Committee would, of course, retain all rights to seek the funds they would have had, which rights they would have had immediately before the distribution to the registry, plus any rights that would be gained by reason of the distribution itself.

The debtor thus distributes, the Creditors Committee retains its rights, the Court retains control, and this can all be done, we believe, by a Court order and we hope this may give the Court a suitable alternative.

See also id. Appx. 3262.

unless the Committee fixed the procedural deficiencies in its objection by filing an adversary proceeding to enjoin the release of the money from the registry. [Docket No. 825] CLOH and the Committee subsequently resolved the Committee’s objection,<sup>37</sup> and the $2.5 million was released to CLOH pursuant to this Court’s order in October 2021. [Docket No. 2946]

E. The July 2020 Exclusivity Hearing

50. Movants bizarrely contend that this Court’s inquiries into COVID-related “PPP loans” at a July 8, 2020, hearing was evidence of bias against Mr. Dondero. Renewed Motion at 8-9; Initial Motion ¶ 52. That hearing occurred nine months prior to the Initial Motion and twenty-eight months prior to the Renewed Motion. As fully disclosed by this Court, the inquiries were prompted by an extrajudicial source (a newspaper article) that purportedly noted that “Mr. Dondero or affiliates” received PPP loans. Because of the vagueness of the article, this Court sought information about Highland—not Movants—and ordered Highland to disclose any PPP loans it had received. Highland responded to the Court at a subsequent hearing that Highland had not obtained any PPP loans. Neither Mr. Dondero nor any of his affiliated entities were directed to provide any information, no action was taken against them, and the issue was never raised again. Movants’ attempt to falsely recast this event is emblematic of the lack of merit—and candor—in the Renewed Motion.

F. The December 2020 Restriction Motion

51. Movants cite this Court’s comments and rulings at the conclusion of an evidentiary hearing held on December 16, 2020 (the “December Hearing”) on Movants’ motion to restrict Highland’s contractual right to manage its CLOs [Docket No. 1522] (the “Restriction Motion”) as evidence of bias. Movants argue this Court improperly (a) denied their Restriction Motion as

---

<sup>37</sup> Stipulation and [Proposed] Order Regarding Registry Funds and Dismissal of Motion for Preliminary Injunction, Adv. Pro. No. 20-03195-sgj, Docket No. 89.

“frivolous,” despite it being filed in “good faith” and (b) found that Mr. Dondero was behind the filing of the Restriction Motion. Renewed Motion at 9-10; Initial Motion ¶¶ 18-26.

52. The December Hearing occurred four months prior to the Initial Motion and twenty-two months prior to the Renewed Motion.

53. In their Restriction Motion, the movants (i.e., the Advisors and certain investment funds managed by the Advisors (the “Retail Funds,” and with the Advisors, the (“Dondero Parties”)) asked this Court to “impose a temporary restriction on Highland’s ability, as portfolio manager, to cause CLOs to sell assets.” Restriction Motion ¶ 17. The Dondero Parties called as their only witness Dustin Norris, the Executive Vice President of each of the Dondero Parties. During the December Hearing, Mr. Norris made the following admissions:

i Highland Had the Exclusive Contractual Right to Buy and Sell CLO Assets

- Highland is the portfolio manager for each of the CLOs in which the Advisors caused the Retail Funds to invest (Ex. 26, Appx. 3380);
- Highland’s management of the CLOs is governed by written agreements (id. Appx. 3380-3381);
- None of the Dondero Parties is a party to Highland’s CLO management agreements (id. Appx. 3381);
- Highland, as the CLO Portfolio Manager, has the responsibility to buy and sell assets on behalf of the CLOs (id. Appx. 3381);
- Nobody other than Highland has any right or authority to buy and sell assets in the CLOs in which the Retail Funds invested (id. Appx. 3381-3382); and
- Holders of preferred CLO shares, such as the Retail Funds, “do not make investment decisions on behalf of the CLOs” and the Advisors knew that when they caused the Retail Funds to make their investments (id. Appx. 3382).

ii The Dondero Parties Did Not Accuse Highland of Any Wrongdoing

- The Dondero Parties did not allege or contend that Highland (a) engaged in fraudulent conduct; (b) breached any agreement by effectuating any transactions; or (c) violated any CLO management agreement (id. Appx. 3388-3389); and

- The Dondero Parties did not question Highland’s business judgment nor could they since they did not know why Highland executed the transactions and never even asked (id. Appx. 3389-3390).

iii Mr. Dondero Controls the Dondero Parties and Caused the Restriction Motion to Be Filed

- Mr. Dondero owns and controls the Advisors (id. Appx. 3367; Appx. 3374-3375);
- The Advisors manage the Retail Funds; Mr. Dondero serves as the Portfolio Manager of each of the Retail Funds and caused the Retail Funds to invest in the CLOs managed by Highland (id. Appx. 3367-3368; Appx. 3375);
- The “whole idea” for the Restriction Motion began with Mr. Dondero (id. Appx. 3368; Appx. 3380); and
- The Retail Funds’ Boards did not authorize the filing of the Restriction Motion (id. Appx. 3376-3377).

iv Mr. Norris Was Not a Competent Witness and Had No Credibility

- Mr. Norris admitted that he does not make investment decisions, is not an investment manager, and has never worked for a CLO (id. Appx. 3378);
- Mr. Norris (a) did not write his Declaration filed in support of the Restriction Motion, (b) did not provide any substantive comments to his Declaration, and (c) relied on the Advisors’ “management” (including Mr. Dondero) for all “key information” in his Declaration (id. Appx. 3379); and
- Mr. Norris did not bother to review the very CLO management agreements the Dondero Parties were seeking to interfere with (id. Appx. 3381).

v Movants Did Not Notify Any Other CLO Investors of the Restriction Motion

- The Dondero Parties hold (a) less than 50% of the preferred interests in 12 of the 15 CLOs at issue, and (b) less than 70% of the preferred interests in the other three CLOs at issue (id. Appx. 3383-3384);
- Yet, the Restriction Motion was pursued solely on behalf of the Dondero Parties and no other holder of interests in the CLOs (id. Appx. 3385);
- The Dondero Parties did not notify any other holder of CLO interests of the Restriction Motion and made no attempt to do so (id. Appx. 3386);
- The Dondero Parties made no attempt to obtain the consent of all of the holders of the preferred shares to seek the relief sought in the Restriction Motion (id. Appx. 3386);

- Mr. Norris did not know whether any other holder of CLO preferred shares wanted the relief sought in the Restriction Motion (id. Appx. 3386);
- Mr. Norris did not know whether Highland’s counterparties in the CLO management agreements (i.e., the CLOs) wanted the relief sought in the Restriction Motion (id. Appx. 3386-3387); and
- Mr. Norris had no personal knowledge of the two transactions described in his Declaration; he testified that he was “very remote” and he didn’t have “much knowledge.” (id. Appx. 3392-3394).

54. Based considerably on Mr. Norris’s testimony, this Court (a) found that there was no factual or legal basis for the Restriction Motion, (b) declared the Restriction Motion “frivolous,” and (c) granted Highland’s motion for a directed verdict. Id. Appx. 3403. While Movants contend this Court improperly “opined that Mr. Dondero was behind the [Restriction Motion] notwithstanding that it was filed by separate and distinct legal entities represented by independent counsel (Renewed Motion at 9), Mr. Norris provided all the evidence the Court needed to reach its conclusion:

Q: The whole idea for this motion initiated with Mr. Dondero; isn’t that right?

A: The concern, yes, the concern originated, and his concern was voiced to our legal and compliance team.

Id. Appx. 3380.<sup>38</sup>

55. The Restriction Motion was a misguided effort by Mr. Dondero and his associates to exert control over Highland and its estate and was frivolous.<sup>39</sup>

56. No party appealed the denial of the Restriction Motion.

<sup>38</sup> See also id. Appx. 3368 (“the initial cause for concern was raised by Mr. Dondero himself”); Appx. 3367 (Mr. Dondero has a control relationship with the Advisors); Appx. 3365 (responsibility for the Retail Funds’ portfolio management and investment decisions are delegated to the Advisors); Appx. 3374-3375 (Mr. Dondero owns and controls the Advisors); Appx. 3376-3377 (the Retail Funds’ Boards did not authorize the filing of the Restriction Motion).

<sup>39</sup> The Restriction Motion largely focused on Mr. Dondero’s efforts to prevent Highland’s managed entities from selling certain securities, including Avaya Holdings Corp. common equity (TICKER: AVYA). Ultimately, and notwithstanding Mr. Dondero’s efforts, more than 2 million shares of AVYA were sold at an average price of $23.26. Since then, AVYA has traded as low as $0.61 and closed on October 28, 2022 at $1.46.

G. The January 2021 Hearing on Highland’s Motion for Injunctive Relief

57. Not chastened by the debacle of the December Hearing, Mr. Dondero caused the Advisors and Retails Funds to continue interfering with, and unjustifiably threatening, Highland. Consequently, on January 6, 2021, Highland filed its Verified Original Complaint for Declaratory and Injunctive Relief against the Advisors and Retail Funds (Adv. Pro. No. 21-03000-sgj, Docket No. 1) seeking injunctive relief after they interfered with Highland’s trading activities and sent Highland a flurry of written correspondence (the “K&L Gates Letters”) (Exs. 27-28, Appx. 3406-3413) threatening to terminate Highland’s CLO management agreements and asserting spurious claims. This Court held an exhaustive evidentiary hearing on the TRO Motion on January 26, 2021 (the “TRO Hearing”), during which it admitted voluminous documentary evidence and assessed the credibility of multiple witnesses, including that of Mr. Dondero. Ex. 29, Appx. 3430-3433; 3456-3613. At the conclusion of the TRO Hearing, this Court determined that the TRO was necessary to protect Highland’s interests pending a hearing on the preliminary injunction. See generally id.

58. The TRO Hearing occurred two months prior to the Initial Motion and twenty-one months prior to the Renewed Motion.

59. Movants cite to two aspects of the TRO Hearing as evidence of this Court’s alleged bias against Mr. Dondero, while ignoring their own misconduct: (a) singling Mr. Dondero out for criticism when, according to Movants, the “evidence was undisputed that Mr. Dondero did not influence or cause the advisors or retail funds to take any action” and (b) approving the TRO when “[i]t was abundantly clear ... that [Highland] could not make the requisite showing for injunctive relief.” Renewed Motion at 10; Initial Motion ¶¶ 27-35. Consistent with much of the Renewed Motion, Movants misrepresent the record by failing to disclose keys facts.

60. First, Movants now admit the K&L Gates Letters were sent for an improper purpose—to procure the same relief sought in the Restriction Motion, relief this Court denied less than a month earlier.<sup>40</sup> That conduct—seeking previously denied relief through alternative means—is quintessentially vexatious and sanctionable conduct. See, e.g., Nix v. Major League Baseball, 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104770, at *58-65 (S.D. Tex. Jun. 13, 2022).

61. Second, the Settlement Order, which Mr. Dondero agreed to, expressly prohibited Mr. Dondero from “caus[ing] any Related Entity to terminate any agreements with the Debtor.” Settlement Order ¶ 9. The evidence established that the Dondero Entities were “Related Entities” for purposes of the Settlement Order,<sup>41</sup> yet the K&L Gates Letters improperly threatened to seek to terminate Highland’s CLO management agreements.

62. Third, Mr. Dondero’s TRO enjoined him from, among other things, “causing, encouraging, or conspiring with (a) any entity owned or controlled by him, and/or (b) any person or entity acting on his behalf, from, directly or indirectly” making express or implied threats against Highland or interfering with Highland’s business. See Order Granting Debtor’s Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order Against James Dondero, Adversary Pro. No. 20-03190-sgj, Docket No. 10. Yet, that is precisely what the evidence showed he did. Ex. 29, Appx. 3456-3521.

63. Given the evidence and the clear and unambiguous orders in effect, it would have been shocking if this Court ignored Mr. Dondero and instead treated the Dondero Parties as if they

---

<sup>40</sup> Initial Motion ¶ 27 (“In December of 2020, due to the Court’s denial of the Restriction Motion, K&L Gates ... exchanged correspondence with counsel for Debtor ... for the following reasons: to reiterate the Advisors’ and the Retail Funds’ objection to the Debtor’s handling of the Retail Funds’ investments; to request, again, that Debtor not liquidate the CLOs; to reserve any rights that the Advisors and the Retail Funds might have against Debtor for failure to maximize the value of the investment as required under the [CLO] Portfolio Management Agreements; and to notify Debtor that the Retail Funds ... intended to initiate the procedure to remove Debtor as fund manager of the CLOs.”) were independent third-party actors. Mr. Dondero controlled (and controls) the Dondero Parties. He clearly “caused” or “encouraged” or “conspired” with them to improperly attempt to re-assert control over Highland. The Court’s focus on Mr. Dondero was entirely justified—particularly when seen in the context of this Court’s pertinent orders which Movants pretend did not exist.

<sup>41</sup> This fact was (a) first established during the December Hearing (see ¶¶ 53-54 supra), (b) was confirmed at the TRO Hearing, and (c) was subsequently admitted to by the Advisors as part of the resolution of the adversary proceeding. See Docket No. 2590, Ex. A ¶ 2(c) (settlement agreement in which each of the Advisors represents and warrants that it (a) is controlled by Mr. Dondero and (b) is a “Related Party” for purposes of paragraph 9 of the Settlement Order).

64. No party appealed the TRO.

H. January 2021 Examiner Motion

65. Movants allege this Court’s bias is manifested in its “repeated disenfranchisement of Movants from [sic] judicial process” and how it has “wielded its scheduling powers ... often preventing any real consideration of legitimate motions filed by Movants.” Renewed Motion at 10-11. Despite Movants’ extremely strong language about the consistency with which this Court has disenfranchised them and abused its powers, Movants only cite to a single alleged example of that conduct: Dugaboy and Get Good’s motion to appoint an examiner [Docket No. 1752] (the “Examiner Motion”) filed on January 14, 2021. Renewed Motion at 10-11. This, again, misstates the facts and is belied by Movants’ own admissions.

66. First, Movants’ allegations about disenfranchisement are false. Movants have been heard multiple times by this Court and appealed a significant number of this Court’s orders. This Court has never prohibited them from doing so or prevented them from being heard notwithstanding their tenuous standing. Confirmation Order ¶¶ 18-19.

67. Second, Movants admit the Examiner Motion, which was not supported by any non-Dondero party,<sup>42</sup> was filed for improper purposes—to force a delay of the long-scheduled Confirmation Hearing (defined below), to collaterally attack this Court’s final orders, and to have Movants’ Plan objections adjudicated away from this Court in a forum deemed more hospitable to

---

<sup>42</sup> The only party to support the Examiner Motion was Mr. Dondero. [Docket No. 1756].

Movants. Initial Motion ¶ 37 (“[W]hen the Trusts made the Examiner Motion, they believed that the motion would cause delay or a continuance of the confirmation hearing on the Plan ....”); Renewed Motion at 11 (“The Trustees sought the appointment of an examiner to address ... (i) the issues raised ... in the Restriction Motion [i.e., a motion this Court had denied a month earlier], [and] (ii) various objections to the proposed [Plan] raised by the advisors, the retail funds, and the [UST].”) Again, quintessentially vexatious.

68. Accordingly, Movants’ claim of prejudice because this Court did not accede to their demands to delay confirmation (contrary to the interests of creditors), collaterally attack its orders, and forum shop is ridiculous, particularly in light of Movants’ unequivocal admission of their actual intent.

69. No party appealed the denial of the Examiner Motion.

I. February 2021 Confirmation Hearing

70. Movants cite to the February 2021 confirmation hearing on the Plan (the “Confirmation Hearing”) to support their argument that this Court was biased. Renewed Motion at 11-13; Initial Motion ¶¶ 38-50. Movants principally contend that during the Confirmation Hearing, this Court: (a) “summarily rejected all of the Plan objections lodged by Movants, decreeing them as filed in bad faith” (Renewed Motion at 12) when such objections were no different than those raised by the UST whose good faith was “not questioned;” (b) found the objections were not asserted in good faith; (c) concluded, “without basis,” that the entity Movants were “controlled by Mr. Dondero”; (d) disregarded witness testimony of Mr. Jason Post on the ground that the witness had left Highland’s employ to work for one of the Advisors; and (e) wrongfully accused of Movants of being “vexatious litigants.” See Initial Motion ¶¶ 38-50.

71. As a threshold matter, Movants simply ignore the Fifth Circuit’s opinion affirming the Confirmation Order in relevant part. In its opinion, the Fifth Circuit expressly upheld this

Court’s factual findings, including some of the very findings Movants’ complain of here, e.g., Mr. Dondero’s control of the Funds and Advisors, Mr. Post’s credibility, and Mr. Dondero’s penchant for litigation. NexPoint Advisors, L.P., 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 25107 at *20-24, 27-37.<sup>43</sup>

72. Substantively, and contrary to Movants’ suggestion, this Court provided Movants with a full and fair opportunity to present and pursue their objections, notwithstanding their tenuous standing. Confirmation Order ¶¶ 18-19. Rather than being “summarily” overruled, this Court conducted a two-day evidentiary hearing during which Movants’ counsel made their arguments and cross-examined witnesses unimpeded. The Court subsequently made detailed findings of fact and conclusions of law in the Confirmation Order supporting the overruling of all the objections, including those of Movants. Movants are obviously unhappy with the Court’s findings and conclusions—which were, again, upheld in material part by the Fifth Circuit—but fail to present any evidence of bias or prejudice arising in connection with confirmation.

73. Finally, Movants’ contention that they were treated differently than the UST disingenuously equates the objectors and is also meritless. Movants asserted spurious objections to (a) plan provisions that had no impact on them as they held no claims in the subject classes (the absolute priority rule); (b) the assumption of certain executory contracts to which they were not party (the actual contract counterparties had consented to assumption of the contracts); and (c) common plan provisions like debtor releases, plan supplements, and a plan injunction. In contrast,

<sup>43</sup> Movants’ allegation that this Court found them to be “vexatious litigants” is contrary to the record. This Court did not find or conclude that Movants are “vexatious litigants.” Rather, this Court determined that Mr. Dondero’s litigation history supported the inclusion of a gatekeeper provision in the Plan. See Confirmation Order ¶¶ 80-81; Ex. 30, Appx. 3717-3719. Significantly, the Fifth Circuit affirmed this Court’s findings and concluded that the gatekeeper provision was justified and “sound.” NexPoint Advisors, L.P., 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 25107 at *5-6.

the UST filed a six-page “limited objection” that addressed only the scope of the Plan’s exculpation clause—ironically, the only issue reversed on appeal.<sup>44</sup>

74. In sum, Movants’ stubborn instance that this Court’s findings or conduct of the confirmation hearing reflect bias and prejudice after those same issues have been affirmed by the Fifth Circuit demonstrates the bad-faith nature of the Renewed Motion.

J. January and July 2021 Orders Requiring Mr. Dondero’s Appearance

75. In the Renewed Motion, Movants assert a new “example” of this Court’s bias: Its orders—entered in January 2021, May 2021, and June 2021—“target[ing] Mr. Dondero (as well as his sister Nancy Dondero) by requiring their presence at all hearings, regardless of whether their presence is needed.” Renewed Motion at 16. Again, Movants misstate the facts.

76. During the January 8, 2021, proceeding to determine whether to grant a preliminary injunction against Mr. Dondero, Mr. Dondero admitted that he had not attended the earlier TRO hearing or read the transcript and had “never bothered to read the TRO.”<sup>45</sup> Concerned that his failure to fully participate would create an opportunity for “plausible deniability,” this Court ordered Mr. Dondero—two months before the Initial Motion was filed—to appear at all hearings to ensure his compliance with this Court’s orders.<sup>46</sup> Incredibly, Mr. Dondero subsequently failed to appear at a hearing thereby validating the Court’s concerns. Consequently, this Court entered an order on May 24, 2021—sixteen months before the Renewed Motion—clarifying that Mr.

<sup>45</sup> Ex. 31, Appx. 3755 (“Q ... At least as of today, you never bothered to read the TRO that was entered against you, correct? A Correct.”).

<sup>46</sup> Order Granting Debtor’s Motion for a Preliminary Injunction Against James Dondero, Adv. Proc. No. 20-03190-sgj, Docket No. 59. Members of the Independent Board and/or Highland’s Chief Executive Officer have been present at virtually every hearing in this case.

Dondero was required to appear at all hearings in the bankruptcy case. [Docket No. 2362] Mr. Dondero did not appeal the preliminary injunction or the May 2021 order.

77. This Court has never ordered Nancy Dondero to appear at any hearings. Instead, on June 17, 2021—fifteen months before the Initial Motion—the Court ordered the trustee of Dugaboy and Get Good to appear at all hearings and proceedings but only “where either of the Trusts are a party or take a position.” [Docket No. 2458] The Court provided a detailed rationale for its order and it was never appealed. Nevertheless, Movants now falsely assert that Ms. Dondero was required to appear at all hearings “regardless of whether [her] presence [was] needed.”

K. May 2021 Denial of Mr. Dondero’s Motion to Compel Testimony

78. In the Renewed Motion, Movants assert as another “new” example of bias this Court’s denial of a “routine litigation step[]” to compel Mr. Seery’s deposition testimony and thereby indicating that it “will treat such [routine actions] as nefarious ‘antagonistic move[s]’ rather than ordinary invocation of legal process.” Renewed Motion at 16. This is not what happened.

79. On May 24, 2021—sixteen months before the Renewed Motion—this Court denied Mr. Dondero’s motion to compel deposition testimony<sup>47</sup> concerning six (out of twenty) Rule 30(b)(6) topics on the grounds that the topics were either irrelevant or sought information in Mr. Dondero’s possession. Ex. 32, Appx. 3963-3964. Despite referencing the “antagonism” between Mr. Dondero and Mr. Seery, this Court did not prevent Mr. Dondero from deposing Mr. Seery on fourteen other deposition topics.

80. Mr. Dondero did not appeal this ruling.

L. August 2021 Order Finding Certain Movants in Contempt of this Court

81. In the Renewed Motion, Movants cite an order entered on August 4, 2021—thirteen months before the Renewed Motion—holding Mr. Dondero and various non-Movants in civil contempt [Docket No. 2660] (the “Contempt Order”)<sup>48</sup> as “[p]erhaps one of the most telling” examples of this Court’s bias. Renewed Motion at 14-15. Movants, again, misstate the facts and the record and—most importantly—ignore the District Court’s order affirming this Court’s factual and legal findings in the Contempt Order in all material respects.<sup>49</sup>

82. First, Movants materially misstate the facts of the April 12, 2021, complaint (the “HV Complaint”).<sup>50</sup> Movants allege the HV Complaint addressed Highland’s “brokering the sale of CLO interests held by HarbourVest ... without prior notice to other CLO investors and without respecting those investors’ right of first refusal” in violation of some undisclosed duty. Renewed Motion at 14. That is wrong, and Movants should know that. They drafted the HV Complaint.

83. As this Court knows, the facts are as follows: Prior to Highland’s bankruptcy, HarbourVest<sup>51</sup> purchased certain of CLOH’s interests in Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”), a Guernsey-based investment vehicle,<sup>52</sup> for approximately $80 million ultimately owning 49.98% of HCLOF’s interests. After Highland’s bankruptcy, HarbourVest filed claims against Highland in excess of $300 million and sought rescission of its investment in HCLOF

<sup>48</sup> The Contempt Order is the second time that Mr. Dondero has been held in contempt for violating this Court’s orders. See n.11 supra.

<sup>49</sup> Charitable DAF Fund L.P. v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175778 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2022). The only finding not affirmed was the payment of $100,000 if an appeal was filed. Movants only mention of the District Court order is a one line footnote. Renewed Motion at 15 n.72.

alleging it was fraudulently induced by factual misrepresentations and omissions made by Mr. Dondero and certain of Highland's employees prior to the bankruptcy.

84. Highland and HarbourVest settled HarbourVest's claims, and Highland filed a motion [Docket No. 1625] seeking Court approval. Under the settlement, HarbourVest received allowed claims totaling $80 million in aggregate and transferred its interests in HCLOF to a Highland subsidiary, effectively rescinding HarbourVest's investment in HCLOF. All aspects of the settlement were publicly disclosed in Highland's motion. Mr. Dondero, Dugaboy, Get Good, and CLOH all objected. CLOH argued it had a right of first refusal to HarbourVest's HCLOF interests. However, after reviewing Highland's pleadings, HCLOF's governing documents, and applicable law, CLOH determined it had no such right and knowingly and intentionally withdrew its objection. This Court approved the settlement, including the transfer of HarbourVest's interests in HCLOF.

85. Three months later, CLOH, among others (collectively, the "Dondero Plaintiffs"), filed the HV Complaint seeking, among other things, to enforce their alleged right of first refusal—a right CLOH had conceded did not exist.<sup>53</sup> Shortly thereafter, the Dondero Plaintiffs sought to add Mr. Seery as a defendant in clear violation of the Settlement Order and the order appointing Mr. Seery as Highland's chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer [Docket No. 854].

Accordingly, this Court, after an evidentiary hearing, issued the Contempt Order finding Mr. Dondero and others in contempt.

86. Second, Movants falsely allege Mr. Dondero credibly testified “he was not involved at all in authorizing or preparing the motion to add Mr. Seery” and there was no evidence to the contrary. Renewed Motion at 15. This is directly contradicted by the actual record. As the District Court explained:

Ample evidence supports the bankruptcy court’s factual findings. Dondero has had a significant role in DAF for over a decade. DAF’s assets come in part from Dondero and his “family trusts.” Dondero “was DAF’s managing member until 2012,” and he remains “DAF’s informal investment advisor.” After Dondero stepped down as managing member, that role went to Grant Scott, “Dondero’s long-time friend, college housemate, and best man at his wedding.” Scott ultimately resigned due to “disagreements with ... Dondero.”

Patrick replaced Scott as “DAF’s general manager on March 24, 2021”—19 days before the Seery Motion. Patrick initially had “no reason to believe that Mr. Seery had done anything wrong with respect to the HarbourVest transaction.” Only once “Dondero told [him] that an investment opportunity was essentially usurped” did Patrick “engage[] the Sbaiti firm to launch an investigation” and ask “Mr. Dondero to work with the Sbaiti firm with respect to their investigation of the underlying facts.” After that, Dondero “communicated directly with the Sbaiti firm”—Patrick did not. Dondero “saw versions of the complaint before it was filed” and had “conversations with attorneys” about the complaint pre-filing. That complaint focused on “Seery’s allegedly deceitful conduct” and “mention[ed] Mr. Seery 50 times.” Further, when listing the parties, the complaint listed each party named in the caption along with “[p]otential party James P. Seery, Jr.,” providing his citizenship and domicile.

Further, although Dondero averred that he did not direct the Sbaiti firm to add Seery to the complaint, Dondero also contradicted himself, first claiming that he did not know that “the Sbaiti firm intended to file a motion for leave to amend their complaint to add Mr. Seery,” but then agreeing during the hearing that he “[p]robably” was “aware that that motion was going to be filed prior to the time that it actually was filed.” He also testified to conversations about the Seery Motion, noting that it involved a “very complicated legal preservation” issue.

Based on all that evidence, the Court is not left with a definite and firm conviction that the bankruptcy court erred. After being stymied in the bankruptcy court, Dondero manufactured the exigency for the lawsuit that challenged Seery’s conduct. Dondero’s claim that he “did not suggest that Mr. Seery should be added as a defendant” is not credible. Dondero gave Patrick the idea of challenging

Seery's conduct, and he worked with the Sbaiti firm to bring that idea to fruition in the complaint—a complaint that clearly contemplated adding Seery to the lawsuit. Likewise, his plea that he “had no involvement with the Seery Motion” is not credible. Dondero himself testified to the contents of attorney communications concerning the Seery Motion, eventually admitting that he “probably” had knowledge of the Motion before it was filed. In short, the bankruptcy court did not err, after considering the “totality of the evidence,” in finding that Dondero had “the idea of” suing to “challenge Mr. Seery’s ... conduct,” that he “encouraged Mr. Patrick to do something wrong,” and that Patrick “abdicated responsibility to Mr. Dondero with regard to . . . executing the litigation strategy.”

Charitable DAF Fund, L.P., 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175778, at *18-21. The District Court, like this Court, included ample citations to the record, including the direct testimony of both Mr. Dondero and Mr. Patrick, to support its factual findings.<sup>54</sup> It is inconceivable this Court and the District Court both erred in assessing the evidence concerning Mr. Dondero’s direct involvement in violating this Court’s orders, yet Movants ignore the District Court.

87. Third, Movants allegations about this Court’s sanctions are false. Movants falsely allege Highland submitted invoices showing it had incurred just $38,796.50 defending against Mr. Dondero’s contemptuous actions. Not true. Highland submitted invoices for $187,795. [Docket Nos. 2421-1, 2421-2; Ex. 34, Appx. 4048-4102]. Although this Court added to that amount to compensate for additional costs, this Court’s sanction of $239,655 was affirmed by the District Court. Charitable DAF Fund, L.P., 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175778, at *13-17. Again, Movants ignore the facts and the District Court.

M. September 2022 Denial of HCRE’s Motion to Withdraw Its Proof of Claim.

88. Finally, Movants cite to the September 12, 2022, hearing on the withdrawal of HCRE’s proof of claim as an example of this Court’s bias. Renewed Motion at 16-19. This example, like the others, is premised on a material distortion of the record and requires a complete factual reset before Movants' baseless allegations can be addressed.

<sup>54</sup> Mr. Patrick was a long-time employee of Highland and, on information and belief, works for Skyview—an entity created to service Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities. Mr. Patrick has exclusively worked for Mr. Dondero and/or his controlled entities as a tax attorney for almost fifteen years.

89. On April 8, 2020, HCRE filed a proof of claim with this Court (Claim No. 146) (the "HCRE Claim") that was signed by Mr. Dondero, HCRE's manager, and filed under penalty of perjury. The HCRE Claim challenged Highland's interest in SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC ("SEMF");

HCRE ... contends that all or a portion of Debtor's equity, ownership, economic rights, equitable or beneficial interests in SE Multifamily does [not] belong to the Debtor or may be the property of [HCRE]. Accordingly, [HCRE] may have a claim against the Debtor.

HCRE Claim, Ex. A. On July 30, 2020, Highland objected to the HCRE Claim [Docket No. 906].

90. On October 16, 2020, HCRE responded [Docket No. 1197] (the "HCRE Response") asserting, among other things, that it believed the SEMF governing documents "improperly allocate[] the ownership percentages of the members thereto due to mutual mistake, lack of consideration, and/or failure of consideration." HCRE Response ¶ 5. The HCRE Response was filed by the law firm of Wick Phillips Gould & Martin LLP ("Wick Phillips").

91. During initial discovery, Highland discovered that Wick Phillips had represented Highland with respect to SEMF. Wick Phillips refused to withdraw despite the conflict, and Highland moved to disqualify them on April 14, 2021 (the "Motion to Disqualify").<sup>55</sup> The Motion to Disqualify was fully briefed<sup>56</sup> and heavily contested with significant pre-trial discovery. On November 30, 2021, this Court held a lengthy hearing on the Motion to Disqualify and ultimately disqualified Wick Phillips from representing HCRE in connection with the HCRE Claim.

92. In January 2022, HCRE retained replacement counsel. After six months of HCRE's silence, the parties agreed to an amended scheduling order on June 9, 2022 [Docket Nos. 3356, 3368] and restarted discovery. Discovery included significant document production and depositions of Mark Patrick, BH Equities (a third-party investor in HCRE), Barker Viggato LLP (HCRE's accountant), and James P. Seery, Jr., as Highland's 30(b)(6) witness.

93. Mr. Dondero and Matthew McGraner (a SEMF equity holder) were scheduled to be deposed, and trial was set for early November 2022.

94. However, on August 12, 2022, two days after Mr. Seery's deposition, HCRE filed its motion to withdraw the HCRE Claim [Docket No. 3443] (the "Motion to Withdraw") pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure ("FRBP") 3006 and unilaterally canceled the previously scheduled depositions of Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner.

95. The Motion to Withdraw (correctly) cited Manchester, Inc. v. Lyle (In re Manchester, Inc.) for the test to determine whether a claim could be withdrawn under FRBP 3006. 2008 Bankr. LEXIS, at *11-12 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 2008) (weighing (1) movant's diligence in bringing the motion; (2) movant's "undue vexatiousness;" (3) extent to which the suit has progressed and the costs and expenses incurred by the non-party in preparing for trial; (4) duplicative expense of re-litigation; and (5) adequacy of movant's explanation for withdrawal).

96. On September 2, 2022, Highland filed its opposition to the Motion to Withdraw [Docket No. 3487] (the "Objection to Withdraw") asking this Court to deny the Motion to Withdraw and require Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner to sit for the previously agreed depositions or, in the alternative, to condition the withdrawal of the HCRE Claim pursuant to FRBP 3006. Objection to Withdraw ¶¶ 4, 76-80.

97. On September 12, 2022, this Court held a hearing on the Motion to Withdraw. Contrary to Movants' allegations, this Court did not show bias towards Movants at that hearing. Instead, the following is clear from the record:

- HCRE presented no evidence regarding the Manchester factors and only addressed one Manchester factor—legal prejudice—in argument.<sup>57</sup>
- HCRE's only explanation for withdrawing the HCRE Claim was that HCRE "[didn't] need the proof of claim anymore."<sup>58</sup> HCRE did not address why it believed there was a mutual mistake when it filed the HCRE Claim in April 2020 or provide any other explanation for the withdrawal of the HCRE Claim on the eve of trial.
- Highland, in distinction, introduced significant evidence with respect to each of the Manchester factors. Specifically, Highland showed that:
  - 1) HCRE was not diligent in filing the Motion to Withdraw having filed it twenty-eight months after filing the HCRE Claim;
  - 2) HCRE was "unduly vexatious" as it (a) had no good faith basis for filing the HCRE Claim in the first instance, (b) forced Highland to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on discovery, depositions, and the Motion to Disqualify, and (c) withdrew the HCRE Claim only after it had completed its discovery while denying Highland the opportunity to depose Messrs. Dondero and McGraner;
  - 3) The HCRE Claim had been litigated for two years and was, with the exception of the depositions of Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner, trial-ready;
  - 4) There was a material risk of duplicative litigation. HCRE (and Mr. Dondero) consistently declined to answer whether withdrawal of the HCRE Claim would preclude future challenges to Highland's ownership interest in SEMF—the subject matter of the HCRE Claim; and
  - 5) HCRE had no adequate explanation for withdrawing the HCRE Claim. HCRE provided no evidence justifying its concern about Highland's interference in SEMF's management and no articulated basis for no longer asserting mutual mistake.

Ex. 35, Appx. 4112-4132.

98. Notwithstanding HCRE's complete lack of evidence, at the hearing, Highland stated, on the record, it would consent to the withdrawal of the HCRE Claim if HCRE (a) made

“an ironclad commitment that HCRE is irrevocably waiving its right to challenge Highland’s interest in [SEMF];” (b) waived its right to appeal; (c) agreed not to rely on its deposition of Mr. Seery for any purpose; and (d) reimbursed Highland’s costs incurred in the two years of litigation on the HCRE Claim. Id. Appx. 4114-4115; Appx. 4129; Appx. 4136-4137.

99. HCRE, however, was unable to satisfy even the first requested condition—waiver of its right to challenge Highland’s interest in SEMF.

- First, HCRE’s counsel, Bill Gameros,<sup>59</sup> attempted to enter into an agreement on behalf of his client; however, it was clear from the record that Mr. Gameros had not spoken with his client about the proposed resolution, that he needed “to confer with [his] client” before he could agree, and he had no authority to bind his client.
- Second, after a fifteen minute recess to allow Mr. Gameros to produce a client representative, D.C. Sauter appeared before this Court. This Court asked Mr. Gameros “what is [Mr. Sauter’s] position with HCRE.” Mr. Sauter replied: “I don’t have an official position with HCRE” but alleged, without evidence or support, that Mr. Dondero had authorized him to speak on HCRE’s behalf despite his not being an officer, director, employee, interest holder, or even counsel of HCRE. Mr. Sauter clearly had no legal capacity to bind HCRE.<sup>60</sup>
- Third, Mr. Dondero, HCRE’s manager, appeared before this Court by telephone.<sup>61</sup> Mr. Dondero, however, refused to give an unconditional response to his counsel’s question: “Mr. Dondero, do you agree that [HCRE] will not challenge in any way the estate’s interest in [SEMF], its 46-point whatever percent interest it is” Instead, Mr. Dondero stated Highland’s ownership interest in SEMF “could change over time” and that “no business man can agree” to Mr. Gameros’ question.

<sup>59</sup> Highland and this Court were both justifiably concerned about Mr. Gameros’ ability to make a binding deal based on their experience with, among other things, the HV Complaint. In early 2021, CLOH, through counsel, conceded on the record that it had no right of first refusal to HarbourVest’s interests in HCLOF. Three months later, CLOH, through new counsel, filed the HV Complaint arguing it did have a right of first refusal. See ¶ 84 infra.

<sup>60</sup> Movants allege this Court chastised Mr. Sauter. Renewed Motion at 17 (“[T]he Court responded [to Mr. Sauter]: ‘I mean I’m not sure I care what you say, no offense. I don’t think I have a person with clear authority here.’”) The Court directed that statement at John Morris, Highland’s counsel, not Mr. Sauter. Ex. 35, Appx. 4140 (“Mr. Morris, do you want to respond? I mean I’m not sure, frankly, I care what you say....”)

<sup>61</sup> Movants allege this Court “rebuffed [Mr. Dondero] for failing to have access to video, even though he [had] no previous notice he would have to give testimony at the hearing.” Renewed Motion at 18. This Court was justifiably confused by Mr. Dondero’s lack of access to video. Moments before Mr. Dondero’s appearance, Mr. Sauter said he had “to run around the corner and try to make sure [Mr. Dondero] knows how to unmute himself.” Id. Appx. 4141-4142. The logical inference from that statement is that Mr. Dondero was in the office with Mr. Sauter, not in his car as he claimed. Regardless, all this Court said about Mr. Dondero’s lack of video was “this is not ideal, you know, without us seeing you.” Id. Appx. 4142. That is no “rebuff.”

Id. Appx. 4135-4146. Consequently, because of HCRE's (a) inability to satisfy the condition to withdraw and (b) failure to satisfy any of the Manchester factors, this Court denied HCRE's request to withdraw the HCRE Claim.

100. Notwithstanding the allegations in the Renewed Motion:

- This Court did not find that HCRE "had acted with 'undue vexatiousness' ... merely because [Highland] opposed the claim and had spent 'hundreds of thousands of dollars' doing so." Renewed Motion at 18. As set forth above, "undue vexatiousness" is a Manchester factor which this Court had to assess. After reviewing Highland's voluminous evidence and the lack of evidence from HCRE, this Court simply found "the undue vexatiousness factor ... weigh[ed] in favor of there has been undue vexatiousness." Id. Appx. 4156.
- This Court did not "order[] additional depositions to take place and the parties to attend trial." Renewed Motion at 18. The Motion to Withdraw was denied, and, accordingly, the hearing on the HCRE Claim and Highland's previously scheduled depositions of Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner would naturally proceed. Id. Appx. 4158.
- This Court did not, "as a parting shot," direct the UST to investigate HCRE and Mr. Dondero. Renewed Motion at 18. Significant evidence had been produced at the hearing on the lack of good faith of the HCRE Claim (and Mr. Dondero's potential perjury) (Id. Appx. 4117-4123), and this Court was obligated by law to report the matter to the UST pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3057(a).<sup>62</sup>

ARGUMENT

101. Section 455 of Chapter 28 of the United States Code provides, in relevant part, that:

(a) Any justice, judge, or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.

(b) He shall also disqualify himself in the following circumstances:

(1) Where he has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceedings.

---

<sup>62</sup> See 18 U.S.C. § 3057(a) ("Any judge, receiver, or trustee having reasonable grounds for believing that any violation under chapter 9 of this title or other laws of the United States relating to insolvent debtors, receiverships or reorganization plans has been committed, or that an investigation should be had in connection therewith, shall report to the appropriate United States attorney all the facts and circumstances of the case, the names of the witnesses and the offense or offenses believed to have been committed.")

28 U.S.C. § 455(a), (b)(1). “A bankruptcy judge shall be governed by 28 U.S.C. § 455, and disqualified from presiding over the proceeding or contested matter in which the disqualifying circumstances arises or, if appropriate, shall be disqualified from presiding over the case.” FRBP 5004(a).

102. Recusal motions brought under Section 455(a) must be “timely.” Hill v. Schilling, 495 Fed. App’x 480, 483 (5th Cir. 2012); see also Grambling Univ. Nat’l Alumni Ass’n v. Bd. of Supervisors for La. System, 286 Fed. App’x 864, 867 (5th Cir. 2008) (noting that while “[s]ection 455 does not contain an explicit timeliness requirement ... this Court has consistently inferred such a requirement”) (citing United States v. Sanford, 157 F.3d 987, 988 (5th Cir. 1998)). “The timeliness rule requires that ‘one seeking disqualification must do so at the earliest moment after knowledge of the facts demonstrating the basis for such disqualification.’” Sanford, 157 F.3d at 988–89 (quoting Travelers Ins. Co. v. Liljeberg Enters., Inc., 38 F.3d 1404, 1410 (5th Cir. 1994)). “The most egregious delay—the closest thing to per se untimeliness—occurs when a party already knows the facts purportedly showing an appearance of impropriety but waits until after an adverse decision has been made by the judge before raising the issue of recusal.” Sanford, 157 F.3d at 988–89; see also Delesdernier v. Porterie, 666 F.2d 116, 122 (5th Cir. 1982) (“Congress did not enact § 455(a) to allow counsel to make a game of the federal judiciary’s ethical obligations; we should seek to preserve the integrity of the statute by discouraging bad faith manipulation of its rules for litigious advantage.”)

103. Even if a motion is timely, whether to grant it is committed to the sound discretion of the targeted court. See Hill v. Breazeale, 197 Fed. App’x 331, 335 (5th Cir. 2006). “The judge abuses [his or her] discretion in denying recusal where a reasonable [person], cognizant of the relevant circumstances surrounding [the] judge’s failure to recuse, would harbor legitimate doubts about that judge's impartiality.” United States v. Bremers, 195 F.3d 221, 226 (5th Cir. 1999) (a motion to recuse is committed to the discretion of the targeted judge). “The standard for bias is not ‘subjective’ ... but, rather, ‘objective.’” Andrade v. Chojnacki, 338 F.3d 448, 454-55 (5th Cir. 2003) (citing Vieux Carre Prop. Owners, Residents & Assocs. v. Brown, 948 F.2d 1436, 1448 (5th Cir. 1991)). In other words, it “is with reference to the ‘well-informed, thoughtful and objective observer, rather than the hypersensitive, cynical, and suspicious person’ that the objective standard is currently established.” Id. (quoting United States v. Jordan, 49 F.3d 152, 156 (5th Cir. 1995)). “Another maxim is that review should entail a careful consideration of context, that is, the entire course of judicial proceedings, rather than isolated incidents.” Id. at 455. Finally, the common-law doctrine called the “extrajudicial source rule” under Section 455 “divides events occurring or opinions expressed in the course of judicial proceedings from those that take place outside of the litigation context and holds that the former rarely require recusal.” Id. The movant must: (1) demonstrate that the alleged comment, action, or circumstance was of “extrajudicial” origin, (2) place the offending event into the context of the entire trial, and (3) do so by an “objective” observer's standard. The movant must also demonstrate the “court’s refusal to recuse was not merely erroneous, but, rather, an abuse of discretion.” Id. at 456-62.

104. Here, it is indisputable that (a) the Renewed Motion, which largely restates the Initial Motion, is “untimely;” (b) “bias” does not exist; (c) there is no “deep seated antagonism;” and (d) there is no evidence of “extrajudicial knowledge.” The exceptional and rare remedy of recusal is not warranted and the Renewed Motion, like the Initial Motion, must be denied.

I. The Renewed Motion Must Be Denied as Untimely

105. This Court denied the Initial Motion on the basis that it was untimely and should deny the Renewed Motion on the same grounds.

106. This Court determined the Initial Motion was “untimely” because it was filed: (a) “more than 15 months after the case was transferred to this Court” and after Movants learned about the facts purportedly showing an “appearance of impropriety,” (b) “after many dozens of orders” were issued by this Court, and (c) “on the eve of a contempt hearing.” Recusal Order at 7. Yet, Movants did not seek recusal until March 2021 and allowed this Court to expend significant judicial resources overseeing this case and Movants’ litigation. Movants offered no credible explanation for the delay in bringing the Initial Motion.

107. The Renewed Motion suffers from the same infirmities but is even less “timely” than the Initial Motion. First, the Renewed Motion incorporates the Initial Motion and its “examples” of bias. Those examples were untimely when the Initial Motion was filed in March 2021 and are even more so now. Second, the Renewed Motion was filed (a) thirty-four months after this case was transferred to this Court, (b) seven months after the District Court denied the appeal of the Recusal Order, and (c) after this Court entered many hundreds more orders. The “new” examples of bias in the Renewed Motion are also untimely. With one meritless exception, all “new” examples occurred on or before August 4, 2021—over a year ago—with one actually occurring before the Initial Motion was filed. Like the Initial Motion, the Renewed Motion was also filed to prevent this Court from entering orders adverse to Movants—denying the dispositive motions to dismiss filed in the Kirschner Adversary.<sup>63</sup> Supplemental Motion ¶¶ 7, 9.

108. This, alone, constitutes “per se untimely.” See Hill, 197 Fed. App’x at 335 (holding district court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to recuse as untimely where party “waited, for no given reason, to raise the issue until after the district court ruled against him”); Sanford, 157 F.3d at 989 (affirming district court’s denial of recusal motion as untimely where party “knew of the facts purportedly causing an appearance of impropriety,” but waited until after an adverse decision to raise the recusal issue); Grambling, 286 Fed. App’x at 867-88 (affirming denial of recusal motion as “per se” untimely where “despite having knowledge of the facts underlying its recusal argument,” party “did not immediately move to have this case assigned to a judge from another division or district and instead allowed the case to linger ... for nearly ten months. When the [party] finally acted, it did so only after [the judge] had dismissed its claims”); Hill v. Schilling, 2014 WL 1516193, at *3 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 17, 2014) (affirming judge’s finding that motion to recuse was untimely where it was brought “some eleven months after [plaintiff] and his counsel first became aware of the” facts giving rise to alleged perception of bias); Da Silva Moore v. Publicis Groupe, 868 F. Supp. 2d 137, 155 (S.D.N.Y. 2012) (“Plaintiffs here had the requisite knowledge no later than January 4, 2012, but the recusal request did not come until nearly three months later,” noting “I have made no efforts to hide my views, relationships or affiliations. If plaintiffs truly believed that any of these issues, individually or collectively, created a bias or the appearance of partiality, they should have promptly moved for my recusal.”)

---

109. This Court also appropriately considered the fact that the Initial Motion came on the “eve of the contempt hearing.” Recusal Order at 7. Similarly, Movants seek recusal now, after Mr. Dondero has been twice found in contempt, to prevent this Court from ruling in the Kirschner Adversary. Supplemental Motion ¶ 7. That is, in itself, grounds for denial. See Weisshaus v. Fagan, 456 Fed. App’x 23, 34 (2d Cir. 2012) (noting that “[a]lthough there was no dispositive ruling as to [defendant] at the time [plaintiff] brought her recusal motion, the district court aptly noted that the motion came on the heels of its direction that [plaintiff] submit to a deposition, thus strongly suggesting that the motion was a mere fall-back position in response to an adverse ruling.”); Da Silva, 868 F. Supp. 2d at 154 (denying recusal motion where “[i]t appears that plaintiffs are improperly using the recusal motion as a ‘fall-back position’ to an unfavorable ruling.”)

110. In light of the expansive nature of this case and this Court’s extensive knowledge of the proceedings that it has overseen throughout the last thirty-four months, interests of judicial economy also support this Court’s denial of the Renewed Motion. See United States v. Olis, 571 F. Supp. 2d 777 (5th Cir. 2008) (affirming denial of recusal motion as untimely where party was aware of facts stated in recusal motion “well before he filed” the motion, noting that party “had duty to file [ ] motion for recusal before the court’s judicial resources were spent on resolution of motions” and party “neither argues nor explains why his delay” was reasonable); Hill, 495 Fed. App’x at 484 (“Particularly in light of the expansive nature of these proceedings, considerations of judicial economy likewise countenance our conclusion that the district court did not abuse its discretion”); United States v. York, 888 F.2d 1050, 1055 (5th Cir. 1989) (“The motivation behind a timeliness requirement [for Section 455] is [ ] to a large extent one of judicial economy”); Martin v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 240 F.3d 223, 237 (3d Cir. 2001) (“After a massive proceeding such as this, when the court has invested substantial judicial resources and there is indisputably no evidence of prejudice, a motion for recusal of a trial judge should be supported by substantial justification, not fanciful illusion”); Weiss haus, 456 Fed. App’x at 34 (affirming district court’s denial of recusal motion as untimely where party “waited almost nineteen months” to file the recusal motion, at which point the district court had already expended substantial judicial resources overseeing and adjudicating” the parties’ claims).

111. Accordingly, this Court is well within its discretion to deny the Renewed Motion—like the Initial Motion—as untimely.

II. The Renewed Motion Must Be Denied on the Merits

112. Even if the Renewed Motion had been timely, it must be denied on the merits. The Renewed Motion fails to prove that any of the circumstances that would require disqualification under Section 455 are present here.

A. There Is No Extrajudicial Bias Present Here

113. The core of Movants' argument in the Renewed Motion is, as in the Initial Motion, that this Court's "extrajudicial" bias toward Movants stemmed from opinions formed during the Acis Bankruptcy. Renewed Motion at 4-5; Initial Motion ¶¶ 4-13. That argument is still frivolous.

114. As articulated by the Supreme Court, "[o]pinions formed by the judge on the basis of facts of prior proceedings do not constitute a basis for a bias or partiality motion unless they display a deep-seated favoritism or antagonism that would make fair judgment impossible." Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 555 (1994); see also Conkling v. Turner, 138 F.3d 577, 592 (5th Cir. 1998) ("As a general rule, for purposes of recusal, a judge's 'personal' knowledge of evidentiary facts means 'extrajudicial,' so facts learned by a judge in his or her judicial capacity regarding the parties before the court, whether learned in the same or a related proceeding, cannot be the basis for disqualification") (internal quotations omitted). Rather, opinions or beliefs formed from events on the record or from prior proceedings, or "intrajudicial" opinions, are subject to a "deferential" review, and are the "type of opinions/expressions that Liteky holds nearly exempt from causing recusal." Andrade, 338 F.3d at 460-62.

115. Any opinion allegedly formed by this Court from the Acis Bankruptcy, a prior proceeding, is thus not an "extrajudicial" source and is precisely the type of opinion exempt from warranting recusal. See Liteky, 510 U.S. at 555; Brown v. Oil States Skagit Smatco, 664 F.3d 71, 81 (5th Cir. 2011) (affirming denial of motion for recusal where "the only facts the [judge] learned about [party's] conduct were learned from judicial proceedings in the instant case and in previous cases”); Conkling, 138 F.3d at 592 (“As a general rule, for purposes of recusal, a judge’s ‘personal’ knowledge of evidentiary facts means ‘extrajudicial,’ so facts learned by a judge in his or her judicial capacity regarding the parties before the court, whether learned in the same or a related proceeding, cannot be the basis for disqualification”) (internal quotations omitted).<sup>64</sup>

116. For these same reasons, Movants’ reliance on this Court’s rulings as evidence of “antagonism” is equally deficient. “[J]udicial rulings alone almost never constitute a valid basis for a bias or partiality motion ... and can only in the rarest circumstances evidence the degree of favoritism or antagonism required ... when no extrajudicial source is involved.” Liteky, 510 U.S. at 555. Here, and as set forth above, Movants rely on various rulings issued by this Court to demonstrate “bias.” These rulings, none of which involve an extrajudicial source, simply do not rise to the rare circumstance of evidencing the degree of antagonism warranted for recusal. See Liteky, 510 U.S. at 555 (“Almost invariably, judicial rulings are proper grounds for appeal, not for recusal”); Andrade, 338 F.3d at 456 (denying recusal based on judicial rulings where events cited “are embodied in judicial actions that Movants could have, but did not, appeal”). Simply put, Movants offer no credible legal or factual basis for recusal. See Henderson v. Dep’t of Pub. Safety and Corrs., 901 F.2d 1288, 1296 (5th Cir. 1990) (“[E]ven the most superficial research would have put [the party] on notice that the factual circumstances he alleged were not grounds for recusal” under Liteky, noting “there is absolutely no case authority cited by [party] to the contrary.”)

117. Movants’ “due process” argument that they “are entitled to a full and fair opportunity to make their case in an impartial forum—regardless of their history with that forum” (Renewed Motion at 19-20) is frivolous and should be summarily rejected. Movants fail to support any notion of a “due process” violation. Nor could they. The record of this case shows the great lengths this Court has gone through to respect Movants’ due process rights, notwithstanding their limited, if any, skin in the game. The cases cited by Movants in support of their contention are entirely inapplicable. Miller v. Sam Houston State Univ., 986 F.3d 880, 893 (5th Cir. 2021) does not address the standard for “recusal” under Section 455 or the “extrajudicial” source rule. Rather, Miller deals with whether a case should be reassigned to a different district court judge on remand after the original judge did not give plaintiff the opportunity for discovery and sua sponte dismissed a plaintiff’s claim of sex discrimination and retaliation under the Fair Labor Standards Act. Movants’ other case on this point is equally irrelevant.<sup>65</sup> The types of exceptional circumstances warranting recusal in those cases are not present here. Movants otherwise offer no legal basis in support of their argument. Accordingly, this Court properly exercised its discretion in finding that there was no “extrajudicial” source warranting recusal.

<sup>64</sup> Movants rely on only one allegedly “extrajudicial” source relating to this Court’s inquiries into COVID-related “PPP loans.” Renewed Motion at 8-9; Initial Motion ¶ 52. However, as noted supra, this Court took no action against Mr. Dondero or any of the other Movants and did not even ask them to respond.

B. This Court Does Not Have Deep-Seated Antagonism Toward Movants

118. Similarly, there is no basis to find that this Court has “demonstrate[d] such a ‘high degree of favoritism or antagonism as make fair judgment impossible.’” Renewed Motion at 22. Movants contend the “record is replete with examples” of this Court’s “antagonism” such that a reasonable observer would doubt this Court’s impartiality. Id. Movants’ arguments are without merit.

119. “Judicial remarks that are critical or disapproving of, or even hostile to, counsel for the parties or their cases, ordinarily do not support a bias or partiality challenge.” Liteky, 510 U.S. at 555. In support of their argument that this Court harbored “bias” toward Movants, Movants refer to a number of this Court's statements regarding Mr. Dondero and his conduct. See generally ¶¶ 29-32, 34-100 supra. In relying on such statements, Movants disregard the law on recusal. See Andrade, 338 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of recusal motion premised on judge's negative comments made on the record—including describing a witness as a “crazy, murdering son-of-a-bitch” and referring to parties' attempt to introduce certain evidence as “bullcrap”) (citing Liteky, 510, U.S. at 555)). As this Court previously found, Movants' cited remarks are, at best, “clashes between a court and counsel,” and such remarks are “simply insufficient” for recusal. Recusal Order at 10; see also United States v. Landerman, 109 F.3d 1053, 1066 (5th Cir. 1997) (affirming denial of motion to recuse where district judge allowed “the Government more leeway during its questioning and did interrupt defense counsel's questioning more often than the Government's questioning”); Garcia v. Woman's Hosp. of Tex., 143 F.3d 227, 230 (5th Cir. 1998) (affirming denial of motion to recuse where district judge had made unflattering comments about plaintiff's ability to prove her case).

---

<sup>65</sup> The Court in In re Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 121 F.3d 163, 167 (5th Cir. 1997), denied a petition for a writ of mandamus challenging denial of recusal premised on racist remarks, where, although a “reasonable person might indeed harbor doubts about the trial judge’s impartiality” in a “racially-charged case such as the instant one,” the judge had already presided over the case for so long such that recusal at that stage “would be unprecedented.”

120. Based on the entirety of the proceedings before this Court, in which all events raised by Movants relate to either this Court's knowledge of prior proceedings or this Court's remarks during these proceedings, the exceptional remedy of recusal is not warranted. See United States v. Williams, 127 Fed. App'x 736, 737-38 (5th Cir. 2005) (“As our review of the entire context of the judicial proceedings in which the events challenged in this case arose reveals no disqualifying judicial bias, we conclude that there was no abuse of discretion in the district court's denial of [the] recusal motion”); Henderson, 901 F.2d at 1296 (affirming court's denial of recusal motion, where “none of the circumstances requiring disqualification under § 455 are present here” and “the trial judge was well within his discretion in finding that the motion for recusal was not well founded, either in fact or in law.”)

121. This Court, respectfully, should again find that that Movants' assertions do not "rise to the threshold standard of raising doubt in the mind of a reasonable observer as to the judge's impartiality" (Recusal Order at 10) and deny the Renewed Motion.

III. This Court Lacks the Authority to Grant Movants' Alternative Relief

122. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158(a), the District Court sits as a court of appeals over this Court and reviews (a) this Court's final orders and (b), if leave is granted by the District Court, its interlocutory orders. 28 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1), (3). In its February Order, the District Court held that, as a matter of law, an order denying a motion to recuse is "an interlocutory order from which no appeal lies prior to this Court entering a final judgment" and is not an appealable collateral order. See, e.g., Ex. 12, Appx. 2106. And, as set forth on Exhibit 36 (Appx. 4165-4169), there is still no final judgment; multiple matters are currently pending before this Court or are on appeal to the District Court or the Fifth Circuit.<sup>66</sup> Yet, Movants, again, ask this Court to "make clear that any order denying recusal is final so that Movants may appeal this Court's order to the Northern District of Texas." Renewed Motion at 24.

123. As discussed above, in the Highland Objection, and at the August 31, 2022 status conference, it is not for this Court to determine whether its orders are final and appealable. Movants' therefore request this Court to take actions that, respectfully, it has no authority to take: (a) enter an order declaring any interlocutory order it enters denying the Renewed Motion "final" and (b) dictate to the District Court that it has jurisdiction to hear an appeal of that interlocutory order. Movants' request should be denied as a matter of law.

<sup>66</sup> See Friendly Fin. Serv.-Eastgate, Inc. v. Dorsey (In re Dorsey), 489 Fed. Appx. 763, 764 (5th Cir. 2012) ("Here, there is a final judgment from the bankruptcy court, but the appeal of that judgment has not been fully resolved. ... [W]e lack jurisdiction to review the motion to recuse. Friendly Finance must await the final resolution of its appeal.")

CONCLUSION

124. For the foregoing reasons, Highland respectfully requests that this Court deny the Renewed Motion and grant such other relief the Court deems just and proper.

I. INTRODUCTION

The Objection to Renewed Motion to Recuse (“Objection”) filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“HCMLP” or the “Debtor”) only underscores why recusal is not just warranted but necessary in this case. HCMLP devotes only nine pages of its Objection to actual legal argument. But that argument fails to address or distinguish much of the case law cited in Movants’ Amended Renewed Motion to Recuse (the “Renewed Motion”) [Doc. 3570] and relies on a litany of irrelevant cases that are easily distinguishable. The remaining 41 pages of the Objection consist of procedural background (critical parts of which are wrong) and “additional background,” which is largely rhetoric designed to exploit the Court’s existing bias.

The main thrust of HCMLP’s Objection is that the Renewed Motion is untimely and that the Court’s rulings are correct and final. But HCMLP cites the wrong legal standard for timeliness and relies on cases that have nothing to do with the posture of this case. HCMLP’s other refrain—that all of the Court’s rulings discussed in the Renewed Motion are correct and final—is both ironic (given HCMLP’s argument that the Court’s order on recusal cannot be considered “final”) and irrelevant to the ultimate issue of whether the Court’s treatment of Movants is objectively biased such that recusal is appropriate. HCMLP’s only answer to that key question is that the Court has said it is not biased, and so it must be true. That is not the standard for recusal and provides no basis to deny Movants’ Renewed Motion. The Renewed Motion should be granted.

II. HCMLP’S ITERATION OF THE “FACTS” IS IRRELEVANT AND WRONG

HCMLP’s 41-page recitation of “facts” is laden with unsubstantiated assertions, misinformation, and irrelevant arguments that appear largely designed to distort rather than educate. Movants see little utility in addressing many of those statements, which are irrelevant to the underlying question of whether the Court bears an objective bias against Movants requiring recusal. Instead, Movants address only the most egregious examples of factual misstatements.

A. HCMLP Misrepresents The Procedural History Of This Case

Although not relevant to the legal question of whether recusal is warranted, HCMLP devotes substantial space in its Objection to discussing actions that HCMLP took early in the bankruptcy case and attempting to hold those actions against Mr. Dondero. See, e.g., Opp., ¶¶ 1, 30-32, 34. For example, while HCMLP accuses Mr. Dondero of forum shopping in connection with the filing of HCMLP’s bankruptcy, HCMLP has been represented by the same counsel, Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP (“Pachulski”), since before the bankruptcy was filed. Pachulski was the law firm that filed HCMLP’s chapter 11 bankruptcy in Delaware on HCMLP’s behalf. Moreover, Pachulski mounted a lively argument to the Delaware court against transferring HCMLP’s bankruptcy to this Court based on some of the very same concerns Movants have raised in their recusal motion. Renewed Mot. at 5 and nn.20-22.

Additionally, while HCMLP also claims that Mr. Dondero cannot complain about this Court’s bias because HCMLP did not appeal the Delaware court’s order transferring HCMLP’s bankruptcy to the Northern District of Texas, only HCMLP could appeal such a decision, not Mr. Dondero. Notably, HCMLP completely omits any facts related to Pachulski’s representation of HCMLP at the time, including any legal advice or representations that Pachulski may have given in connection with any decision regarding pursuing an appeal. It is exceptionally misleading for Pachulski to now argue that Mr. Dondero did something wrong or otherwise sat on his hands.

HCMLP likewise alleges that Mr. Dondero “voluntarily surrendered control of Highland to an independent board of directors” and failed to object to or appeal (and to the contrary, “affirmatively approved”) the language of the related Settlement Order restricting Mr. Dondero’s actions and allowing the Court to sanction him. Obj., ¶¶ 38-39.<sup>1</sup> But again, HCMLP does not want to discuss the legal advice that Pachulski (which represented HCMLP at that time) may have given in connection with any of those decisions by HCMLP.

---

Finally, to justify the Court's treatment of Movants, HCMLP repeatedly invokes the supposed "history and culture of litigiousness" at HCMLP under Mr. Dondero's leadership as well as the "plethora" of rulings and other judgments issued against both Mr. Dondero and his affiliates prior to bankruptcy. See Obj., ¶¶ 1, 26, 42. Although Movants dispute HCMLP's characterization of the company's culture prior to bankruptcy, it is worth noting that the decisions made by Highland regarding litigation prior to bankruptcy were not "propagated" solely by Mr. Dondero but were often conceived of and approved by other "human beings," including Thomas Surgent, HCMLP's former and current Chief Compliance Officer, its former Deputy General Counsel, and its current General Counsel. See Obj., ¶ 42. HCMLP conveniently buries Mr. Surgent's significant role in the company's past. Further, HCMLP fails to cite a single pre-bankruptcy ruling or judgment against Mr. Dondero, and Movants are aware of none. Nonetheless, HCMLP is content to make this statement repeatedly as though it is fact, which is consistent with what HCMLP has done throughout these bankruptcy proceedings.

B. HCMLP Misreads The Court's Order On Movants' Motion To Supplement

At the outset of its Objection, HCMLP argues that Movants' Renewed Motion should be rejected because it was filed in violation of the Court's order denying Movants' Motion for Final, Appealable Order and Supplement to Motion to Recuse ("Motion to Supplement"). Obj., ¶ 23 & n.21. That order directed Movants to either (1) file a "simple motion," seeking only a "revised and amended recusal order" but removing language that Movants perceived to impede their appellate rights, or (2) "file a new motion . . . based on alleged new evidence or grounds for confusingly and contradictorily that Mr. Dondero was "forced to resign." Compare Obj., ¶ 38, with Obj., ¶ 32.

recusal” not previously considered by the Court. Order, Dkt. 3479 at 3. Importantly, however, the Court’s order on the Motion to Supplement came on the heels of a hearing in which the Court specifically told Movants they could file a “new motion to recuse . . . to start this over and supplement the record.” App’x at 0210 (emphasis added).<sup>2</sup> HCMLP now argues that what Movants were supposed to file was a motion to recuse limited to new record evidence of bias and nothing more. That argument is both nonsensical and irrelevant.

The entire point of Movants’ Motion to Supplement was to ensure that an appellate court, when reviewing Movants’ request for recusal, has the benefit of the entire record supporting recusal, as Movants made clear in their Motion to Supplement and at the hearing on that motion. See Dkt. 3470 at 4; App’x at 0207. If the Court’s order were read in the manner suggested by HCMLP, that would mean an appellate court could only consider a small portion of the record on appeal from the Court’s denial of Movants’ Renewed Motion, which would give the appellate court only a fraction of the relevant picture. That makes no sense and adopting HCMLP’s reading of the order would only further impede Movants’ due process right to build an appellate record based on all salient evidence, which is all Movants have been trying to do. In fact, HCMLP acknowledges that such attempt to restrict the record would be improper, as it admits that the Court must focus on the “entirety of the proceedings.” Obj., ¶ 120.

In any event, HCMLP’s argument makes no difference to whether the Court should grant or deny Movants’ Renewed Motion. Movants’ basis for recusal is not a single fact or an isolated incident. Instead, Movants seek recusal based on a pattern of treatment throughout the bankruptcy proceedings that, taken as a whole, demonstrate both the appearance of bias and actual animus toward Movants. There is no procedural or statutory bar to filing a motion to recuse at any time under these circumstances, based on any record evidence the moving party deems relevant to the issue. The Court may disagree that the evidence cited supports the relief requested, but Movants' mere inclusion of prior evidence is not a reason to deny the Renewed Motion.

C. HCMLP's Arguments About The Outcome Of Various Rulings Are Irrelevant

HCMLP also spends much of its time arguing that various rulings by the Court are final, were not appealed or have been upheld on appeal, or were otherwise correct. See, e.g., Obj., ¶¶ 6, 12 n.11, 35, 39, 45, 64, 69, 71, 80. That is irrelevant. As Movants acknowledged in their Renewed Motion, recusal ordinarily should not be used as a mechanism to challenge the outcome of rulings issued by the courts. See Renewed Mot. at 20. And that is not what Movants seek to do. Instead, Movants seek recusal because the Court's process—including its overt negative rhetoric, its departure from usual procedures, and its general treatment of Movants—reflects the type of deep-seeded animosity that would cause any objective observer to question the Court's impartiality.<sup>3</sup>

In short, it does not matter whether the Court “got it right” or not. Recusal is required where, as here, the Court has acted in a manner that is partial, or at the very least appears partial.

D. HCMLP Distorts The Factual Record And Fails To Cite Relevant Evidence

HCMLP spills a lot of ink describing (in a manner rife with misstatements and distortions but often lacking citations or evidentiary support) what happened at various hearings cited by Movants in the Renewed Motion as evidence of bias. Again, the outcome of various motions and

---

<sup>3</sup> In any event, it is ironic that HCMLP argues so strenuously that any order on recusal cannot be final when it argues that various other interlocutory orders of this Court are necessarily final. See Obj., ¶¶ 3, 67. Notably, the issue of finality in this context is not as simple as HCMLP would have this Court think. In chapter 11 cases, there typically is no “final judgment” the way there is in an ordinary civil case in federal district court. For that reason, courts have held that the order confirming the chapter 11 plan of reorganization is the “final judgment” in bankruptcy. See, e.g., In re Shank, 569 B.R. 238, 249 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2017) (citing United Student Aid Funds, Ins. v. Espinosa, 559 U.S. 260, 269 (2010)). The Plan was confirmed and became effective more than a year ago in this case. The vast majority of HCMLP's assets have been liquidated. Unsecured creditors have been paid a significant percentage of their claims. Yet HCMLP would seemingly have the courts conclude that that the case still is not “final” for purposes of appeal.

hearings makes little difference to this analysis. How those results came to be, on the other hand, makes all the difference. Thus, in addition to clarifying some of the more egregious misstatements made by HCMLP in the Objection, Movants will also clarify its use of the Court's hearing and rulings to demonstrate the Court's bias.

The June 2020 CLO Holdco Hearing. HCMLP argues the Court's statements and actions at the CLO HoldCo hearing are not evidence of bias because "neither CLOH nor the DAF are Movants." Obj., ¶ 47. HCMLP further argues that Movants have the facts wrong because, HCMLP insists, "the $2.5 million was deposited into the court registry at CLOH's request." Obj., ¶ 48 (emphasis in original). Both of these arguments are wrong.

First, it makes no difference that CLOH and the DAF are not Movants in the Renewed Motion. Both HCMLP and the Court have repeatedly argued that every entity remotely connected to Mr. Dondero is "controlled" by him, including CLOH and the DAF.<sup>4</sup> Moreover, the whole point is that the Court's animus toward Mr. Dondero results in the Court treating all of Mr. Dondero's affiliates (or presumed affiliates) as inherently suspicious, leading to rulings that are at odds with the evidence and the law. This is precisely what happened at the CLO Holdco hearing.<sup>5</sup>

Second, HCMLP's argument that CLOH's money was deposited into the Court registry because CLOH wanted it there is disingenuous at best. Indeed, even the Debtor argued to the

<sup>4</sup> Indeed, one of the reasons that the Court refused to release CLOH's money, despite the Debtor's argument that it should do so, is because Matt Clemente, on behalf of the Unsecured Creditors Committee, argued at the hearing that the Court should disallow the distributions to CLOH and the DAF because those entities were "owned and/or controlled by Mr. Dondero." HCMLP App'x, at 3245.

<sup>5</sup> HCMLP argues that "Movants cannot have it both ways" and "[e]ither CLOH and the DAF are controlled by Mr. Dondero or they are not." Obj., ¶ 18. They are not "related" but are "connected." But it is HCMLP that is trying to have it both ways: it has argued throughout the bankruptcy proceedings that CLOH and the DAF, like many other entities, are "controlled" by Mr. Dondero, but they take the position in their Objection that the Court's treatment of CLOH and the DAF has nothing to do with him. In any event, the Plan (a document drafted by HCMLP) identifies CLOH and the DAF as "Related Parties," meaning that HCMLP views Mr. Dondero, CLOH, and the DAF as operating in lock-step. See Plan at 14.

Court at the hearing that the money should be released to CLOH. See March 4, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 17:8-22, HCMLP App’x at 3234. However, when it became apparent that the Court was disinclined to release the money, Mr. Dondero’s counsel proposed that, in the event the Court denied the motion, the funds at issue should be distributed into the registry of the Court as an alternative to permitting HCMLP to retain them. See id. at 3260. CLOH and the DAF certainly did not request that the Court retain the funds in its registry indefinitely, nor did they argue that depositing the funds in the Court’s registry was the correct course of action.

HCMLP also argues that the Court’s actions were not biased because CLOH sought a release of its money from the Court’s registry less than a month later, something HCMLP deems “evidence of CLOH’s bad faith.” Obj., ¶ 19. Accusing Mr. Dondero and any entity connected to him of “bad faith” is another favorite tactic of HCMLP, likely because the Court has demonstrated its receptiveness to accusations of bad faith against Mr. Dondero, even when there is no valid basis for or evidence supporting the accusation. But in this particular instance, the Court did not find that CLOH was acting in bad faith by seeking a release of money that indisputably belonged to it. And again, CLOH never agreed that its money could remain in the Court’s registry indefinitely. In any event, HCMLP’s argument in this regard is particularly misleading because HCMLP agreed to the release of CLOH’s money. It did so because there was no good faith reason to refuse to do so. Notably, although the parties objecting to the release of CLOH’s funds indisputably had no legal basis to object and no right to the funds (i.e., zero ownership interest in the funds), at no time did the Court comment that their objections were “Rule 11 frivolous” or threaten the objectors with sanctions.

The December 2020 Restriction Motion. HCMLP also argues at length about why the Court’s actions at the hearing on the Restriction Motion do not support recusal. Obj., ¶¶ 51-56.

In particular, HCMLP cites a string of “admissions” from one of HCMLP’s former Executive Vice Presidents, Dustin Norris, to argue that Mr. Norris provided “all of the evidence the Court needed to reach its conclusion” that Mr. Dondero was the sole person responsible for filing the Restriction Motion (which sought to prevent the liquidation of certain CLO assets). Obj., ¶¶ 54-55. But HCMLP conveniently fails to include all of the testimony Mr. Norris provided regarding the decision by the Retail Funds and the Advisors to file the Restriction Motion.<sup>6</sup> Mr. Norris actually testified that, while Mr. Dondero vocalized concern about HCMLP’s decision to liquidate the CLO assets, the Advisors’ internal legal team, compliance team, and Mr. Norris working with outside counsel, along with senior management of Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors decided to pursue filing the Restriction Motion. See December 16, 2020 Hr’g Tr. at 29:21-30:1, HCMLP App’x at 3368. This is the critical testimony, and the Court simply ignored because it did not fit the narrative that Mr. Dondero is the bad actor behind every legal motion made in HCMLP’s bankruptcy proceeding and nobody around him is able to make their own informed decision.

The January 2021 Injunctive Relief Hearing. Drawing on one of its favorite unsupported themes (i.e., Mr. Dondero as puppet master), HCMLP next argues that the Court’s treatment of the Retail Funds and Advisors at the January 2021 injunctive relief hearing was appropriate because “Mr. Dondero caused the Advisors and Retail Funds to continue interfering with, and unjustifiably threatening, Highland.” Obj., ¶ 57. Of course, HCMLP cites no evidence for this accusation. Then HCMLP doubles down, and it accuses Movants of “failing to disclose key facts” relating to the hearing. Obj., ¶ 59. The first such “fact” is HCMLP’s argument that Movants “now admit”

<sup>6</sup> The “Retail Funds” are Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. The “Advisors” are Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. Renewed Mot. at 19-20. Although there is no evidence of record that these entities are or were owned or controlled by Mr. Dondero (and HCMLP cites to none), in keeping with its tactic of arguing that every entity is “controlled” by Mr. Dondero, HCMLP labels the Retail Funds and Advisors the “Dondero Parties” and argues that the Retail Funds are “controlled” by him. Obj., ¶¶ 53, 63. They are not.

the K&L Gates Letters were improper. Obj., ¶ 60. In support of this argument, HCMLP quotes a short-hand description of the K&L Gates Letters from Movants’ original recusal motion. Id., ¶ 60 n.40. Movants most certainly did not and do not admit that the K&L Gates Letters were improper. Those letters did nothing more than tell the Debtor that the Retail Funds and Advisors intended to seek the Court’s permission to lift the automatic stay to exercise their contractual rights.

HCMLP nonetheless argues (again, under the guise of “fact”) that the K&L Gates Letters were “quintessentially vexatious and sanctionable conduct” because they sought previously denied relief through alternative means. Obj., ¶ 60 (citing Nix v. Major League Baseball, 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104770, at *58-65 (S.D. Tex. June 13, 2022)). It is unclear how a letter explaining the Retail Funds’ and Advisors’ intent to seek Court permission to act could possibly be considered vexatious, and the case cited by HCMLP does not clear up that mystery. In Nix, the plaintiff filed multiple repetitive lawsuits in various jurisdictions and also lawsuits in the same jurisdiction alleging slightly different causes of action. 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS, at *58-65. That is vastly different from the situation involved here, where the Retail Funds and Advisors took non-judicial action by asking the Debtor not to liquidate CLO assets at below market value and advising the Debtor that they would seek Court intervention if necessary.

The January 2021 Examiner Motion. HCMLP also argues that the Court’s disenfranchisement of Movants makes no difference because Movants “admit” they acted for an improper purpose in seeking the appointment of an examiner in advance of the February 2021 confirmation hearing. Obj., ¶ 67 (citing Movants’ original recusal motion). Specifically, according to HCMLP, Movants “admit” that they filed a motion for an examiner “to force a delay of the long-scheduled Confirmation Hearing.” Id. But the quote HCMLP cites (which is from Movants’ original recusal motion as opposed to the Renewed Motion) is taken out of context. The very next sentence of the original recusal motion explains that Movants sought to have the examiner motion heard on an expedited basis to prevent delay of the confirmation hearing, which might occur if the motion was heard on an ordinary schedule. See Original Recusal Mot., Dkt. 2061, ¶ 37.<sup>7</sup> Rather than provide expedited relief—something the Court has done many times at HCMLP’s request—the Court set the hearing on Movants’ motion on a date after the scheduled confirmation hearing, ensuring that Movants could not be meaningfully heard because, as the Court knew, an examiner cannot be appointed after plan confirmation.<sup>8</sup>

Orders Requiring Mr. Dondero to Appear. HCMLP does not meaningfully dispute that the Court took the extraordinary measure of requiring Mr. Dondero to appear at all hearings, including hearings that had nothing to do with him. Instead, HCMLP argues (without citation) that Mr. Dondero proved that the Court’s order was appropriate when he “subsequently failed to appear at a hearing thereby validating the Court’s concerns.” Obj., ¶ 76. This accusation is highly disingenuous. As Mr. Dondero’s counsel explained on the record at that hearing, the motion at issue (a motion to continue) was set on an expedited basis, Mr. Dondero’s counsel was not aware that Mr. Dondero needed to attend non-evidentiary hearings in the main bankruptcy case and, therefore, counsel failed to coordinate with Mr. Dondero to apprise him of the hearing and his need to appear, which counsel admitted was an “oversight” on counsel’s part.<sup>9</sup> In other words, there is no evidence that Mr. Dondero deliberately flouted the Court’s order. Notwithstanding counsel’s admission that the mistake was his, the Court sua sponte issued a new order requiring Mr. Dondero

<sup>7</sup> Notwithstanding that HCMLP ignores the context of the quote it relies on (which actually shows that Movants’ intent was the opposite of delay), HCMLP deems Movants’ act of filing the examiner motion “quintessentially vexatious.” Obj., ¶ 67.

<sup>8</sup> For that reason, HCMLP’s observation that “[n]o party appealed the denial of the Examiner Motion” makes no sense. As HCMLP’s counsel is no doubt aware, an examiner cannot be appointed after plan confirmation, so any appeal of the Court’s order would have been futile and no doubt would have been labeled by HCMLP as “vexatious.”

to appear at every hearing going forward, whether substantive or not, and whether he took a position on the issue to be heard or not. See Order dated May 24, 2021, Dkt. 2362.

HCMLP also strenuously argues that the Court “never ordered Nancy Dondero to appear at any hearings.” Obj., ¶ 77. But HCMLP admits that the Court did order the trustee of The Dugaboy Investment Trust (“Dugaboy”) and Get Good Trust to attend any hearings involving those entities or hearings at which those entities took a position. Order, Dkt. 2458. And the Court knew at that point that Mr. Dondero’s sister, Nancy Dondero, was the acting trustee of Dugaboy. The Court only ordered the trustees to appear because it “ha[d] concerns whether these Trusts [were] simply acting at the direction of Mr. Dondero and are not independent parties.” Id. at 3. In other words, the Court’s order intentionally targeted Mr. Dondero.<sup>10</sup> In the more than three years since this bankruptcy proceeding began, the Court has not ordered any other party to attend all hearings.

Other Supposed “Facts”. In addition to these factual misstatements and distortions, HCMLP also fails to cite evidence and, on numerous occasions, couches allegations as fact. By way of example only:

- HCMLP makes numerous statements of supposed “fact” without citing any evidence to support the allegation, including, but not limited to: Obj., ¶¶ 28 (Mr. Dondero and his entities are legion), 30 (chapter 11 filed in Delaware because Mr. Dondero thought it would be a more hospitable forum), 37 (settlement was necessary due to Dondero entities’ history of self-dealing), 42 (Mr. Dondero and his entities have a history of litigiousness supported only by a footnote that is further factual argument rather than evidence to support such an allegation), 57 (Mr. Dondero continued to cause advisors to interfere with HCMLP), 63 (Mr. Dondero controls all of the Dondero entities and causes them to attempt to reassert control

---

<sup>10</sup> HCMLP also argues that the Court’s order requiring the trustees for Dugaboy and Get Good to appear at hearings was much narrower than the order regarding Mr. Dondero. Obj., ¶ 77. While the Court did not order the trustees to attend all hearings, the order was nonetheless incredibly broad. It required Ms. Dondero as trustee to attend “all future hearings in th[e] Bankruptcy Case in which the Trusts have taken or are taking a position.” Order, Dkt. 2458, at 3. The order further clarified: “This directive does not apply merely to evidentiary hearings or “substantive” hearings, and [sic] it applies to the underlying bankruptcy case as well as related adversary proceedings in which the Trusts are parties or take positions.” Id.

over HCMLP), 82 (Movants filed the HV Complaint).

- HCMLP repeatedly attributes actions to the Movants that the Movants did not take and calls every party it describes a “Dondero party,” again without citation to any evidence of ownership, control, or even involvement. See, e.g., Obj., ¶ 1, 53, 63, 82, 85.
- In describing the Court’s “experience with Mr. Dondero,” HCMLP cites (as one example of Mr. Dondero’s prior “bad acts”) that “Mr. Dondero allegedly orchestrated a fraudulent transfer of assets that left the Acis debtors judgment proof.” Obj., ¶ 29. It is unclear how an unsubstantiated “allegation” could support this Court’s opinions of Mr. Dondero, but this highlights the problem.

HCMLP’s recitation of supposed facts falls well short of providing any viable reason to reject Movants’ Renewed Motion.

E. HCMLP’s Factual Arguments Only Underscore Why Recusal Is Necessary

What is perhaps most telling about HCMLP’s recitation of “facts” is its tendency to repeatedly emphasize those points that it believes will resonate with this Court, even where the point is untethered to fact.

Most notably, HCMLP repeats its allegations that the problem here is not judicial bias but “the never-ending, meritless, vindictive, and vexatious litigation strategy that Mr. Dondero stubbornly clings to regardless of the burdens imposed on the judicial system, the havoc wrought, and the damages inflicted on himself, Highland’s creditors, and even his own steadfast loyalists.” Obj., ¶ 2. That statement is remarkably ironic, for a number of reasons. First, as HCMLP acknowledges, “[t]his Court did not find or conclude that Movants are ‘vexatious litigants.’” Id., ¶ 71 n. 43 (emphasis in original).<sup>11</sup> Nonetheless, HCMLP uses that adjective to describe Mr.

<sup>11</sup> Under Texas law, a Court “‘may find a plaintiff a vexatious litigant if the defendant shows that there is not a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will prevail in the litigation against the defendant’ and one of three additional prerequisites has occurred within the last seven years ... These additional elements include (1) the filing of at least five suits as a pro se litigant that have been dismissed against the plaintiff; (2) relitigating a case pro se after having previously received an adverse and final determination; and (3) a prior finding in state or federal court that the plaintiff is a vexatious litigant in an action concerning the same or substantially similar facts.” Baldwin v. Zurich Am. Ins. Co., 2017 WL 2963515, *4 (W.D. Tex. July 11, 2017) (citing Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 11.054).

Dondero no less than 12 times in its Objection alone.<sup>12</sup> HCMLP goes as far as using an out-of-context quote to describe Movants as “quintessentially vexatious.”<sup>13</sup> “Vexatious” is also the adjective most used by HCMLP and its counsel to describe Mr. Dondero when arguing before this Court.<sup>14</sup> Consequently, it only makes sense that the adjective: (1) found its way into the Court’s order confirming HCMLP’s Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) (the “Plan”), (2) provided the purported justification for the Court to adopt a sweeping channeling provision, and (3) has been subsequently regurgitated by appellate courts, as if there has been some finding or legal basis to declare Mr. Dondero “vexatious.”<sup>15</sup> There has not, which is why the Court’s ubiquitous use of the term is so problematic and so emblematic of the Court’s bias.

HCMLP likewise repeats the same tired accusation that a myriad of “courts and arbitration panels” in various states and foreign jurisdictions have adjudicated claims or ruled against Mr. Dondero. Obj., ¶¶ 1, 6.<sup>16</sup> HCMLP does not cite any examples of such judgments or rulings, because there are none.<sup>17</sup> That reality does not seem to bother HCMLP; instead, HCMLP merely

<sup>12</sup> Obj., ¶¶ 2, 60, 67, 70, 71, 95, 97, 100; see also id., ¶ 42 (describing the “culture of litigiousness” under Mr. Dondero’s control).

<sup>14</sup> See, e.g., Dkt. 1828, ¶ 22 (“Exculpation is particularly appropriate in this case to stem the tide of frivolous and vexatious litigation against the Exculpated Parties which Dondero and his Related Entities are seeking so desperately to continue to pursue.”); Dkt. 3487 at 2 (“abruptly moving to withdraw its Dondero-signed proof of claim after two years of litigation, and after taking Highland’s deposition but days before its own Witnesses were to be deposed, is a textbook example of vexatiousness—and is just the latest instance of Mr. Dondero bringing motions, or asserting claims, or filing objections, only to withdraw them after forcing Highland to spend time, money, and effort addressing them.”); Dkt. 3550, ¶ 22 (“The Gatekeeper was created to give Highland, among others, breathing room to consummate the Plan and manage Highland’s assets free from Mr. Dondero’s vexatious and harassing litigation for the benefit of all creditors.”).

<sup>16</sup> See also id., ¶ 28 (claiming that “[t]he adverse rulings against Mr. Dondero and his entities are legion,” but citing none).

<sup>17</sup> The only actual examples cited by HCMLP are the arbitration award issued in favor of the Redeemer Committee against HCMLP, and a discovery ruling issued by the Delaware Chancery Court in a totally separate proceeding. Obj., ¶¶ 26-27 & nn.25-26. But again, neither the arbitration award or the discovery ruling were issued against Mr. Dondero.

argues that the actual parties involved in those legal battles were controlled by Mr. Dondero, so the Court should attribute any bad findings to him. Obj., ¶ 28 n.7. Despite being legally and factually unsupported, the Court has previously adopted that logic, which is why HCMLP employs it here.

More importantly, it makes no difference whether other courts have ruled against parties controlled by Mr. Dondero on other issues. The Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution requires an impartial and disinterested tribunal. Caperton v. A.T. Massey Coal Co., 556 U.S. 868, 877 (2009) (“It is axiomatic that a fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process.”). Section 455 was enacted because litigants “ought not have to face a judge where there is a reasonable question of impartiality.” H. Rep. No. 1453, 93rd Cong., 2d Sess. 1 (1974), reprinted in 1974 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 6351, 6355. Movants are entitled to fair treatment in this Court on the evidentiary record actually before it.

III. HCMLP’S LEGAL ARGUMENTS ARE MERITLESS

A. HCMLP’s Argument Regarding Timeliness Is Wrong

Throughout its Objection, HCMLP repeatedly references the timing of Movants’ Renewed Motion, arguing that the length of time that has passed since various rulings issued by the Court makes the Renewed Motion “per se” untimely. Obj., ¶¶ 102, 108. HCMLP’s argument misstates the law and misses the point.

As a preliminary matter, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has never adopted a “per se untimeliness” rule. To the contrary, the Fifth Circuit has expressly “declined” to do so. United States v. Sanford, 157 F.3d 987, 988 (5th Cir. 1998). Indeed, even in Hill v. Schilling, 495 F. App’x 480, 483 (5th Cir. 2012)—the case cited by HCMLP for its “per se untimeliness” argument—the Fifth Circuit did not adopt or apply a per se rule. Instead, the Court, faced with a single alleged act of judicial impropriety, explained that “the closest thing to per se untimeliness” occurs “when a party already knows the facts purportedly showing an appearance of impropriety but waits until after an adverse decision has been made by the judge before raising the issue of recusal.” Hill, 495 F. App’x at 483 (emphasis added). In Hill, unlike here, the movants sought recusal based solely on their allegation that the trial judge’s spouse held an economic interest in one of the parties. Id. Despite knowing about the economic interest for some time, the movants proceeded through trial and did not move to recuse the judge until after receiving an unfavorable judgment. Id. In that very different circumstance, the Fifth Circuit agreed that the motion to recuse was untimely.<sup>18</sup>

The Fifth Circuit’s reasoning in Hill (and the remaining cases cited by Movants) has no application to this case, where Movants assert a pattern of conduct that, taken as a whole, reveals both the appearance of bias and actual animus towards Movants. See Davis v. Board of School Com’rs of Mobile Cnty., 517 F.2d 1044, 1051 (5th Cir. 1975) (grounds for recusal exist “where such pervasive bias and prejudice is shown by otherwise judicial conduct as would constitute bias against a party”). Nor is this a situation where Movants have employed a “wait and see” approach and only sought recusal after an adverse judgment. As HCMLP itself argues, nothing in this case is “final,” the Kirschner litigation (which the Court has recommended it should retain through trial) is in its nascent stages, the Court continues to preside over several other adversary proceedings involving Movants, and the Plan allows the Court to sit as gatekeeper over any potential disputes

<sup>18</sup> The entirety of the case law cited by HCMLP is similarly inapposite. In each of those cases, there was a single alleged basis for recusal, either the judge’s personal relationship with one of the parties or the judge’s economic interest in the outcome of the litigation. See Sanford, 157 F.3d at 988 (recusal based on fact that one party’s counsel previously testified against judge); United States v. Olis, 571 F. Supp. 2d 777, 783 (5th Cir. 2008) (recusal based on judge’s alleged social contacts with interested parties); Grambling Univ. Nat’l Alumni Ass’n v. Bd. of Supervisors for La. System, 286 F. App’x 864, 867 (5th Cir. 2008) (recusal based on court’s prior working relationship with counsel, a former judge of the same court); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Liljeberg Enters., Inc., 38 F.3d 1404, 1410 (5th Cir. 1994) (recusal based on judge’s social contacts with interested parties); United States v. York, 888 F.2d 1050, 1055 (5th Cir. 1989) (recusal based on judge’s knowledge of extrajudicial facts as a result of familial relationship with one party); Delesdernier v. Porterie, 666 F.2d 116, 122 (5th Cir. 1982) (recusal based on court’s prior working relationship with counsel).

even touching upon the Plan. Movants seek recusal now because the Court's bias and animus represents a continuing and ongoing harm that can only be remedied if a non-biased fact-finder presides over the myriad proceedings still before the Court. There is no timing issue under these circumstances.

Further, HCMLP's contention that concerns of judicial economy render the Renewed Motion untimely is also wrong. As Movants explained in their opening brief, the goal of 28 U.S.C. § 455 is to promote public confidence in the judicial system by avoiding even the appearance of partiality. See Renewed Mot. at 19-20; see also Levitt v. Univ. of Texas at El Paso, 847 F.2d 221, 226 (5th Cir. 1988). For that reason, courts addressing this issue have consistently chosen impartiality over judicial economy, including in cases where recusal was sought only on remand after trial. See Renewed Mot. at 23 & n.122 (citing cases). As these courts have explained, "the gain in protecting against actual bias, prejudice, or conflict of interest outweighs the loss to judicial economy . . ." See, e.g., York, 888 F.2d at 1055. Judicial economy is not more important than impartial justice and certainly is no reason to deny the Renewed Motion.

B. Movants Do Not Rely On Extrajudicial Bias, Nor Is It Required For Recusal

HCMLP next contends that the "core" of the Renewed Motion is extrajudicial bias, which it claims does not exist. Obj., ¶ 113. This is a gross mischaracterization of Movants' arguments. Movants expressly do not rely on extrajudicial bias as the basis for recusal, nor is extrajudicial bias a prerequisite to recusal, as Movants explained in their opening brief. See Renewed Mot. at 20 n.102, 103. Rather, in Liteky, a case on which HCMLP principally relies, the Supreme Court clarified that extrajudicial bias, while a common basis for establishing grounds for recusal, is not the exclusive means. Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 551, 554 (1994) ("The fact that an opinion held by a judge derives from a source outside judicial proceedings is not a necessary condition for 'bias or prejudice' recusal, since predispositions developed during the course of a trial will sometimes (albeit rarely) suffice.”). It bears repeating that “judicial remarks during the course of a trial” that “reveal such a high degree of favoritism or antagonism as to make fair judgment impossible,” will support a bias or partiality challenge. Id. at 555; Renewed Mot. at 21. The Fifth Circuit recognized this “pervasive bias” exception to the extrajudicial bias doctrine even before Liteky. See Davis, 517 F.2d at 1051.

In any event, as HCMLP acknowledges, Movants do point to at least one instance in which the Court relied on an extrajudicial source—a news article that the Judge read—to make inquiries about whether HCMLP applied for or received COVID-related Payroll Protection Plan (“PPP”) loans. Obj., ¶ 46 n. 64. HCMLP nonetheless argues that the Court’s reliance on an extrajudicial source is not evidence of bias because the Court took no action against Mr. Dondero or Movants and only required HCMLP to respond to the Court’s inquiries. Id. HCMLP misses the point. The reason that Movants cite this particular example is because the Court raised the issue of PPP loans only because of the Court’s unfavorable perception (untethered to any factual basis) of Mr. Dondero. Specifically, the Court stated that it had “extrajudicial knowledge thanks to keeping up with current events” and openly questioned in Court whether “Mr. Dondero or Highland affiliates” improperly obtained PPP loans.<sup>19</sup> An exchange then occurred between the Court and HCMLP’s counsel in which HCMLP’s counsel represented that the Debtor had not obtained a PPP loan but that he had “no way of answering” whether “Mr. Dondero, or any of his affiliated funds” had done so.<sup>20</sup> As a result, the Court required Debtor’s counsel to investigate whether any such loan had been obtained and to report back to the Court, explaining “you can probably imagine the different things going through my brain,” and clarifying, “I’m not expecting it to be Highland Capital

Management, LP.”<sup>21</sup> In short, the Court directed HCMLP to investigate Mr. Dondero and his affiliates for suspected wrongdoing based on an admittedly extrajudicial source. That is evidence of bias based on an extrajudicial source that weighs in favor of recusal.

C. There Can Be No Doubt Of The Court’s Antagonism For Movants

HCMLP next argues that there is no basis to find that the Court has demonstrated the degree of favoritism or antagonism necessary for recusal. Obj., ¶ 22. However, in making this argument, HCMLP cites little more than the Court’s own subjective denial of bias. See Obj., ¶ 12 (quoting Court’s statements that it has “the utmost respect for [Movants]” and “no disrespect for Mr. Dondero”); id. at ¶ 119 (noting the Court’s characterization of its statements as mere “clashes between a court and counsel” that are “simply insufficient” for recusal). That cursory response ignores the substantial body of statements made by the Court throughout these proceedings, including statements where the Court accuses Mr. Dondero and his affiliates of wrongdoing (often based on little more than suspicion), describes them as bad actors, and determines that they lack credibility in virtually every situation in which they are called to give testimony.<sup>22</sup>

HCMLP’s response also ignores the substantial body of case law cited in Movants’ opening brief, which contain examples of bias warranting recusal that were far less egregious than what has occurred in this case. If, as HCMLP insists, the Court focuses on the “entirety of the proceedings” (Obj., ¶ 120), there can be no doubt that the Court’s statements amount to much more than mere “clashes between a court and counsel.” The Court’s negative statements about Mr. Dondero and his affiliates are so consistent and pervasive that they have been regurgitated ad

<sup>22</sup> See, e.g., January 26, 2021 H’rg Tr. at 240:14-20 (The Court to Mr. Dondero: “But the more I hear, the more I feel you’re just trying to burn the house down. Okay? Maybe it’s an either/or proposition with you: I’ll either get my company back or I’ll burn the house down. That’s what it feels like.”); Confirmation Order, Dkt. 1943 at ¶ 19 (“[T]he Bankruptcy Court questions [the objectors’] good faith. Specifically, the Bankruptcy Court considers them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero.”).

nauseum by his detractors, adopted by HCMLP as a method of bolstering almost every argument it makes before this Court, and repeated by appellate courts even when this Court's statements do not amount to true "findings" of fact. By way of summary, the Court has:

- admitted that the negative opinions the Court formed about Mr. Dondero during the Acis Bankruptcy cannot be excised from the Court's mind;
- made repeated references to proceedings in the Acis Bankruptcy to justify findings in the HCMLP proceedings that are not otherwise supported by this bankruptcy record;
- made repeated negative statements about Mr. Dondero, as well as entities and individuals that the Court perceives to have some relationship to Mr. Dondero, in connection with the Court's ruling;
- repeatedly threatened Mr. Dondero and his counsel with sanctions, questioned Movants' good faith, or concluded Movants were acting in bad faith for simply: (1) defending lawsuits and motions; (2) asserting valid legal positions; and/or (3) preserving their rights, including in the exact manner in which others have been permitted to do so (e.g., the US Trustee's objections to the Plan);
- sanctioned Mr. Dondero in connection with a motion that he and others testified he had no role in filing or responsibility for authorizing;
- prophylactically sanctioned Mr. Dondero and other entities and counsel if and when they assert their lawful appellate rights;
- disregarded the presumption that related corporations have institutional independence and concluded, without supporting evidence, that any entity the Court deems to be connected to or controlled by Mr. Dondero (i.e., including highly regulated, publicly-traded funds governed by independent boards) is essentially no more than a tool of Mr. Dondero;
- disregarded the testimony of any witness with a connection to Mr. Dondero as per se less credible, which includes attorneys and persons who owe fiduciary duties and ethical obligations; and
- ruled against Mr. Dondero and Movants at every possible opportunity, regardless of the evidence and the testimony before the Court.

In its Renewed Motion, Movants cited the Court to several cases in which the courts held that the same type of obvious antagonism displayed here was sufficient to require recusal. Renewed Mot. at 7 n.32, 9 n.40, 22 n.114. HCMLP does not attempt to address those cases, much less distinguish them. And many of those cases involve much less antagonism than what is at issue here. See e.g., Johnson v. Sawyer, 120 F.3d 1307, 1334-38 (5th Cir. 1997) (appearance of bias found based on judicial remarks like: the court had a “bone to pick” with the Internal Revenue Service; questioning the witness’s integrity because the testimony contradicted the court’s prior order; expressing concern post-trial about the conduct of the lawyers; attributing assertions to the wrong counsel); Sentis Grp., Inc., Coral Grp., Inc. v. Shell Oil Co, 559 F.3d 888, 904-05 (8th Cir. 2009) (a “sufficiently high degree of antagonism” was found where the court directed profanities at Plaintiffs or Plaintiffs’ counsel, denied Plaintiffs a meaningful opportunity to respond to Defendants’ argument that misconstrued the court’s prior orders, and dismissed Plaintiff’s attempt to explain those orders); see also United States v. Microsoft Corp., 56 F.3d 1448, 1464 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (noting “the district judge’s failure to accord any weight to Microsoft’s interests in making its determination adds to the appearance of bias in this case”).

The test for disqualification is simple: would it appear to a reasonable person that the court’s impartiality may be questioned? 28 U.S.C. § 455(a); Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 850 (2001). A cursory review of the record from these proceedings makes the answer to that question an easy “yes” here. The Court’s orders targeting Mr. Dondero (and those the Court deems associated with him) compromise the appearance of justice. Rorrer v. City of Stow, 743 F.3d 1025, 1049-50 (6th Cir. 2014) (finding the appearance of impartiality from the court’s issuance of a one-sided discovery order that limited the number of witness plaintiff may call without explanation or apparent rationale). So do the Court’s consistent expressions suggesting it has already decided Mr. Dondero is a bad actor. See Matter of Johnson, 921 F.2d 585, 587 (5th Cir. 1991) (judge abused discretion in declining to recuse where the record included statements that the judge “all but made up [his] mind as to what he was going to do in the case and that he was “not in the least inclined to be neutral”); United States v. Bergrin, 682 F.3d 261, 283-84 (3d Cir. 2012) (the court’s repeated expressions of discomfort with the manner in which an indictment was plead allowed the court’s impartiality to reasonably be questioned); United States v. Whitman, 209 F.3d 619, 625-26 (6th Cir. 2000) (the court’s impromptu lecture of defendant’s counsel’s attitude during proceedings “had the unfortunate effect of creating the impression that the impartial administration of the law was not his primary concern”). Viewed holistically, this record is more than sufficient to raise the appearance of partiality.

D. HCMLP Mischaracterizes The Alternative Relief Sought By Movants

Finally, HCMLP argues that this Court has no authority to grant Movants’ request to issue a ruling on Movants’ Renewed Motion that eliminates the retention of jurisdiction language that appeared in the Court’s prior order denying recusal. According to HCMLP, “it is not for this Court to determine whether its orders are final and appealable,” and the Court “has no authority” to enter an order of the type requested by Movants. Again, HCMLP mischaracterizes the relief sought by Movants and is wrong.

Contrary to HCMLP’s argument, Movants do not expect (and do not ask) this Court to make any ruling that its order on recusal is final, or to otherwise include language of finality. Movants merely ask the Court to eliminate any existing “reservation” language that could be construed by an appellate court as rendering the order non-final on the issue. As Movants have now explained multiple times, when Movants appealed this Court’s denial of their original motion to recuse, the District Court held it lacked jurisdiction to consider the appeal because the Bankruptcy Court’s ruling was non-final. See Renewed Mot. at 2 & n.6; see also Movants’ App’x, Ex. U at 5:11-6:9. In describing the Bankruptcy Court’s order, the District Court expressly noted the last sentence of that order, in which the Bankruptcy Court “reserve[d] the right to supplement or amend th[e] ruling.” Id.; see also Dondero v. Hon. Stacey G. Jernigan, Civ. Action No. 3-21-

CV-0879-K, Dkt. 39 at 2. HCMLP itself argued on appeal that this reservation of rights language was important and impeded finality because “Judge Jernigan’s potential future supplementation or amendment of the Recusal Order ‘might change the calculus’ of the order.” See id., Dkt. 31 at 5. Movants simply ask this Court to remove any perceived impediment to appellate review.

For that reason, HCMLP’s argument that the Court does not have authority to give the alternative relief requested by Movants makes no sense. This Court can obviously craft its orders using whatever language (or eliminating any language) it sees fit. That is all Movants ask the Court to do. HCMLP’s final argument should be rejected.

IV. CONCLUSION

It is time to put motion practice relating to recusal to an end. Movants respectfully request that the Court consider the entirety of the record supporting recusal and issue an order on Movants’ motion that accounts for the lengthy history of this case and the whole body of evidence presented. Movants also request that the Court issue an order that does not contain reservation of rights or other limiting language that could be later interpreted by an appellate court as an impediment to appellate jurisdiction.

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

JAMES DONDERO, HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT FUND ADVISORS, L.P., NEXPOINT ADVISORS, L.P., THE DUGABOY INVESTMENT TRUST, THE GET GOOD TRUST, and NEXPOINT REAL ESTATE PARTNERS, LLC, F/K/A HCRE PARTNERS, LLC, A DELAWARE LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY'S SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF AMENDED RENEWED MOTION TO RECUSE PURSUANT TO 28 U.S.C. § 455

MOVANTS' SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF AMENDED RENEWED MOTION TO RECUSE PURSUANT TO 28 U.S.C. § 455

James Dondero, Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., NexPoint Advisors, L.P., The Dugaboy Investment Trust, The Get Good Trust, and NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC, f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company (collectively, “Movants”) file this Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Support of Renewed Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455, supplementing their Amended Renewed Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 (the “Amended Renewed Recusal Motion”) [DE # 3570-3571.1] with information regarding two books published by Judge Jernigan, which Movants recently learned about and read. Those books, which were written and published while the Court was presiding over the bankruptcies of Acis Capital Management, L.P., Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, and HCMLP (the “Bankruptcy Proceedings”), contain derisive commentary about financial industry executives, the financial industry generally, and the financial instruments specifically at issue in HCMLP’s bankruptcy.

Further, the second novel appears based on Judge Jernigan’s experiences with HCMLP and Mr. Dondero in the Bankruptcy Proceedings.

On February 27, 2023, Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, LP filed a motion to recuse in the case styled: In re: Highland Capital Management LP, case number 21-03076, in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas. As addressed in that motion, the two novels at issue contain highly antagonistic statements about the hedge fund industry, hedge fund managers, and the same investment vehicles that the Court knows HCMLP managed pre-petition. While the Court claims at the outset of each novel that they are works of fiction, there can be little doubt, under the circumstances, that the books are based upon Judge Jernigan’s experiences as a sitting bankruptcy judge—and, in particular, from the Court’s experience presiding over the Bankruptcy Proceedings.

The first novel, He Watches All My Paths, was released on January 3, 2019, just weeks before the Court confirmed the joint bankruptcy plan of Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (collectively, “Acis”)—companies for which Mr. Dondero served as CEO and for which HCMLP performed certain management services prior to Acis’s bankruptcy. Against that backdrop, the book describes the financial industry as being dominated by “[h]igh flying hedge fund managers” that “suck up money like an i-robot vacuum” and seem to “make money no matter what” and who routinely show “outrageous amounts of hubris” as part of their “bro culture.” Moreover, the novel’s central protagonist, a Dallas federal bankruptcy judge, suspects that the death threats she is receiving are coming from a hedge fund manager that has previously appeared in her court.

The second novel, Hedging Death, was released in March 2022, less than a year after HCMLP’s Plan became effective and while the Bankruptcy Proceedings were still ongoing.

Hedging Death invokes even more details from the Bankruptcy Proceedings. Again, the central protagonist of the novel is a Dallas bankruptcy judge, and the protagonist’s husband is, like Judge Jernigan’s husband, a retired police officer and private investigator.<sup>1</sup> The story involves a Dallas hedge fund manager who is described as a reckless investment manager and vexatious litigant—the same language that the Court has described Mr. Dondero in the Bankruptcy Proceedings. The investment firm in the novel is called Ranger Capital and is experiencing economic distress largely due to extensive litigation stemming from bad investments. Notably, HCMLP’s original name was Ranger Asset Management, as is prominently disclosed on the website of Mr. Dondero’s investment firm NexPoint and which has been mentioned in other filings in the Bankruptcy Proceedings. In addition, HCMLP, like the “fictitious” Ranger Capital, initially sought chapter 11 protection because of investor litigation. The similarities do not stop there. In the novel, Ranger Capital, like HCMLP, is a “multi-billion dollar conglomerate, which manage[s] not just hedge funds but private equity funds, [collateralized debt obligations], CLOs, REITs, life settlements, and all manner of complicated financial products.” HCMLP and its affiliates managed hedge funds, private equity funds, CDOs, CLOs,<sup>2</sup> REITS, life settlement portfolios, and private investment accounts for institutions around the world—exactly the same unusual mix of investments at issue in the second “fictional” novel.<sup>3</sup> There can be no question that the basis for this mix of investments is derived from the Court’s work in Acis and Highland Bankruptcies.

<sup>2</sup> Notably, Highland was a pioneer that launched one of the first ever CLOs and was the world’s largest CLO manager for years.

<sup>3</sup> Notably, there are no other enterprises in Dallas that manage this mixture of product types. Moreover, this mixture includes products not normally found at the same firm because they (1) require divergent skill sets and teams to manage, (2) usually have significantly different time horizons for asset realization (which require a diverse base of investors with different timing needs), and (3) have limited overlap in which managed funds can take investments, such as CLOs and CDOs (which only can invest in debt), private equity (which is equity only), and REITs (which are real-estate only). Consequently, firms normally do not manage combinations of CLO and CDOs on one hand and REITs and private equity on the other, or products that are regarded as esoteric even within the finance community, such as life settlements portfolios.

Indeed, even financial hubs such as New York and Los Angeles have only a limited number of firms with the mixture of products found at HCMLP.<sup>4</sup> Notably, the novel describes the life settlement industry—an industry the Court knows that HCMLP and Mr. Dondero invested in—as “creepy,” “immoral,” “unethical,” and “should be illegal.”

In short, Judge Jernigan’s writings, which any reasonable person would agree appear patterned after Mr. Dondero, are additional evidence that the Court harbors exceedingly negative views about hedge fund managers and the hedge fund industry, generally, as well as Mr. Dondero specifically. At the very least, the commentary made in the novels about the financial managers, the financial industry, and the financial products at issue would lead a reasonable observer to question the Court’s impartiality in these Bankruptcy Proceedings, mandating recusal.

In short, the Court’s negative opinions of Mr. Dondero, Movants, and their perceived affiliates—as set forth in the Amended Renewed Recusal Motion and as reflected by the Court’s commentary in two recently-published novels—reveal a high degree of antagonism, which makes it nearly impossible for Mr. Dondero and the Affected Parties to fully defend themselves and assert their rights in this forum, including in connection with claims filed against Mr. Dondero and Affected Parties. At a minimum, that is the perception that has been created.<sup>5</sup>

Movants hereby supplement the Amended Renewed Recusal Motion. In doing so, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455, Movants respectfully request the Court, after considering the Amended Renewed

---

<sup>4</sup> Highland’s unique history created this diversity of product types. Highland primarily was a CLO manager that then created hedge funds to house its purchase of CLO equity tranches. Highland only opened its private equity funds when, in the 2008 financial crisis, bankruptcies forced many of the CLO’s debt positions to convert to equity. Highland created REITs because Dondero made personal investments in real estate, and a transactional lawyer hired in the legal department evidenced a flare for real estate investments which proved successful enough to support a REIT business. Life settlements also were the idea of a single analyst from another business unit to whom Dondero gave an opportunity. The Highland mixture of products likely exists only at a sprawling firm that invests in almost all asset types, or but not at any other founder-managed mid-size firm.

<sup>5</sup> Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 551 (1994); In re Kansas Pub. Employees Retirement Sys., 85 F.3d 1353, 1358 (8th Cir. 1996).

Recusal Motion and this Supplement thereto, grant their Motion and recuse herself from presiding over this proceeding. In the alternative, Movants hereby request that the Court make clear that any order denying recusal is final on the issue so that Movants may pursue any appellate remedies that exist, including mandamus.

Equity Firm Led By Conatus Alum Shuts Down After Failing to Recover From Tech-Stock Swoon

A brutal first half last year appears to have undone Emerson Point Capital, with multiple sources saying the Larchmont, N.Y., equity shop recently closed its doors.

Emerson Point, led by former Conatus Capital portfolio manager Amir Mokari, generated strong returns over its first four years of operation, but last year's rout in growth stocks – and particularly technology shares – led to steep losses in all three of its funds. The firm, which managed $825 million of gross assets as recently as July, terminated its SEC registration on Jan. 26. The operation appears to have spent the latter half of 2022 unwinding its positions.

Buoyed by inflows and performance gains, Verition Fund Management continues to add staff at a blistering pace emblematic of the biggest hedge fund giants.

The firm employed 220 people, including 135 investment pros, at yearend 2021 – up 115 total employees and 76 investment professionals from yearend 2020. Its investment professionals now number more than 200.

Verition, which has never had a down year since it began trading in 2008, also boosted its assets under management by 40% in 2022, from $4.8 billion to $6.7 billion.

Bankruptcy Litigant: Recuse Novelist Judge

A U.S. bankruptcy proceeding in Texas involving hedge fund operator Highland Capital Management has gotten so contentious that one of the founders, James Dondero, is pressing the judge to recuse herself from the case.

Dondero says Judge Stacey G.C. Jernigan has labeled him “vexatious” and “litigious” and called Dallas-based Highland a “ruinous web,” according to a motion for recusal. Her alleged animus stems from a previous case tried in her court involving Dondero, according to the motion, which was filed in September but which has not been previously reported.

Meanwhile, in a strange coincidence, Jernigan has penned a crime thriller portraying the sordid details of a fictional Dallas credit-fund manager that she says is not based on Dondero, though the firm’s name in the novel is nearly identical to the name of an investment shop Dondero previously ran.

Dondero initially tried to get the judge to recuse herself in March 2021, a motion denied by Jernigan. Dondero followed in September 2022 by leveling several allegations, though he did not refer to Jernigan’s novel.

“The Court’s animus toward Movants [Dondero and affiliated parties] is so evident, persistent, and severe that Movants cannot receive fair treatment or justice in this Court,” according to the 2022 motion. Jernigan, according to the filing, accused Dondero of “carpet-bombing us with paper and causing to expend resources,” labeling Dondero as “vexatious” and “litigious” and calling him a bad actor. She also characterized Highland Capital as a “Byzantine empire” and “ruinous web,” according to the filings.

“These accusations – which, to be clear, is all they are – have no basis in the realities of HCMLP’s [Highland Capital’s] business or Mr. Dondero’s management of it,” the filing states.

Highland, whose assets peaked in 2007 at around $40 billion, was a credit shop founded in 1998 by Dondero and Mark Okada. Dondero now runs Dallas real estate investment shop NexPoint Advisors, which he started in 2012. Okada is now founder of Sycamore Tree Capital in Dallas.

Highland’s hedge fund, Highland Crusader Fund, experienced severe losses in 2007 during the credit crisis, and its managers took steps similar to other credit-oriented hedge funds in that era, including the suspension of investor redemptions.

Highland became enmeshed in a frenzy of litigation, eventually filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection a decade later in 2019 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Wilmington, Del. Highland took the drastic step “to bring its numerous long-running legal dramas to a close,” according to a 2020 article in Institutional Investor headlined “Nothing Can Stop This Hedge Fund Soap Opera.”

An independent three-person board, the Unsecured Creditors Committee, was formed with distressed-debt specialist James Seery emerging as chief executive and chief reorganization officer in July 2019. The venue of the bankruptcy was moved to Texas in January 2020 at the behest of the creditors committee.

The issue for Dondero is that he had been part of a previous bankruptcy case in the same court. That first case, his lawyers insist, spawned the judge’s alleged animus toward Dondero.

That case involved Acis Capital Management, which managed a $100 million portfolio of collateralized loan obligations. Dondero, whose Highland was providing services to Acis, was also chief executive of Acis.

“Following transfer [to Texas], this Court foreshadowed that it would rely on the negative opinions it formed during the Acis Bankruptcy in dealing with Mr. Dondero, his former employees, and his affiliated entities,” the filing says.

Jernigan, who declined to comment on the pending case, moonlights as a novelist. Her latest legal thriller, “Hedging Death,” was published last March even as the case, first filed in her court in 2020, is ongoing.

In the novel, Jernigan’s protagonist, Judge Avery Lassiter, is embroiled in a story of “death, debt, and deception in Dallas,” according to one advertisement.

A major character in the book is wealthy Texas hedge fund manager Cade Graham, who is suspected of insurance fraud and is believed to have faked his own death. Graham is described in the novel as “a well-known playboy and high-flying Dallas hedge fund manager.”

“Graham was the founder and CEO of Dallas-based Ranger Capital, a multibillion-dollar conglomerate, which managed not just hedge funds but private equity funds, CDOs, CLOs, REITs, life settlements and all manner of complicated financial products,” a description of the novel reads.

A Highland Capital predecessor firm was called Ranger Asset Management. Separately, a Dallas firm unaffiliated with Highland or Dondero is called Ranger Capital Group, which runs traditional and alternative investment funds.

Traci Ellison, a courtroom deputy for Jernigan, said the judge “wanted me to share that no characters of any of her books are based on Mr. Dondero or any other actual person in a pending case. Her books are legal fiction.”

Jernigan has a history of drawing criticism. In an unrelated bankruptcy case – Cadle Co. vs. Brunswick Homes, et al. – she was chastised by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Northern District of Texas in 2014. The appellate court said it was “troubled by the bankruptcy court’s use of indirect inferences,” alleging Jernigan let her personal views and unfounded suspicions cause her to draw incorrect conclusions. ■

Shikuma Touts New Tech, Same Strategy

Shikuma Capital is enhancing its investing technology to take full advantage of its short-term discretionary tactical-trading ideas.

Although Shikuma’s strategy continues to have a high annualized return of 15% since inception in August 2018 – substantially higher than the 5.9% annualized return of the HFRI Macro Total Index – last year the firm missed a big surge among global-macro funds. Shikuma’s hedge fund was down 12.5% in 2022, while the HFRI index was up 9%.

In part, last year’s slump was because the London firm has yet to set up, for its short-term discretionary tactical-trading book, an application trading interface, or API. The API would allow the firm to quickly seize on advantageous times to get in and out of trades.

Shikuma now expects to have an API in place within the next several weeks. It will allow the firm to grow its short-term tactical-trading book from about 3% to 5% of Shikuma’s total assets to, over time, as much as 20% of its portfolio. The strategy is heavily dependent on pricing data, including breakout, mean reversion and other pattern analyses conducted by Shikuma.

The firm launched a commingled fund in 2021 and is now trading about $22 million of partner and investor capital.

In all, about a third of the firm’s assets are in discretionary strategies, with the rest systematically traded via algorithms based on pricing or economic models. The firm plans to, over time, bring that to a 50-50 split, although that may change depending on market conditions.

Despite the plan to increase its discretionary book and the losses its systematic book cost it last year, Shikuma believes it’s on the right track with its algorithmic models.

The firm wrote in a Jan. 10 letter to investors that now is not the time to change its approach to systematic investing.

“Our Asset Allocation models are rooted in fundamental principles – i.e., the impact that inflation, momentum, and liquidity have on assets’ returns – and we believe that these are unlikely to change . . . While there is always a margin for improvement and lessons to be learned, we believe that 2022 was simply a bad year and that sticking to our Asset Allocation strategy will start paying off before too long,” Shikuma wrote. “Historical precedents suggest that when it does, it tends to do so with dividends.”

Shikuma’s correlation to other indexes, including other global-macro funds, is very low – only a 0.29 correlation to the HFRI Macro Index, for instance, and a 0.15 correlation to the S&P. The strategy also has handily beat the annualized return of the S&P 500 – which is 9.2% from August 2018 through yearend.

Shikuma was founded in 2020 by four executives, of whom two, chief investment officer Tommaso Mancuso and co-portfolio manager Marco Tosi, each spent 12 years at Hermes Investment Management. That entity is now known as Federated Hermes following Hermes Investment’s purchase of Federated Investors in 2018. The combined entity managed $669 billion at yearend.

Mancuso headed and established a multi-strategy trading unit at Hermes in 2014 and earlier headed portfolio management at Hermes BKP, a $2.5 billion fund-of-hedge funds business. He joined Hermes in 2008 and earlier worked at Pioneer Alternative. Tosi worked with Mancuso as head of risk and quant for the multi-asset division and also worked at Hermes BKP and Pioneer Alternative.

While Shikuma’s hedge fund launched in October 2021, the firm’s trading strategies began while Mancuso and Tosi were still with Hermes. They had sought to launch the strategy at that firm, but Hermes was then, and remains, focused on investment strategies that embody environmental, social and governance issues.

So, Mancuso and Tosi’s global-macro strategy couldn’t fit within Hermes’ ESG mandates. As a result, they were able to take their trading models and track record from Hermes and use it to form Shikuma. Until they launched their hedge fund, they had been running capital via separate accounts at Hermes and Shikuma.

Shikuma’s other two co-founders are Thomas Pontin and Anna McCutcheon. Pontin previously headed sales and marketing for ADG Capital and also worked at Harmonic Capital and Fulcrum Asset Management.

McCutcheon previously founded her own systematic proprietary trading firm, Nublu Investments, and earlier headed asset-raising and was a portfolio manager for both Fortelus Capital and Tisbury Capital. ■

Highland court saga tests fact vs fiction

Dallas judge's novel that features a financier is raised in court battle

MARK VANDEVELDE

Jim Dondero in 2011 © Brent Humphreys

Mark Vandevelde 7 HOURS AGO

Jim Dondero, the distressed debt investor who was once a scourge of private equity, is the kind of hard-charging financier you might read about in a novel. In fact, Dondero thinks it possible that you have read about him in a novel — one that, strikingly, was written by a federal judge who is overseeing the bankruptcy of Highland Capital Management, his once high-flying investment firm.

Highland's rise and messy fall is a story for the ages. During the go-go years, visitors to Dondero's Dallas office reported that the staff there worked under the glassy gaze of animals that he had shot dead from his porch. The firm raked in billions of dollars of capital in the years before 2008, investing some of it on consumer debt, real estate, even unwanted life insurance policies. Its core business, though, was owning the debt of companies that had been bought by private equity firms.

Dondero's enthusiasm for private equity was sometimes unrequited. Some of the biggest US buyout firms grew so tired of their shouting matches with his underlings that they tried to freeze Highland out of owning debt issued by the companies they bought. Yet the firm was difficult to avoid, and had a reputation for being quick to threaten legal action when deals went wrong. In one celebrated case, Highland reportedly delivered its demands to a recalcitrant borrower with a 10-minute ultimatum, and a warning that the firm already had a representative stationed outside a nearby bankruptcy court.

When the financial crisis struck, Dondero enjoyed a glimpse of the bonanza. His firm held some of the debt issued by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in connection with its ill-fated 2004-05 buyout by a consortium that included Texas Pacific Group. The deal soured, and Highland ended up owning a slice of the movie studio.

Distressed debt investors have only grown more influential since then, with about $272bn under management as of last year, according to a tally maintained by Preqin, more than double the amount 10 years earlier.

But Highland was not among the victors of the financial crisis. Its flagship vehicle, the Crusader fund, closed to investors in 2008 after suffering losses, triggering battles that are still echoing across American courtrooms. Perhaps it is the endless fighting, or perhaps it is just the passage of time, but Dondero looks less youthful now. According to a person who works with him, his hair has turned greyer.

After losing a legal skirmish with investors, Highland Capital Management entered bankruptcy in 2019. Initially filed in Delaware, the Highland case became a page-turner after it moved to a Dallas court, where judges are less frequently called upon to deal with complex corporate bankruptcies.

Dondero, who resigned as a director after a negotiation with creditors, grew unhappy with the proceedings. US bankruptcy judge Stacey Jernigan took exception to Dondero's conduct, too, twice ruling him in contempt of court. Jernigan imposed sanctions of nearly $240,000 on Dondero and others over one of those incidents, warning that if they appealed against her ruling and lost, she would hit them with $100,000 more.

What began as a routine business dispute has, over time, become something more poetic. Dim the courtroom lights, and you would have a real-life Texas noir.

One wonders whether that thought ever occurred to Jernigan, who is not only the bankruptcy court's chief judge but also a part-time author. Her most recent novel, Hedging Death, features a fund manager named Cade Graham. Her fictitious financier buys an eclectic range of assets, from commercial debt to life insurance policies whose original owners no longer want them — a trade that one character calls “creepy”. “His boyish brown hair had turned silver,” Jernigan writes of Graham, “and his sun-kissed smooth skin had grown weathered.”

In a ruling handed down this week, in which she denied Dondero's request that she step aside on grounds of bias, Jernigan was emphatic: her novel, she wrote, was “entirely fiction”, and “not about Mr Dondero or the hedge fund industry”. In the story, she points out, Graham fakes his own death in Mexico after linking up with drug cartels. He is a Princeton graduate. (Dondero holds a degree from the University of Virginia.)

Authorial intention is a slippery notion but it is striking that a close observer of the distressed debt industry should devise an unappealing character whom Dondero sees as “patterned after” himself. Jernigan insists that any resemblance to actual people, living or dead, “is entirely coincidental”.

ARTICLE II SHARED SERVICES

Section 2.01 Services. During the Term, Service Provider will provide Recipient with Shared Services, each as described more fully on Annex A attached hereto, the “Shared Services”)

Section 2.02 Changes to the Shared Services.

(a) During the Term, the Parties may agree to modify the terms and conditions of a Service Provider’s performance of any Shared Service in order to reflect new procedures, processes or other methods of providing such Shared Service, including modifying the applicable fees for such Shared Service to reflect the then current fair market value of such service (a “Change”). The Parties will negotiate in good faith the terms upon which a Service Provider would be willing to provide such New Shared Service to Recipient.

(b) The Party requesting a Change will deliver a description of the Change requested (a “Change Request”) and no Party receiving a Change Request may unreasonably withhold, condition or delay its consent to the proposed Change.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, a Service Provider may make: (i) Changes to the process of performing a particular Shared Service that do not adversely affect the benefits to Recipient of Service Provider’s provision or quality of such Shared Service in any material respect or increase Recipient’s cost for such Shared Service; (ii) emergency Changes on a temporary and short-term basis; and/or (iii) Changes to a particular Shared Service in order to comply with applicable law or regulatory requirements, in each case without obtaining the prior consent of Recipient. A Service Provider will notify Recipient in writing of any such Change as follows: in the case of clauses (i) and (iii) above, prior to the implementation of such Change, and, in the case of clause (ii) above, as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter.

ARTICLE III
SHARED ASSETS

Section 3.01 Shared IP Rights. Each Service Provider hereby grants to Recipient a non-exclusive right and license to use the intellectual property and other rights granted or licensed, directly or indirectly, to such Service Provider (the “Shared IP Rights”) pursuant to third party intellectual property Agreements (“Third Party IP Agreements”), provided that the rights granted to Recipient hereunder are subject to the terms and conditions of the applicable Third Party IP Agreement, and that such rights shall terminate, as applicable, upon the expiration or termination of the applicable Third Party IP Agreement. ARTICLE IV
COST ALLOCATION

Section 4.01 Actual Cost Allocation Formula. The Actual Cost of any item relating to any Shared Services or Shared Assets shall be allocated based on the Allocation Percentage. For purposes of this Agreement, “Allocation Percentage” means:

(a) To the extent 100% of such item is demonstrably attributable to the Acis, 100% of the Actual Cost of such item shall be allocated to Acis;

(b) To the extent a specific percentage of use of such item can be determined (e.g., 70% for HCMLP and 30% for Acis), that specific percentage of the Actual Cost of such item will be allocated to HCMLP or Acis, as applicable; and

(c) All other portions of the Actual Cost of any item that cannot be allocated pursuant to clause (a) or (b) above is agreed to be allocated between HCMLP and Acis in proportion to the fee earning assets managed by Acis. It is agreed in good faith between both parties that Actual Cost shall be calculated as follows: for each fund included within Annex B, Actual Cost shall be calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such funds, except that the management fee rates applied in the calculation will be replaced by the fee rates described in Annex B. For avoidance of doubt, the calculation will apply to any form of management fees, except for incentive fees earned from any fund and subordinated management fees for collateralized loan obligation (CLO) funds.

For the avoidance of doubt, Acis shall separately reimburse HCMLP for the actual costs and expenses caused by, incurred or otherwise arising from or relating to business development services that are borne by HCMLP on behalf of or for the benefit of Acis.

Section 4.02 Non-Cash Cost Allocation. The actual, fully burdened cost of any item relating to any Shared Services or Shared Assets that does not result in a direct, out of pocket cash expense may be allocated to HCMLP and Acis for financial statement purposes only, without any corresponding cash reimbursement required, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, based on the Allocation Percentage principles described in Section 4.01 hereof.

ARTICLE V
PAYMENT OF COST AND REVENUE SHARE; TAXES

Section 5.01 Quarterly Statements. Within sixty (60) days following the end of each calendar quarter during the Term (or at such time as may be otherwise agreed by the parties), each Service Provider shall furnish the other Parties hereto with a written statement with respect to the Actual Cost paid by it in respect of Shared Services and Shared Assets provided by it, in each case, during such period, setting forth (i) the cost allocation in accordance with Article IV hereof together with the Applicable Margin on such allocated amounts, and (ii) any amounts paid pursuant to Section 5.02 hereof, together with such other data and information necessary to complete the items described in Section 5.03 hereof (hereinafter referred to as the “Quarterly Report”).

Section 5.02 Settlement Payments. At any time during the Term, any Party may make payment of the amounts that are allocable to such Party together with the Applicable Margin related thereto, regardless of whether an invoice pursuant to Section 5.03 hereof has been issued with respect to such amounts.

Section 5.03 Determination and Payment of Cost and Revenue Share.

(a) Within ten (10) days of the submission of the Quarterly Report described in Section 5.02 hereof (or at such other time as may be agreed by the parties), the Parties shall (i) agree on the cost share of each of the Parties and Applicable Margin as calculated pursuant to the provisions of this Agreement; and (ii) prepare and issue invoices for the cost share and Applicable Margin payments that are payable by any of the Parties.

(b) Within ten (10) days of preparation of the agreement and the issuance of the invoice described in Section 5.03(a) (or at such other time as may be agreed by the parties), the Parties shall promptly make payment of the amounts that are set forth on such cost allocation invoice.

Section 5.04 Taxes.

(b) Recipient is responsible for and will pay all Taxes applicable to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets, provided to Recipient, provided, that such payments by Recipient to Service Provider will be made in the most tax-efficient manner and provided further, that Service Provider will not be subject to any liability for Taxes applicable to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets as a result of such payment by Recipient. Service Provider will collect such Tax from Recipient in the same manner it collects such Taxes from other customers in the ordinary course of Service Provider’s business, but in no event prior to the time it invoices Recipient for the Shared Services and Shared Assets, costs for which such Taxes are levied. Recipient may provide Service Provider with a certificate evidencing its exemption from payment of or liability for such Taxes.

(c) Service Provider will reimburse Recipient for any Taxes collected from Recipient and refunded to Service Provider. In the event a Tax is assessed against Service Provider that is solely the responsibility of Recipient and Recipient desires to protest such assessment, Recipient will submit to Service Provider a statement of the issues and arguments requesting that Service Provider grant Recipient the authority to prosecute the protest in Service Provider’s name. Service Provider’s authorization will not be unreasonably withheld. Recipient will finance, manage, control and determine the strategy for such protest while keeping Service Provider reasonably informed of the proceedings. However, the authorization will be periodically reviewed by Service Provider to determine any adverse impact on Service Provider, and Service Provider will have the right to reasonably withdraw such authority at any time. Upon notice by Service Provider that it is so withdrawing such authority, Recipient will expeditiously terminate all proceedings. Any adverse consequences suffered by Recipient as a result of the withdrawal will be submitted to arbitration pursuant to Section 9.14. Any contest for Taxes brought by Recipient may not result in any lien attaching to any property or rights of Service Provider or otherwise jeopardize Service Provider's interests or rights in any of its property. Recipient agrees to indemnify Service Provider for all Losses that Service Provider incurs as a result of any such contest by Recipient.

(d) The provisions of this Section 5.04 will govern the treatment of all Taxes arising as a result of or in connection with this Agreement notwithstanding any other Article of this Agreement to the contrary.

ARTICLE VI SERVICE PROVIDER RESPONSIBILITIES

Section 6.01 Service Provider General Obligations. In providing the Services, the Service Provider:

(a) will conform with (1) any applicable written procedures, policies and guidelines adopted by the applicable Recipient and furnished to the Service Provider, and (2) the Recipient's objectives, policies and restrictions as stated in the Recipient's Indenture, Management Agreement, Partnership Agreement, Bye-laws, and/or other governing documents, as applicable, each as supplemented or amended from time to time, as furnished to the Service Provider (such governing document, the "Applicable Restrictions"). Until the Recipient delivers any supplements or amendments to the Service Provider, the Service Provider shall be fully protected in relying on the Applicable Restrictions previously furnished by the Recipient to the Service Provider. In providing the services in accordance with the requirements of this Section, the Service Provider shall be entitled to receive and act upon advice of counsel to the Recipient, or to the Service Provider that is also acceptable to the Recipient; and

(b) will provide the Shared Assets, or the Services, as applicable, to Recipient on a non-discriminatory basis and will use commercially reasonable efforts to provide the Shared Assets, or the Services, as applicable, in the same manner as if it were providing such services and assets on its own account. Service Provider will use its commercially reasonable efforts to conduct its duties hereunder in a lawful manner in compliance with applicable laws, statutes, rules and regulations and in accordance with the service standards. The standards set forth in this Section 6.01 are referred to in this Agreement as the "Service Standards."

Section 6.02 Books and Records; Access to Information. Service Provider will keep and maintain books and records on behalf of Recipient in accordance with past practices and internal control procedures. Recipient will have the right, at any time and from time to time upon reasonable prior notice to Service Provider, to inspect and copy (at its expense) during normal business hours at the offices of Service Provider the books and records relating to the Shared Services and Shared Assets, with respect to Service Provider's performance of its obligations hereunder. This inspection right will include the ability of Recipient's financial auditors to review such books and records in the ordinary course of performing standard financial auditing services for Recipient (but subject to Service Provider imposing reasonable access restrictions to Service Provider's and its Affiliates' proprietary information and such financial auditors executing appropriate confidentiality agreements reasonably acceptable to Service Provider). Service Provider will promptly respond to any reasonable requests for information or access.

Section 6.03 Return of Property and Equipment. Upon expiration or termination of this Agreement, Service Provider will be obligated to return to Recipient, as soon as is reasonably practicable, any equipment or other property or materials of Recipient that is in Service Provider's control or possession.

ARTICLE VII
TERM AND TERMINATION

Section 7.01 Term. The term of this Agreement will commence as of the Effective Date and will continue in full force and effect until the first anniversary of the Effective Date (the “Term”), unless terminated earlier in accordance with Section 7.02. The Term shall automatically renew for successive one year periods unless sooner terminated under Section 7.02.

Section 7.02 Termination.

(a) Subject to Section 7.02(b), either Party may terminate this Agreement upon at least 30 days advance written notice at any time prior to the expiration of the Term.

(b) In the event of any proposed termination of this Agreement while services are being rendered hereunder with respect to any Recipient, the effectiveness of such termination shall be conditioned on either (i) Acis or HCMLP, as applicable, confirming, in a manner reasonably satisfactory to each such Recipient, that the termination of this Agreement would not cause an Adverse Account Event (as defined below), or (ii) the continued provision of the Shared Services and Shared Assets, and/or Investment Services, as applicable, on substantially the terms provided herein until such time as a replacement provider or providers of the Shared Services and Shared Assets, or Investment Services, can be engaged by Acis or HCMLP, as applicable, on terms that would not cause an Adverse Account Event. As used herein, “Adverse Account Event” means (i) any event that would constitute a violation of any of the Applicable Restrictions, (ii) any event that would result in a material adverse deviation from the Service Standards rendered to the Recipient immediately prior to such event, or (iii) in the case of any Recipient that is an issuer of structured finance securities under an indenture with notes rated by S&P or Moody’s, the failure to receive rating agency confirmation consistent with the terms of such indenture that the termination of this Agreement would not cause either S&P or Moody’s to effect a withdrawal, reduction, suspension or other adverse action with respect to any then current rating of any class of notes of such Recipient issued under such indenture. In the event Acis or HCMLP relies on clause (ii) above to avoid termination of this Agreement, such party agrees to use its commercially reasonable efforts to procure such replacement Shared Services and Shared Assets, or Investment Services, as applicable, as soon as reasonably practicable following the Service Provider’s notice of its desire to terminate this Agreement.

ARTICLE VIII
LIMITED WARRANTY; LIMITATION ON LIABILITY; INDEMNIFICATION

Section 8.01 Limited Warranty. Service Provider will perform the Shared Services hereunder in accordance with the Service Standards. Except as specifically provided in this Agreement, Service Provider makes no express or implied representations, warranties or guarantees relating to its performance of the Shared Services and the granting of the Shared Assets under this Agreement, including any warranty of merchantability, fitness, quality, non-infringement of third party rights, suitability or adequacy of the Shared Services and the Shared Assets for any purpose or use or purpose. Service Provider will (to the extent possible and subject to Service Provider’s contractual obligations) pass through the benefits of any express warranties received from third parties relating to any Shared Service and Shared Asset, and will (at Recipient’s expense) assist Recipient with any warranty claims related thereto.

Section 8.02 Indemnification. Subject to the limitations of liability set forth in Section 8.04, Service Provider and Recipient will indemnify and hold each other harmless against all Losses resulting from: (i) such Party’s performance or failure to perform, in any material manner, any of its obligations under this Agreement; (ii) the breach by such Party, in any material manner, of any representation, warranty, covenant or agreement contained herein; (iii) loss of or damage to tangible real or tangible personal property (including damage to their property), in any material manner, in each case to the extent that such Loss was proximately caused by any negligent or willful act or omission by the Party from whom indemnity is sought, its agents, employees or subcontractors, in connection with the provision or receipt of the Shared Services or the Shared Assets; (iv) such Party's use of the Shared Services and Shared Assets; (v) the breach by such Party of the license granted in Section 3.01; or (vi) the breach by such party of the Third Party IP Agreements.

Section 8.03 Notice and Procedures. A Party seeking indemnification pursuant to Section 8.02 (the "Indemnified Party") will give prompt written notice in reasonable detail (the "Notice of Claim") to the indemnifying Party (the "Indemnifying Party") stating the basis of any claim for which indemnification is being sought hereunder within thirty (30) days after its knowledge thereof; provided, however, that the Indemnified Party's failure to provide any such notice to the Indemnifying Party will not relieve the Indemnifying Party of or from any of its obligations hereunder, except to the extent that the Indemnifying Party suffers prejudice as a result of such failure. If the facts giving rise to such indemnification involve an actual or threatened claim by or against a third party:

(a) the Parties will cooperate in the prosecution or defense of such claim and will furnish such records, information and testimony and attend to such proceedings as may be reasonably requested in connection therewith; and

(b) the Indemnified Party will make no settlement of any claim that would give rise to liability on the part of the Indemnifying Party without the latter's prior written consent which will not be unreasonably withheld or delayed, and the Indemnifying Party will not be liable for the amount of any settlement affected without its prior written consent.

Section 8.04 Consequential Damages. Except with respect to a Party's fraud or willful misconduct, and except with respect to damages sought by a third party in connection with a third party claim, none of the Parties, or their Affiliates, will be liable to the other Parties, or their Affiliates, for any damages other than direct damages. Each Party agrees that it is not entitled to recover and agrees to waive any claim with respect to, and will not seek, consequential, punitive or any other special damages as to any matter under, relating to or arising out of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement, except with respect to such claims and damages arising directly out of a Party's fraud or willful misconduct, or with respect to damages sought by third parties in connection with third party claims.

ARTICLE IX MISCELLANEOUS

Section 9.01 No Partnership or Joint Venture; Independent Contractor. Nothing contained in this Agreement will constitute or be construed to be or create a partnership or joint venture between or among HCMLP or Acis or their respective successors or assigns. The Parties understand and agree that, with the exception of the procurement by Service Provider of licenses or other rights on behalf of Recipient pursuant to Section 3.01, this Agreement does not make any of them an agent or legal representative of the other for any purpose whatsoever. No failure on the part of any Party to exercise or delay in exercising any right hereunder will be deemed a waiver thereof, nor will any single or partial exercise preclude any further or other exercise of such or any other right.

Section 9.03 Schedules and Exhibits; Integration. Each Schedule and Exhibit delivered pursuant to the terms of this Agreement must be in writing and will constitute a part of this Agreement, although schedules need not be attached to each copy of this Agreement. This Agreement, together with such Schedules and Exhibits constitutes the entire agreement among the Parties pertaining to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and understandings of the Parties in connection therewith.

Section 9.04 Further Assurances. Each Party will take such actions as any other Party may reasonably request or as may be necessary or appropriate to consummate or implement the transactions contemplated by this Agreement or to evidence such events or matters.

Section 9.05 Governing Law. Section 9.06 Assignment. Except as otherwise provided hereunder, neither this Agreement nor any rights or obligations hereunder are assignable by one Party without the express prior written consent of the other Parties.

Section 9.07 Headings. The descriptive headings of the Articles, Sections and subsections of this Agreement are for convenience only and do not constitute a part of this Agreement.

Section 9.08 Counterparts. This Agreement and any amendment hereto or any other agreement delivered pursuant hereto may be executed in one or more counterparts and by different Parties in separate counterparts. All counterparts will constitute one and the same agreement and will become effective when one or more counterparts have been signed by each Party and delivered to the other Parties.

Section 9.09 Successors and Assigns; No Third Party Beneficiaries. This Agreement is binding upon and will inure to the benefit of each Party and its successors or assigns, and nothing in this Agreement, express or implied, is intended to confer upon any other Person or Governmental Entity any rights or remedies of any nature whatsoever under or by reason of this Agreement.

Section 9.12 Waiver. No failure on the part of any Party to exercise or delay in exercising any right hereunder will be deemed a waiver thereof, nor will any single or partial exercise preclude any further or other exercise of such or any other right.

Section 9.13 Severability. If any provision of this Agreement is held to be unenforceable for any reason, it will be adjusted rather than voided, if possible, to achieve the intent of the Parties. All other provisions of this Agreement will be deemed valid and enforceable to the extent possible.

Section 9.14 Arbitration; Jurisdiction. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Agreement or the Annexes hereto to the contrary, in the event there is an unresolved legal dispute between the parties and/or any of their respective officers, directors, partners, employees, agents, affiliates or other representatives that involves legal rights or remedies arising from this Agreement, the parties agree to submit their dispute to binding arbitration under the authority of the Federal Arbitration Act; provided, however, that either party or such applicable affiliate thereof may pursue a temporary restraining order and/or preliminary injunctive relief in connection with confidentiality covenants or agreements binding on the other party, with related expedited discovery for the parties, in a court of law, and, thereafter, require arbitration of all issues of final relief. Any discovery not specifically provided for in this paragraph, whether to parties or non-parties, shall not be permitted. The arbitrator(s) shall be required to state in a written opinion all facts and conclusions of law relied upon to support any decision rendered. No arbitrator will have authority to render a decision that contains an outcome determinative error of state or federal law, or to fashion a cause of action or remedy not otherwise provided for under applicable state or federal law. Any dispute over whether the arbitrator(s) has failed to comply with the foregoing will be resolved by summary judgment in a court of law. In all other respects, the arbitration process will be conducted in accordance with the American Arbitration Association's dispute resolution rules or other mutually agreeable, arbitration service rules. The party initiating arbitration shall pay all arbitration costs and arbitrator's fees, subject to a final arbitration award on who should bear costs and fees. All proceedings shall be conducted in Dallas, Texas, or another mutually agreeable site. Each party shall bear its own attorneys fees, costs and expenses, including any costs of experts, witnesses and/or travel, subject to a final arbitration award on who should bear costs and fees. The duty to arbitrate described above shall survive the termination of this Agreement. Except as otherwise provided above, the parties hereby waive trial in a court of law or by jury. IN WITNESS WHEREOF, each of the Parties has caused this Agreement to be executed by its duly authorized officers as of the day and year first above written.

SUB-ADVISORY AGREEMENT

R E C I T A L S

WHEREAS, the Parties entered into that certain Second Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement dated July 29, 2016 to be effective January 1, 2016 (the “Existing Agreement”);

WHEREAS, the Management Company from time to time has entered and will enter into portfolio management agreements, investment management agreements and/or similar agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a “Management Agreement”) and related indentures, credit agreements, collateral administration agreements, service agreements or other agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a “Related Agreement”), in each case as set forth on Appendix A hereto, as amended from time to time, pursuant to which the Management Company has agreed to provide portfolio and/or investment management services to certain funds and accounts and to certain collateralized loan obligation issuers and to borrowers in certain short-term or long-term warehouse or repurchase facilities in connection therewith (any such transaction, a “Transaction”, any fund, account, issuer, warehouse borrower or repurchase agreement seller in respect of any such Transaction, an “Account”, and the assets collateralizing each such Transaction and/or comprising the portfolio of such Account, a “Portfolio”);

WHEREAS, the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor desire to enter into this Agreement in order to permit the Sub-Advisor to provide certain limited services to assist the Management Company in performing certain obligations under the Management Agreements and Related Agreements;

WHEREAS, the Parties now desire to amend and restate the Existing Agreement.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals, and the receipt of good and valuable consideration, the receipt and sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties, intending to be legally bound, hereby agree that the Existing Agreement is hereby amended, restated and replaced in its entirety as follows.

1. Appointment; Limited Scope of Services.

(a) Highland is hereby appointed as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company for the purpose of assisting the Management Company in managing the Portfolios of each Account

pursuant to the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, in each case that have been included in the scope of this Agreement pursuant to the provisions of Section 8, subject to the terms set forth herein and subject to the supervision of the Management Company, and Highland hereby accepts such appointment.

(b) Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor shall, during the term and subject to the provisions of this Agreement:

(i) make recommendations to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio with respect to such Account among various types of securities, the nature and timing of the changes therein and the manner of implementing such changes, including recommendations as to the specific loans and other assets to be purchased, retained or sold by any such Account;

(ii) place orders with respect to, and arrange for, any investment by or on behalf of such Account (including executing and delivering all documents relating to such Account's investments on behalf of such Account or the Management Company, as applicable), upon receiving a proper instruction from the Management Company;

(iii) identify, evaluate, recommend to the Management Company, in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account, and, if applicable, negotiate the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of the Management Company for such Account;

(iv) assist the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account in performing due diligence on prospective Portfolio investments by such Account;

(v) provide information to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments and, if requested by the Management Company, provide information to assist in monitoring and servicing other investments by such Account

(vi) assist and advise the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis; and

(vii) assist the Management Company in performing any of its other obligations or duties as portfolio manager for such Account.

The foregoing responsibilities and obligations are collectively referred to herein as the "Services."

Notwithstanding the foregoing, all investment decisions will ultimately be the responsibility of, and will be made by and at the sole discretion of, the Management Company. Furthermore, the parties acknowledge and agree that the Sub-Advisor shall be required to provide only the services expressly described in this Section 1(b), and shall have no responsibility hereunder to provide any other services to the Management Company or any Transaction, including, but not limited to, administrative, management or similar services.

(c) The Sub-Advisor agrees during the term hereof to furnish the Services on the terms and conditions set forth herein and subject to the limitations contained herein. The Sub-Advisor agrees that, in performing the Services, it will comply with all applicable obligations of the Management Company set forth in the Management Agreements and the Related Agreements. In addition, with respect to any obligation that would be part of the Services but for the fact that the relevant Management Agreement or Related Agreement does not permit such obligation to be delegated by the Management Company to the Sub-Advisor, the Sub-Advisor, upon request in writing by the Management Company, shall work in good faith with the Management Company and shall use commercially reasonable efforts to assist the Management Company in satisfying all such obligations.

2. Compensation.

(a) As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement in respect of any Transaction, the Sub-Advisor will be entitled to receive the Sub-Advisory Fee payable thereto. The “Sub-Advisory Fee” shall be payable in accordance with Appendix A attached hereto, as such appendix may be amended by the Parties from time to time.

(b) Each party shall bear its own expenses; provided that the Management Company shall reimburse the Sub-Advisor for any and all costs and expenses that are properly Company Expenses or that may be borne by the Management Company under the Management Company LLC Agreement.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, if on any date the Management Company determines that it would not have sufficient funds available to it to make a payment of Indebtedness, it shall have the right to defer any and all amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement, including any fees and expenses; provided that the Management Company shall promptly pay all such amounts on the first date thereafter that sufficient amounts exist to make payment thereof.

(d) From time to time, the Management Company may enter into sub-advisory agreements with certain management companies on similar terms to this Agreement. Promptly following the receipt of any fees pursuant to such sub-advisory agreements, the Management Company shall pay 100% of such fees to the Sub-Advisor.

3. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each of the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor represents and warrants, as to itself only, that:

(i) it has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(ii) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(iii) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any government, governmental instrumentality or court or other person or entity is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(iv) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (A) its constituting and organizational documents; (B) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound; (C) any statute applicable to it; or (D) any law, decree, order, rule or regulation applicable to it of any court or regulatory, administrative or governmental agency, body of authority or arbitration having or asserting jurisdiction over it or its properties, which, in the case of clauses (B) through (D) above, would have a material adverse effect upon the performance of its duties hereunder.

(b) The Sub-Advisor represents and warrants to the Management Company that it is a registered investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended (the "Advisers Act").

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that it has received Part 2 of Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Form ADV filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Sub-Advisor will provide to the Management Company an updated copy of Part 2 of its Form ADV promptly upon any amendment to such Form ADV being filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

4. Standard of Care; Liability; Indemnification.

(a) Sub-Advisor Standard of Care. Subject to the terms and provisions of this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements, as applicable, the Sub-Advisor will perform its obligations hereunder and under the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements in good faith with reasonable care using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Sub-Advisor uses with respect to comparable assets that it manages for others and, without limiting the foregoing, in a manner which the Sub-Advisor reasonably believes to be consistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing relating to assets of the nature and character of the Portfolios, in each case except as expressly provided otherwise under this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the

Related Agreements. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor will follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder, under the Management Agreements and/or under the Related Agreements.

(b) Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, none of the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates, and any of their respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents (but shall not include the Management Company, its subsidiaries or member(s) and any managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents of the Management Company or its subsidiaries or member(s) (in their capacity as such)) (each a “Covered Person”) will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, any shareholder, partner or member thereof, any Account (or any other adviser, agent or representative thereof), or to any holder of notes, securities or other indebtedness issued by any Account (collectively, the “Management Company Related Parties”), for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the provision of the Services hereunder, for any losses that may be sustained in the purchase, holding or sale of any security or debt obligation by any Account, or as a result of any activities of the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company or any other adviser to or agent of the Account or any other sub-advisor appointed by the Management Company to provide portfolio management services to any other delegatee of the Management Company or any other person or entity, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a “Disabling Conduct”) on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of the Sub-Advisor, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of the Sub-Advisor with reasonable care, or (iii) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to any Management Company Related Party, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to such Management Company Related Party for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to any Management Company Related Party solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to any such Management Company Related Party, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to any Management Company Related Party in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care

(c) Indemnification. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated (“Claims”), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the Services, the activities of the Management Company Related Parties, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company Related Parties, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, any Management Agreement and/or the Related Documents, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys’ fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a “Proceeding”), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as “Damages”), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys’ fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person’s successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 4(c) shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 4(c) to the fullest extent permitted by law

(d) Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 4(c) are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the Transactions has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained

(e) Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 4(c) shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person

(f) Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to any Management Company Related Party in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

(g) Rights Under Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Management Company will ensure that the Sub-Advisor is provided substantially similar indemnification and exculpation rights as are afforded to the Management Company in its role as portfolio manager under any future Management Agreement or Related Agreement encompassed within the Services hereunder, and it is expressly acknowledged by the Parties that the Sub-Advisor may not consent to including a Management Agreement and the related Transaction and Related Agreements within the scope of this Agreement pursuant to Section 8 if such indemnification and exculpation rights are not reasonably acceptable to it.

5. Limitations on Employment of the Sub-Advisor; Conflicts of Interest.

(a) The services of the Sub-Advisor to the Management Company are not exclusive, and the Sub-Advisor may engage in any other business or render similar or different services to others including, without limitation, the direct or indirect sponsorship or management of other Transactions, investment-based accounts or commingled pools of capital, however structured, having investment objectives similar to those of the Management Company or the Accounts. Moreover, nothing in this Agreement shall limit or restrict the right of any manager, partner, officer or employee of the Sub-Advisor to engage in any other business or to devote his or her time and attention in part to any other business, whether of a similar or dissimilar nature to the Management Company or any Account, or to receive any fees or compensation in connection therewith.

(b) So long as this Agreement or any extension, renewal or amendment of this Agreement remains in effect, the Sub-Advisor shall be the only portfolio management sub-advisor for the Management Company. The Sub-Advisor assumes no responsibility under this Agreement other than to render the services called for hereunder. It is understood that directors, officers, employees, members and managers of the Management Company are or may become interested in the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates as directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members, managers or otherwise, and that the Sub-Advisor and directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members and managers of the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates are or may become similarly interested in the Management Company as members or otherwise.

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that various potential and actual conflicts of interest may exist with respect to the Sub-Advisor as described in the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV Part 2A and as described in Appendix B hereto, and the Management Company expressly acknowledges and agrees to the provisions contained in such Appendix B, as amended from time to time with mutual consent of the Parties.

6. Termination; Survival.

(a) This Agreement may be terminated, in its entirety or with respect to any Management Agreement, at any time without payment of penalty, by the Management Company upon 30 days' prior written notice to the Sub-Advisor.

(b) This Agreement shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated (and, if required thereunder, a successor portfolio manager has been appointed and accepted) or discharged; or (ii) the Management Company is no longer acting as portfolio manager, investment manager or in a similar capacity (whether due to removal, resignation or assignment) under such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements. Upon the termination of this Agreement with respect to any Management Agreement the Management Company shall provide prompt notice thereof to the Sub-Advisor, and Appendix A hereto shall be deemed to be amended by deleting such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements related thereto.

(c) All accrued and unpaid financial and indemnification obligations with respect to any conduct or events occurring prior to the effective date of the termination of this Agreement shall survive the termination of this Agreement.

7. Cooperation with Management Company. The Sub-Advisor shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Sub-Advisor. Specifically, the Sub-Advisor agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Sub-Advisor's obligations under this Agreement.

8. Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Sub-Advisor's duty to provide Services in connection with any Management Agreement shall not commence until (a) Appendix A to this Agreement has been amended by mutual agreement of the Parties to include such Management Agreement and the related Account, fund and/or account and Related Agreements and (b) the Sub-Advisor acknowledges receipt of such Management Agreement and each Related Agreement. The Sub-Advisor shall not be bound to comply with any amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or any Related Agreement until it has received a copy thereof from the Management Company. No amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or Related Agreement that, when applied to the obligations and rights of the Management Company under such Management Agreement or Related Agreement, affects (i) the obligations or rights of the Sub-Advisor hereunder; (ii) the amount of priority of any fees or other amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor hereunder; or (iii) any definitions relating to the matters covered in clause (i) or (ii) above, will apply to the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement unless in each such case the Sub-Advisor has consented thereto in writing (such consent not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its reasonable judgment that such amendment, modification, supplement or waiver could have a material adverse effect on the Sub-Advisor).

9. Amendments; Assignments.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 9, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 9, the Sub-Advisor may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(c) The Sub-Advisor may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 9(a) other than clause (ii) thereof (so long as such assignment does not constitute an assignment within the meaning of Section 202(a)(1) of the Advisers Act), (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an affiliate; provided that such affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Sub-Advisor in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided, further, that the Sub-Advisor shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Sub-Advisor will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

10. Advisory Restrictions. This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any Management Agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that (i) the Services are limited in scope; and (ii) this Agreement complies in all respects with all applicable (A) contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each Management Agreement and each Related Agreement and (B) laws, rules and regulations (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the Services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically without action by any person or entity be limited, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

11. Records; Confidentiality.

(a) The Sub-Advisor shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided, that the Sub-Advisor shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

(b) The Sub-Advisor shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Sub-Advisor hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued in connection with a Transaction or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolios, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager, (iv) as required by (A) applicable law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Sub-Advisor on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Sub-Advisor may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any Transaction, or (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolios as may be used by the Sub-Advisor in the ordinary course of its business. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Sub-Advisor may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company and each Account, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolios, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolios, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolios and the Transactions as is customarily disclosed by Sub-Advisors to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company, the Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

12. Notice. Any notice or demand to any party to this Agreement to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail, facsimile or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows (or to such other address, email address or facsimile number as shall have been notified to the other parties hereto):

(a) If to the Management Company:

Acis Capital Management, L.P.
300 Crescent Court
Suite 700
Dallas, TX 75201

(b) If to the Sub-Advisor:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.
300 Crescent Court
Suite 700
Dallas, TX 75201

13. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

14. WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY WITH RESPECT TO ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

15. Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the parties hereto shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the parties.

16. No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any party hereunder may be waived only upon the written consent of the parties hereto. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other party under this Agreement. Any failure by any party to this Agreement to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

17. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

18. Third Party Beneficiaries. Nothing in this Agreement will be construed to give any person or entity other than the parties to this Agreement, the Accounts and any person or entity with indemnification rights hereunder any legal or equitable right, remedy, or claim under or with respect to this Agreement or any provision of this Agreement. Except as provided in the foregoing sentence, this Agreement and all of its provisions and conditions are for the sole and exclusive benefit of the parties to this Agreement and their successors and assigns.

19. No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the parties, no party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other party.

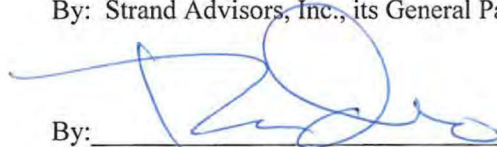

20. Entire Agreement. This Agreement, together with each Management Agreement and Related Agreement, constitutes the entire agreement of the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the parties with respect to such subject matter.

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Sub-Advisor a Sub-Advisory Fee for the Services for the Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

APPENDIX B

Purchase and Sale Transactions; Brokerage

The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates may acquire or sell obligations or securities, for its own account or for the accounts of its customers, without either requiring or precluding the acquisition or sale of such obligations or securities for the account of any Account. Such investments may be the same or different from those made by or on behalf of the Management Company or the Accounts.

Additional Activities of the Sub-Advisor

Nothing herein shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its clients, its partners, its members, funds or other investment accounts managed by it or any of its affiliates, or their employees and their affiliates (collectively, the “Related Entities”), from engaging in other businesses, or from rendering services of any kind to the Management Company, its affiliates, any Account or any other Person or entity regardless of whether such business is in competition with the Management Company, its affiliates, such Account or otherwise. Without limiting the generality of the Sub-Advisor and its Related Entities may:

- (a) serve as managers or directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories for the Management Company or any affiliate thereof, or for any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof, to the extent permitted by their respective organizational documents and underlying instruments, as from time to time amended, or by any resolutions duly adopted by the Management Company, any Account, their respective affiliates or any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets (or any affiliate thereof) pursuant to their respective organizational documents;
- (b) receive fees for services of whatever nature rendered to the obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof;
- (c) be retained to provide services unrelated to this Agreement to the Management Company, any Account or their respective affiliates and be paid therefor, on an arm’s-length basis;
- (d) be a secured or unsecured creditor of, or hold a debt obligation of or equity interest in, the Management Company, any Account or any affiliate thereof or any obligor or issuer of any Portfolio Asset or any affiliate thereof;
- (e) sell any Portfolio Asset to, or purchase or acquire any Portfolio Asset from, any Account while acting in the capacity of principal or agent; provided, however, that any such sale or purchase effected by the Sub-Advisor shall be subject to applicable law and any applicable provisions of this Agreement, the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, as applicable;
- (f) underwrite, arrange, structure, originate, syndicate, act as a distributor of or make a market in any Portfolio Asset;

(g) serve as a member of any “creditors’ board”, “creditors’ committee” or similar creditor group with respect to any Portfolio Asset; or

(h) act as portfolio manager, portfolio manager, investment manager and/or investment adviser or sub-advisor in collateralized bond obligation vehicles, collateralized loan obligation vehicles and other similar warehousing, financing or other investment vehicles.

As a result, such individuals may possess information relating to obligors and issuers of Portfolio Assets that is (a) not known to or (b) known but restricted as to its use by the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for monitoring the Portfolio Assets and performing the Services under this Agreement. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in securities laws restrictions on transactions in such securities by the Management Company and/or any Account and otherwise create conflicts of interest for the Management Company and/or any Account. The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that, in all such instances, the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may in their discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made by the Management Company with respect to the investments of any Account and they have no duty, in making or managing such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that there are generally no ethical screens or information barriers between the Sub-Advisor and certain of its affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate Persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess applicable material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. The officers or affiliates of the Sub-Advisor may possess information relating to obligors or issuers of Portfolio Assets that is not known to the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for providing the Services under this Agreement. As a result, the Sub-Advisor may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of the Sub-Advisor to effect a transaction for the Management Company and/or any Account, and the Management Company and/or such Account’s investments may be constrained as a consequence of the Sub-Advisor’s inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its clients, including the Management Company and/or such Account.

Unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its sole discretion that such Transaction complies with the conflicts of interest provisions set forth in the applicable Management Agreement and Related Agreements, the Sub-Advisor will not direct any Account to acquire or sell loans or securities entered into or issued by (i) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates or any of its officers, directors or employees are directors or officers, (ii) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor or any of its respective affiliates act as principal or (iii) Persons about which the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates have material non-public information which the Sub-Advisor deems would prohibit it from advising as to the trading of such securities in accordance with applicable law.

It is understood that the Sub-Advisor and any of its affiliates may engage in any other business and furnish investment management and advisory services to others, including Persons which may have investment policies similar to those followed by the Management Company with respect to the Portfolio Assets and which may own securities or obligations of the same class, or which are of the same type, as the Portfolio Assets or other securities or obligations of the obligors or issuers of the Portfolio Assets. The Sub-Advisor and its affiliates will be free, in their sole discretion, to make recommendations to others, or effect transactions on behalf of themselves or for others, which may be the same as or different from those effected with respect to the Collateral. Nothing in this Agreement, in the Management Agreements or in the Related Agreements shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, acting either as principal or agent on behalf of others, from buying or selling, or from recommending to or directing any other account to buy or sell, at any time, securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same obligor or issuer, as those directed by the Sub-Advisor to be purchased or sold on behalf of an Account. It is understood that, to the extent permitted by applicable law, the Sub-Advisor, its Related Entities, or any of their owners, directors, managers, officers, stockholders, members, partners, partnership committee members, employees, agents or affiliates or the other Covered Persons or any member of their families or a Person or entity advised by the Sub-Advisor may have an interest in a particular transaction or in securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same issuer, as those that may be owned or acquired by an Account. The Management Company agrees that, in the course of providing the Services, the Sub-Advisor may consider its relationships with other clients (including obligors and issuers) and its affiliates.

The Management Company agrees that neither the Sub-Advisor nor any of its affiliates is under any obligation to offer any investment opportunity of which they become aware to the Management Company or any Account or to account to the Management Company or any Account for (or share with the Management Company or any Account or inform the Management Company or any Account of) any such transaction or any benefit received by them from any such transaction. The Management Company understands that the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may have, for their own accounts or for the accounts of others, portfolios with substantially the same portfolio criteria as are applicable to the Accounts. Furthermore, the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may make an investment on behalf of any client or on their own behalf without offering the investment opportunity or making any investment on behalf of the Management Company or any Account and, accordingly, investment opportunities may not be allocated among all such clients. The Management Company acknowledges that affirmative obligations may arise in the future, whereby the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates are obligated to offer certain investments to clients before or without the Sub-Advisor offering those investments to the Management Company or any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may make and/or hold investments in an obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities that may be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an investment in such obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities made and/or held by the Management Company or any Account, or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates serve on boards of directors, or otherwise have ongoing relationships or otherwise have interests different from or adverse to those of the Management Company and the Accounts.

Defined Terms

For purposes of this Appendix B, the following defined terms shall have the meanings set forth below:

“Portfolio” shall mean, with respect to any Account and/or Transaction, the assets held by or in the name of the Account or any subsidiary of the Account in respect of such Transaction, whether or not for the benefit of the related secured parties, securing the obligations of such Account.

“Portfolio Asset” shall mean any loan, eligible investment or other asset contained in the Portfolio.

“Transaction” shall mean any action taken by the Sub-Advisor on behalf of any Account with respect to the Portfolio, including, without limitation, (i) selecting the Portfolio Assets to be acquired by the Account, (ii) investing and reinvesting the Portfolio, (iii) amending, waiving and/or taking any other action commensurate with managing the Portfolio and (iv) instructing the Account with respect to any acquisition, disposition or tender of a Portfolio Asset or other assets received in respect thereof in the open market or otherwise by the Account.

(b) This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any portfolio management agreement or any part thereof. If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically be limited without action by any person or entity, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

Section 5.02 Records; Confidentiality.

The Staff and Services Provider shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided that the Staff and Services Provider shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

ARTICLE VI

EXCULPATION AND INDEMNIFICATION

Section 6.01 Standard of Care. Except as otherwise expressly provided herein, each Covered Person shall discharge its duties under this Agreement with the care, skill, prudence and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, each Covered Person shall follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder. No Covered Person shall deal with the income or assets of the Management Company in such Covered Person's own interest or for its own account. Each Covered Person in its respective sole and absolute discretion may separately engage or invest in any other business ventures, including those that may be in competition with the Management Company, and the Management Company will not have any rights in or to such ventures or the income or profits derived therefrom

Section 6.02 Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, or any shareholder, partner or member thereof, for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the conduct of the business of the Management Company or its General Partner, or any investment made or held by the Management Company or its General Partner, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a "Disabling Conduct") on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any act or omission of any Investor, (iii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of such Covered Person, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of such Covered Person with reasonable care, or (iv) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to the Management Company or any Member, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to the Management Company or to any such Member for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to the Management Company or any Member solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to the Management Company or the Members, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to the Management Company or any Member in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care.

Section 6.03 Indemnification by the Management Company. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated ("Claims"), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company or its General Partner, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company or its General Partner, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a "Proceeding"), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as "Damages"), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys' fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 6.03 shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 6.03 to the fullest extent permitted by law.

Section 6.04 Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 6.03 are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the CLOs or Accounts has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained.

Section 6.05 Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 6.03 shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person.

Section 6.06 Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to the Management Company or any Member in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

ARTICLE VIII

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 8.01 Amendments. This Agreement may not be amended or modified except by an instrument in writing signed by each Party.

Section 8.02 Assignment and Delegation.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 8.02, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with Applicable Law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 8.02, the Staff and Services Provider may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with Applicable Law.

(c) The Staff and Services Provider may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 8.02(a) other than clause (ii) thereof, (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an Affiliate; provided that such Affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Staff and Services Provider in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided further that the Staff and Services Provider shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Staff and Services Provider will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

Section 8.03 Non-Recourse; Non-Petition.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider agrees that the payment of all amounts to which it is entitled pursuant to this Agreement shall be payable by the Management Company only to the extent of assets held in the Portfolio.

(b) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, the liability of the Management Company to the Staff and Services Provider hereunder is limited in recourse to the Portfolio, and if the proceeds of the Portfolio following the liquidation thereof are insufficient to meet the obligations of the Management Company hereunder in full, the Management Company shall have no further liability in respect of any such outstanding obligations, and such obligations and all claims of the Staff and Services Provider or any other Person against the Management Company hereunder shall thereupon extinguish and not thereafter revive. The Staff and Services Provider accepts that the obligations of the Management Company hereunder are the corporate obligations of the Management Company and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Management Company and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Management Company hereunder.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, any Staff and Services Provider agrees not to institute against, or join any other Person in instituting against, the Management Company any bankruptcy, reorganization, arrangement, insolvency, moratorium or liquidation proceedings, or other proceedings under United States federal or state bankruptcy laws, or similar laws until at least one year and one day (or, if longer, the then applicable preference period plus one day) after the payment in full all amounts payable in respect of any Indebtedness incurred to finance any portion of the Portfolio; provided that nothing in this provision shall preclude, or be deemed to stop, the Staff and Services Provider from taking any action prior to the expiration of the aforementioned one year and one day period (or, if longer, the applicable preference period then in effect plus one day) in (i) any case or proceeding voluntarily filed or commenced by the Management Company, or (ii) any involuntary insolvency proceeding filed or commenced against the Management Company by a Person other than the Staff and Services Provider.

(d) The Management Company hereby acknowledges and agrees that the Staff and Services Provider's obligations hereunder shall be solely the corporate obligations of the Staff and Services Provider, and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Staff and Services Provider and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider hereunder.

(e) The provisions of this Section 8.03 shall survive termination of this Agreement for any reason whatsoever.

Section 8.04 Governing Law.

(a) This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The Parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

(b) The Parties irrevocably agree for the benefit of each other that the courts of the State of Texas and the United States District Court located in the Northern District of Texas in Dallas are to have exclusive jurisdiction to settle any disputes (whether contractual or non-contractual) which may arise out of or in connection with this Agreement and that accordingly any action arising out of or in connection therewith (together referred to as "Proceedings") may be brought in such courts. The Parties irrevocably submit to the jurisdiction of such courts and waive any objection which they may have now or hereafter to the laying of the venue of any Proceedings in any such court and any claim that any Proceedings have been brought in an inconvenient forum and further irrevocably agree that a judgment in any Proceedings brought in such courts shall be conclusive and binding upon the Parties and may be enforced in the courts of any other jurisdiction.

Section 8.05 WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY IN RESPECT OF ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

Section 8.06 Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the Parties shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the Parties.

Section 8.07 No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any Party may be waived only upon the written consent of the Parties. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other Party. Any failure by any Party to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

Section 8.08 Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written or electronic form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any Party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the Parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

Section 8.09 Third Party Beneficiaries. This Agreement is for the sole benefit of the Parties hereto and their permitted assigns and nothing herein express or implied shall give or be construed to give to any Person, other than the Parties hereto and such permitted assigns, any legal or equitable rights hereunder. For avoidance of doubt, this Agreement is not for the benefit or and is not enforceable by any Shared Employee, CLO or Account or any investor (directly or indirectly) in the Management Company.

Section 8.10 No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the Parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the Parties, no Party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other Party.

Section 8.11 Independent Contractor. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the Staff and Services Provider shall be deemed to be an independent contractor and, except as expressly provided or authorized herein, shall have no authority to act for or represent the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity in any manner or otherwise be deemed an agent of the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity.

Section 8.12 Written Disclosure Statement. The Management Company acknowledges receipt of Part 2 of the Staff and Services Provider's Form ADV, as required by Rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act, on or before the date of execution of this Agreement.

Section 8.13 Headings. The descriptive headings contained in this Agreement are for convenience of reference only and shall not affect in any way the meaning or interpretation of this Agreement.

Section 8.14 Entire Agreement. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the Parties with respect to such subject matter.

Section 8.15 Notices. Any notice or demand to any Party to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows:

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Staff and Services Provider a Staff and Services Fee for the services for the CLOs or Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such CLOs or Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such CLOs or Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

AFFIDAVIT OF SCOTT S. HERSHMAN IN SUPPORT OF HIGHLAND'S REQUEST FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES

STATE OF TEXAS §
COUNTY OF DALLAS §

BEFORE ME, the undersigned authority, personally appeared Scott S. Hershman, who is personally known to me, and upon his oath deposed and said as follows:

1. I am a partner with Lackey Hershman, L.L.P., counsel to Respondents in this case. I am over eighteen (18) years of age and fully capable of making this affidavit. The facts stated herein are true and correct and are based upon my personal knowledge.

2. I have been an attorney for nearly thirty years and have been licensed in both Illinois and Texas state courts. I have litigated disputes in the state and federal courts and arbitration tribunals in Texas, Illinois, New York, California, Hawaii, Nevada, Arizona, Tennessee, Michigan, Florida, North Carolina, Georgia, New Mexico, Colorado, Delaware, and Mississippi. I have also litigated disputes in Mexico, Canada, the Far East, and Europe. At the appellate level I have practiced in the state and federal courts in Texas, Illinois, California, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, New York, and Louisiana. I have also litigated in the state Supreme Courts of Texas, Illinois, California, Arizona, Delaware, and Nevada. The vast majority of my practice has been in complex commercial litigation, much of which is substantively and procedurally similar to the case at bar.

3. I have been designated as an expert on the reasonableness of attorneys' fees, professional responsibility, and professional malpractice too many times to count. I am familiar with the current legal and factual standards in determining the reasonableness of attorneys' fees as well as the current practices, rates, and costs associated with litigation in cases such as the one at bar.

4. I reviewed the substantive pleadings; a portion of correspondence between the lawyers; the court's and tribunal's rulings; portions of certain depositions and discovery; all of Respondents' redacted monthly billing statements;<sup>1</sup> and all of Claimant Joshua Terry's ("Terry") billing statements that were made available to Respondents (June 2016 – April 2017). I also spoke with Jamie Welton.

5. Highland's claim for attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses arise from the Employment Agreement and Terry's theft of company property in breach of that agreement and duties to his employer (Highland), both of which are governed by Texas law. See Highland's Statement of Claim (May 24, 2017); (Employment Agreement § 7.6 (stipulating to the application of Texas law to all disputes "relating to the interpretation and enforcement of the provisions of this Agreement") (Resp. Tr. Ex. 1).

6. Terry purports that his claim for attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses is made "[p]ursuant to Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code section 38.001 and the LPA." See

Claimant's First Amended Statement of Claim (Jan. 11, 2017). The only claim based on Texas law asserted by Terry is his claim for wrongful termination under Sabine Pilot, which does not allow for the recovery of attorneys' fees. See Ed Rachal Found. V. D'Unger, 117 S.W.3d 348, 357-58 (Tex. App.—Corpus Christi 2003), rev'd in part on other grounds, 207 S.W.3d 330 (Tex. 2006); Garcia v. Sunbelt Rentals, Inc., 310 F.3d 403, 404-05 (5th Cir. 2003). All of Terry's other claims arise out of or related to the LPA, which is governed by Delaware law. See LPA § 6.11 (Resp. Tr. Ex. 77).

7. Both Texas and Delaware adhere to the American Rule, which prohibits the award of attorneys' fees unless they are expressly authorized by a statutory or contractual fee-shifting provision. See LG Ins. Mgmt. Serv. L.P. v. Leick, 378 S.W.3d 632, 640 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2012) (“Texas follows the ‘American Rule’ for the award of attorneys’ fees, which prohibits the awarding of attorneys’ fees unless they are permitted by statute or contract.”); In re Boomerang Tube, Inc. et al., 548 B.R. 69, 71-75 (Bankr. D. Del. 2016) (holding that any departures from the American Rule must be “specific and explicit” and “must authorize the award of a reasonable attorney’s fee, fees, or litigation costs and usually refer to a prevailing party in the context of an adversarial action”) (citations omitted); TranSched Sys. Ltd. v. Versyss Transit Sols., LLC, 2012 WL 1415466, *2 (Del. Super. Ct. Mar. 2012) (Requiring “clear and unequivocal articulation of intent” to deviate from the American Rule, and holding that parties “should not expect the court to deviate from the American Rule if care has not been taking in drafting a contract’s language.”).

8. Highland is entitled to recover its attorneys' fees and costs on at least one of three separate grounds: (i) Section 5.4 of the Employment Agreement, which explicitly provides that Highland “shall be entitled” “to recover the Company’s attorneys’ fees, costs, and expenses related to the breach” by Terry; (ii) TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 38.001, which provides for the recovery of attorneys’ fees in breach of contract cases; and (iii) TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE §§ 134.005(b) and/or 134A005(3), which provide for the recovery of attorneys’ fees in cases involving theft of company property or misappropriation of trade secrets.

9. It is my opinion that none of the parties, including Terry, are entitled to recover attorneys’ fees under the LPA because there is no “specific and explicit” statutory or “clear and unequivocal” contractual departure from the American Rule. First, there is no applicable statutory basis under Delaware law for attorneys’ fees, nor was one pled, and the LPA expressly superseded and waived ability to recover under Chapter 38 of the Texas Civil Practices & Remedies Code. See Claimant’s First Amended Statement of Claim (Jan. 24, 2017) (failing to assert any claim for attorneys’ fees under Delaware law); LPA §6.12(b)(iv) (stipulating to the American Rule and providing it is “intended to supersede any rights under Texas Civil Practices and Remedies Code § 38.001(8), which rights the parties expressly waive.”) (Resp. Tr. Ex. 77). Second, there is no specific or explicit contractual fee-shifting provision in the LPA, which, to the contrary, expressly incorporated the American Rule. See LPA § 6.12(b)(iv) (stipulating to the American Rule) (Resp. Tr. Ex. 77). Notably, the waiver of attorneys’ fees under Chapter 38 of the Texas Civil Practices and Remedies Code does not apply to Highland’s claims because such a waiver cannot be applied to a non-party to the LPA. See In re Boomerang Tube, Inc. et al., 548 B.R. 69, 71-75 (Bankr. D. Del. 2016) (holding that contractual waiver of attorneys’ fees is not binding on persons or entities that are not a party to the subject contract). And, in any event, there is an applicable fee-shifting provision in the Employment Agreement, which entitles Highland to recover its attorneys’ fees, costs, and expenses related to Terry’s breach of that agreement. See Employment Agreement § 5.4 (Resp. Tr. Ex. 1).

10. It is my conclusion that Highland's reasonable and necessary attorneys' fees that it should recover are $1,605,844.45. It is my conclusion that Highland's reasonable and necessary costs that they should recover are $787,454.36.<sup>2</sup> I base that on the following.

11. Texas and Delaware courts suggest considering the following when determining the reasonableness of attorneys' fees: the time and labor required; novelty and difficulty of questions involved; the skill required to perform the legal services properly; the likelihood the employment precludes other employment; customary fees; the amount involved and the results obtained; time limitations; the nature and length of the professional relationship; and the experience, reputation and ability of the lawyers. Each of those factors, when applied to this case, confirm my conclusion.

12. This dispute obviously required substantial time and labor. Both sides employed numerous lawyers and several experts. There were initially two forums, and once the arbitration is concluded, there is a substantial likelihood that the state court will also become involved once again. Counting both forums, the parties filed or had to respond to dozens of motions, briefs, responsive papers, and other pleadings. There were multiple hearings, both in the state court and in the arbitration. Each of those had to be prepared for and attended. There were 11 depositions, and substantial written discovery. The case took a total of 13 months to try, culminating in an eight-day arbitration proceeding. In addition to that final proceeding, there were several preliminary hearings, including emergency and injunctive hearings in the state court and discovery and dispositive hearings in the arbitration.

13. This case presented numerous issues of law and fact, many of which were complex given the underlying business and transactions at issue. These included, among other things, the issue of what claims should be arbitrated, given the conflicting provisions in the subject employment agreement and the LPA, and the existence of parties who were not party to those agreements. This case also involved theft of company information and misappropriation of trade secrets; the rights to company information; and injunctive and emergency relief issues. The case also involved the analysis of and litigation over multiple commercial agreements, which were complicated by the nature of the underlying business and structured financial products.

14. A great deal was at stake. This case involved Terry's allegation that Respondents owed him more than $200 million dollars.<sup>3</sup> Respondents were seeking to protect highly confidential and privileged information, the disclosure of which could damage Respondents and/or their investors.

15. Because of the workload and expedited timing of the proceedings, including the parties' success in litigating this case in just over a year (rather than the 2 or 3 years that would be customary), employment in this case precluded other employment by the Respondents' attorneys to a substantial degree.

16. Respondents' law firms have a long and deep professional relationship with Respondents. Lackey Hershman has represented Highland Capital Management, L.P. and its affiliates for sixteen years. This provided Respondents with extra value and inherent efficiencies of having lawyers that were familiar with their people and workings. This relationship is invaluable in a case such as this and often saves a significant amount of fees.

17. Respondents' lawyers have significant experience in this type of case and are extremely well thought of in the industry. I have personally observed Jamie Welton and Marc Katz in court and believe they are two of the most extraordinary lawyers I have ever seen.

<sup>3</sup> Should the Panel consider awarding Terry his attorneys' fees, which, as detailed in this Affidavit, I do not believe he is entitled to, the Panel should consider reducing those fees based on, among other things, the fact that Terry significantly overstated his recoverable damages by a factor of twenty.

18. Hourly rates for matters such as these typically range from $500.00 to $1,500.00 per hour for senior attorneys and $200.00 to $500.00 per hour for more junior attorneys. Respondents' billing rates were well within these parameters. The weighted average of Respondents' hourly rate was approximately $585.00 per hour. Jamie Welton, lead counsel for Respondents, was $700.00 per hour. That amount was imminently reasonable for an attorney of his caliber and experience. Terry's lead counsel billed at $685.00 per hour. It appears that Terry and his lawyers then switched to a blended fee arrangement, where his lawyers billed at approximately 30-50% of their normal hourly rates in exchange for a partial contingency. Backing out the reduced rates, Terry's lawyers' blended rate is roughly the same as Respondents' blended rate.

19. Lackey Hershman also capped its hours at 10 per day, despite several lawyers spending far more than that nearly every day of the arbitration and on several days preparing for the arbitration and during the course of the litigation. Lackey Hershman also did not bill for paralegal time.

20. In addition to the criteria suggested by Texas authority, I compared Terry's fees (for the 11 months Terry made available) to Respondents' fees. In cases such as these, it is typical, if not uniformly true, that the fees of multiple corporate defendants are two to five times more than the fees of an individual petitioner/plaintiff. This is the case for several reasons, including differences in factual investigation; discovery; and case management.

21. With respect to factual investigation, an individual plaintiff and its lawyers have essentially one source for information—the plaintiff. That was essentially the case here. On the other hand, there were multiple parties on the other side, several of which were corporate entities, making any factual investigation a far broader and more complicated task. This typically involves interviewing numerous people, not just one plaintiff. As is often the case, some of the witnesses no longer work for the parties and thus must be located, and contacted, often requiring the party to go through an individual's counsel. General counsel and other legal and compliance department personnel are typically if not always involved in the process and thus adds an additional layer of complication. There is also a need to avoid interfering with ongoing business, business relationships, and employee relationships, all of which makes factual investigation more complicated and time consuming.

22. The same holds true with discovery. In this case, when responding to discovery, the sole source of document production and interrogatory responses was Terry. In this case, it appears that the only documents Terry had in his possession were those that he stole from Respondents. On the other hand, Respondents' counsel had to review, locate, and analyze the documents produced by several entities, numerous employees, and third parties. In responding to interrogatories, Respondents had to interview multiple individuals and analyze a significantly greater amount of documents. There is simply an enormous difference between handling discovery when one represents a single, individual client versus handling discovery when one has multiple corporate entities with various deponents and employees.

23. The same also holds true for case management. All of the factors complicating discovery and factual investigation similarly complicate the case management.

24. For the 11 months I had available to compare Respondents' bills with Terry's bills (June 2016 – April 2017), I found that Respondents' fees fell well within the expected norm. For the 11 months I had available from Terry (June 2016 – April 2017), Respondents' lawyers billed approximately 1,170 hours. Terry's lawyers billed approximately 813 hours. Respondents' lawyers' total hours were significantly less than I would have anticipated, given Terry's lawyers' hours. As noted above, Respondents' lawyers' blended hourly rate, and individual rates, were more than reasonable.

25. Another factor supporting my determination that all of Respondents' fees were necessary and reasonable is that a substantial portion of those fees were made necessary by the litigation tactics of Terry and his counsel. Terry filed an opposition and motion for sanctions because Respondents initiated a state court proceeding. He did so even though the subject employment agreement provided that the exclusive venue for any disputes on the employment agreement would be in the state or federal courts in Dallas County. He did so despite the fact that it was black letter law one must seek injunctive relief in the state or federal courts, even in the face of a binding arbitration provision. He did so even though Highland was not party to the LPA. Terry also fought hard, in both forums, in resisting the return of documents and information that was irrefutably the property of Highland. Terry and his lawyers also failed to disclose (and return) certain documents Terry had in his possession that should have been quickly disclosed and returned. See generally Bench Brief of Professor Moss; Respondents' Post-Hearing Brief.

26. Respondents incurred a total of $1,605,844.45 in fees in this dispute. Based on the eight-day length of that trial; the work necessary to prepare for and present the case; the complexity of the issues at hand; and all the other factors detailed above, it is my opinion that that amount is imminently reasonable and necessary, and should be recovered.

27. Respondents also incurred $787,454.36 in costs, primarily experts, discovery, and arbitration fees. Based on the above criteria, it is also my opinion that those, too, are all reasonable and necessary and recoverable by Respondents. In total, I believe Respondents should be awarded $2,393,298.81 in attorneys' fees and costs.

28. It is my opinion that neither party is, at this juncture, entitled to recover fees for anything that is to occur in the future, including post-trial motions, appeals to the extent permitted, and collection efforts. In order to be entitled to such fees at this juncture, they must be not only reasonable and necessary, but foreseeable and expected. Given the fact that the panel has yet to make an award, there is no way to determine what, if anything, will occur after the panel issues its award. Respondents, however, are certainly entitled to petition the panel for fees at a later date.

29. I also considered whether a portion of Highland's fees should be segregated. Based on my review of the file, I concluded that Highland's fees should not be segregated because Respondents' claims and defenses all arose out of and were inextricably interwoven with the breach of Employment Agreement claim against Terry and basis for his termination. Respondents' defense to Terry's claims were primarily the breach of his Employment Agreement, basis for his termination from Highland, and his theft of company property — the very same bases of Highland's claims against Terry. As such, both Highland's claims and Respondents' defenses to Terry's claims, entailed the very same facts and law and are thus intertwined and not subject to segregation.

This concludes my affidavit testimony.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In Cause No. DC-16-11396, styled Highland Capital Management, LP vs. Joshua N. Terry, the 162nd Judicial District Court stayed the litigation and Ordered the parties to arbitration.

The Panel has previously dismissed all claims stated by Terry against Jams Dondero, individually. James Dondero is not an appropriate party to this proceeding and did not obligate himself to the Parties’ arbitration agreement.

The Panel has previously dismissed Terry’s claims for Declaratory Judgment relief.

The Panel has previously dismissed Terry’s claims for Exemplary Damages, as same are an excluded remedy by the terms of the Parties’ arbitration agreement.

The Panel has previously denied Respondents’ Motion to Disqualify Clouse Dunn and ruled that the firm is not disqualified to represent Terry.

The Panel has declined to entertain any request for injunctive relief.

REMAINING CLAIMS STATED BY PARTIES

Terry states claims against Highland for Sabine Pilot wrongful termination and seeks damages for deferred compensation, unpaid wages, future wages and reimbursement of benefits not paid. Terry states claims against ACIS, ACIS GP and Highland for reputational damages, resulting from statements published in the pending District Court litigation and a press release to Law 360.

Terry states claims against ACIS, ACIS GP, Trust and Okada for breach of contract and seeks damages for amounts due under the terms of the ACIS LPA and damages resulting from overcharging expenses and withholding of retirement assets.

Terry states claims against ACIS and ACIS GP for fraud.

Terry states claims against ACIS GP for breach of fiduciary duty.

Terry states claims against ACIS, ACIS GP and Highland for conversion of assets, fraudulent transfer of ACIS assets, recovery of his attorney's fees and costs, together with pre and post award interest.

Highland states claims against Terry, "subject to, and without waiver of its contention that Highland is not a party to a valid arbitration agreement with Terry and its claims against him are not arbitrable or within the scope of any applicable arbitration agreement, which contentions remain fully reserved." With this reservation, Highland states claims against Terry for breach of employment agreement, theft/theft of trade secrets, breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing and recovery of its attorneys' fees and costs together with pre and post award interest.

BACKGROUND FACTS

Terry began his employment with Highland in 2005. During the ensuing years he achieved remarkable success and ultimately became Highland's most productive portfolio manager and had direct responsibility for more than ten billion dollars of assets under his management.

In 2011, Terry, James Dondero and Okada formed ACIS as a registered investment advisor to raise money from third-party investors to invest in collateralized loan obligations, (CLOs). ACIS earns a fee for managing the loans.

As the general partner of ACIS, ACIS GP owned .1%. As limited partners of ACIS, Trust owned 59.9%; Okada owned 15% and Terry owned 25%.

James Dondero owned 100% of Trust and was an officer of ACIS GP, and in fact made or approved the financial strategies and decisions of ACIS. While Okada was less active, Terry was responsible for the day-to-day management of ACIS. Terry managed well, attracted significant investors and grew ACIS assets under his management from nothing to three billion seven hundred million dollars in less than six years.

Prior to 2016, Terry enjoyed a good relationship with Dondero. Terry had never been criticized, written up or disciplined during his eleven years of employment with Highland. Terry had been paid millions of dollars in Highland salary, bonuses and ACIS profit distributions, as he had produced many more millions for Highland and his ACIS partners.

Thereafter, tensions arose between Terry and Dondero which were centered in Dondero's plans to have Trussway Holdings, Inc. acquire Targa, a Brazilian latex manufacturer, out of bankruptcy. Trussway is a Highland affiliated company controlled by Dondero. The plan was to have Highland managed CLOs loan Trussway approximately seventeen million dollars so

Trussway could loan a Highland affiliated Brazilian entity the money to acquire Targa and have Trussway use its cash to acquire its own equity to effectively increase Highland's ownership in Trussway.

At this time, Trussway's only lenders were the Highland CLOs and it owed the Highland CLOs approximately fifty six million dollars in Trussway notes coming due on May 31, 2016. Trussway did not have the money to pay the notes. Trussway did have more than twenty three million dollars still available on its revolver note (credit line), with the Highland CLOs. Dondero's plan was to extend the notes then due within days and finance Trussway's acquisition of Targa by drawing down the revolver funds. Dondero's plan was to not pay any of the CLOs' notes until such time as Trussway could be refinanced or sold.

All of the Highland CLOs lending to Trussway were "pre-crisis" 2009, CLOs. One of the CLOs, Pamco-Cayman, had matured years before and its notes were in technical default. Another, Vahalla was maturing within four months.

Terry was opposed to Dondero's plan and saw a need to vigorously oppose the plan. Terry was the portfolio manager of these Highland CLOs and was convinced it would be a breach of his fiduciary duty to allow the Pamco-Cayman and Vahalla notes to be extended, as they were past or near maturity. Terry's opposition escalated at the May 2016 Conflicts Committee meeting and having been told that outside counsel had approved the transaction, Terry was sure they could not know all of the facts. Terry then informed outside counsel of "the facts" and his opposition to Dondero's plan. Outside counsel was in agreement with Terry and thereafter, on June 9, 2016, the Conflicts Committee approved the Trussway/Targa Transaction, but with the Pamco-Cayman and Vahalla notes being paid off and not extended. Thus, less cash was available to Dondero to fund his plan.

On June 9, 2016, following the Conflicts Committee meeting, Dondero told Terry that “he had lost all trust in him”; that “he could not go through another conflicts process with him”; and “it was best that Terry work with Surgent, Highland’s Chief Compliance Officer (CCO), on an exit or transition out of Highland.” The next day, Dondero emailed Terry and told him to focus on a “clean break scenario” and not come back to the office. On June 13, 2106, Terry received an email from Highland’s Human Resources (H/R) director advising that he had been terminated for cause, but that Highland was “willing to consider the separation package previously offered”, presumably referring to CCO Surgent’s email of June 10, 2106, wherein he acknowledges that, “We are in agreement that we would like the termination of this relationship to be amicable.” On June 13, 2016, Terry communicates with Dondero protesting his termination and demanding he be paid by Highland and ACIS. Thereafter, Highland’s outside counsel sent a letter to Terry’s counsel, demanding the return of all Highland related documents in the possession of Terry. Terry’s counsel responds and reminds Highland’s counsel of Terry’s prior offer to return appropriate documents to Highland, and suggests a protocol for managing the electronically stored documents and electronic devices in possession of ESI, a third party forensics vendor, and demands redemption of Terry’s and his wife’s retirement account investments in ACIS CLO Value Fund II (CLOVF). Terry first requested redemption of these retirement account investments on June 20, 2016.

Thereafter, on June 27, 2016, Terry returns documents to Highland and continues to await an agreement on ESI return protocols. However, on July 27, 2016, Highland’s counsel rejects the proposed ESI return protocols and does not suggest alternate protocols. In the same e-mail string, Highland’s counsel responds to Terry’s request for redemption of the retirement investments in CLOVF, advising that; “we do not contest that Mr. Terry has submitted a request for redemption in full of all of his accounts. However, please note that those accounts do not have any value.” On September 1, 2016, the CCO, for the first time, memos Terry’s “compliance file” with allegations of Terry’s breach of fiduciary duty, self-dealing and material compliance violations regarding the CLOVF. This memo alleges an investor loss in the CLOVF attributed solely to Terry’s actions and that Highland in part offset such loss against “Mr. Terry’s” remaining interest in the CLOVF, “in accordance with Section 3.5(c) of the Agreement of Limited Partnership.” Thus, Terry’s and his wife’s retirement investment in the CLOVF was swept by Highland or others and “those accounts have no value,” as stated in Highland’s counsel’s email of July 27, 2016.

On September 7, 2016, the Parties mediated their dispute, but did not settle. The next day Highland filed suit against Terry alleging the same facts which the CCO alleged in his September 1, 2016 memo, and alleging Terry had a sexual relationship with a number of his subordinates, and alleging that Terry made disparaging/disrespectful remarks about Dondero. Highland’s suit stated claims for breach of employment agreement, breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing, violation of the Texas Uniform Trade Secrets Act and sought declaratory relief that Terry was terminated for cause.

On September 12, 2106, Highland files its Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Motion to Disqualify Terry’s attorneys, and Terry files his Motion to Compel Arbitration. On September 28, 2106, the Court issued its Order compelling the Parties to arbitration and Ordered the litigation (Cause No. DC-16-11396, 162nd Judicial District Court) stayed pending a Final Award in Arbitration.

ANALYSIS OF FACTS AND CLAIMS

The Panel first addresses Terry's claims for breach of contract stated against ACIS and ACIS GP and breach of fiduciary duty stated against ACIS GP.

The evidence establishes that Highland terminated Terry's employment on June 9, 2016. The ACIS Limited Partnership Agreement (LPA), Section 4.04 requires that, "upon the resignation, death, disability or termination of employment with the Partnership or any Affiliate Employer (for any reason whatsoever) (as such event, a 'Removal Event') of any Limited Partner, the Partnership Interest of such Limited Partner shall automatically be forfeited to the Partnership and such Limited Partner shall be entitled to receive in consideration of such interest an amount equal to (i) 100% of such Limited Partners Percentage Interest of all Net Available Cash through the first year end following the Removal Event, (ii) 66 2/3% of such Limited Partner's Percentage Interest of all Net Available Cash through the second year end following such Removal Event, (iii) 33 1/3% of such limited Partner's Percentage Interest of Net Available Cash through the third year end following such Removal Event...; provided, that if the basis of such Removal Event was termination of employment with the Partnership or any Affiliate Employer for cause...such partner shall automatically forfeit its right to any further compensation or consideration for its Partnership Interest."

Because Highland stated that Terry was terminated for cause, ACIS and ACIS GP invoked the provided clause and deemed all of Terry's limited partnership interest and entitlement to payout as forfeit. Thus, ACIS and ACIS GP claim to owe Terry nothing for his 25% limited partnership interest in ACIS, as Terry claims he is contractually owed twelve million nine hundred and eight two thousand dollars for his 25% limited partnership interest in ACIS.

The evidence establishes that ACIS and ACIS GP did not just simply rely on Highland's statement of terminating Terry for cause. ACIS and ACIS GP became part of Highland's and Dondero's efforts to construct a pretext of "for cause" termination so Terry could be denied the value of his limited partnership interest in ACIS. ACIS and ACIS GP knowingly and willingly pretextually characterized Terry's termination from Highland as a "for cause" termination to deny Terry the value of his limited partnership interest, all in contractual breach of the ACIS LPA and in breach of fiduciary duty to Terry as its limited partner. ACIS and ACIS GP have no employees. All who act for ACIS and ACIS GP are officers or employees of Highland and perform multiple roles.

The evidence establishes that Highland's termination of Terry was, in fact, pre-textual, without basis of cause and only because Dondero wanted him gone. Terry's opposition to Dondero's Trussway/Targa plan was not self-dealing and not a breach of fiduciary duty. Terry's opposition to Dondero's plan to not pay investors and extend past due and near due notes was appropriate and was ultimately accepted by all to be the correct approach to complete the Trussway/Targa acquisition. Dondero was simply angry and realized Terry was not a "yes man" willing to let Dondero have his wrongheaded way, so Dondero fired Terry on the spot and later sought to characterize Terry's termination of employment as "for cause."

Respondents' offer to prove that Terry's termination was "for cause" is not persuasive. The contrasts between the true facts and their temporal relationship to Terry's termination, as those "facts" are characterized by Respondents as a predicate for his "for cause" termination, are not credible. The CCO's memo to Terry's file of September 1, 2016 was the first documentation of his alleged breach of fiduciary duty or self-dealing as a justification for his "for cause" termination.

There is no credible evidence that anyone ever discussed any prior sexual relationship between Terry and a co-worker, other than Terry in a "father/son" talk with Dondero in January 2015. That admitted relationship had ended months earlier, was not significant to Dondero and he told Terry there was no need to report the relationship to Human Resources. Respondents alleged other sexual relationships between Terry and co-workers which are denied by Terry. One is alleged to have occurred in 2011, but there is no credible evidence that it even occurred. It is simply not credible that a rumored relationship four years prior was any motivation for or could be any justification for Terry's "for cause" termination. Respondents' allegation that Terry had a sexual relationship with a Highland junior attorney is most offensive, as the relationship did not occur and was denied by both Terry and the junior attorney. This allegation was based solely on someone's fantasy related to costumes they wore at an office Halloween party and their common attendance at a business conference. It is not credible that a sophisticated CCO and H/R director would reasonably rely on such as a basis for Terry's "for cause" termination and resulting forfeiture of the value of his limited partnership interest in ACIS. The evidence establishes that Terry did not have a sexual relationship with the junior attorney, and the Respondents or others, in good faith, could not have reasonably believed he did.

The Panel is persuaded that the Respondents, feeling need to find motive for the junior attorney's assistance of Terry and her involvement in the CLOVF restructure, sponsored these allegations to support their claims that Terry was seeking the restructure of the CLOVF out of self-interest and in breach of his fiduciary duties, and establish the motives of the junior attorney in "knowingly" facilitating Terry's alleged breach of duty. This is a pretextual construct of the CCO and is simply not credible.

The proposed restructure of the CLOVF began in early 2015 and was always known by Dondero, Highland's legal department and CCO. The CLOVF was small, only had a few investors, was subject to investor redemption requests, had been co-opted to be supported by Highland employee's investment of their retirement accounts and not structured in a way to attract a target group of investors. The proposal was to restructure the CLOVF to make it more “hedge fund like”, and grow the CLOVF with new investors.

The CLOVF routinely paid profit distributions to its investors. This is not “hedge fund like” because profits were distributed rather than retained to be reinvested for growth. The two primary investors, referred to as Rampart and Kyser did not require routine distributions and sought growth. Highland employees had access to investing in the CLOVF by investing in its ITA retirement accounts, which were basically IRAs. Employee investors who wished to invest more in their ITA retirement accounts were required to invest in the CLOVF’s interest bearing notes at a ratio of 80% notes to support 20% investment in their ITA retirement accounts. If the CLOVF was to no longer distribute profits to accomplish “hedge fund like” reinvestment for growth, no distributions would be available to pay interest on the employee investment notes and the notes would need to be paid off. If there was no longer a vehicle to support aggressive employee investment in the CLOVF (the four to one ratio), the ITA did not need to continue to exist. The employee’s retirement accounts could simply be redeemed or transferred to other IRAs.

Terry was the portfolio manager of the CLOVF and its third largest investor. Like other investors, Terry had rights to redeem his investment, but he did not seek to redeem and continued to invest in CLOVF notes and he and his wife continued to invest their retirement funds in the ITA. Nonetheless, Respondents allege that a dichotomy of interest led Terry to lie and scheme to have his investment in the CLOVF paid while others were encouraged to invest. This is the substance of Respondents’ allegations of Terry’s self-dealing and breach of fiduciary duty, supporting both their allegations of “for cause” termination and Highland’s claims for damages and offset in the District Court suit. As noted, these claims were never documented or disclosed to Terry prior to the CCO’s memo of September 1, 2016, and Highland’s District Court suit.

As noted, the proposed restructure of CLOVF began in early 2015 and continued for a year thereafter. The business purpose of the restructure was well known to Dondero and the CCO. As early as the fall of 2015, Dondero and Terry were discussing the appropriateness of continuing the CLOVF without new investors. Dondero did not want to close the CLOVF and suggested that the DAF would become a major investor. The DAF (Donor Advised Fund), CLO Hold Co is the Parties' reference to a group of charitable foundations which were invested in Highland managed CLOs. The DAF's trustee is a Highland employee and Dondero's former college roommate. Apparently, Dondero knew he could direct the DAF's investment in the CLOVF and support its continuation. Dondero and the Highland CCO were aware of the planned restructure and its consequential effect on the ITA and the employee investor notes supporting the employee's retirement investments in the ITA. By December 2015, Dondero approves the restructure plan, payment of employee investor notes and the windup of the ITA. The Highland CCO expresses concern that Rampart's and Kyser's written approval is necessary for the CLOVF to stop paying profit distributions. Later the necessary approval is documented, apparently to the CCO's satisfaction, and the restructure plan proceeds. The DAF contributes sixteen million six hundred thousand dollars of Highland managed assets to the CLOVF, employee investor notes are paid and the ITA is wound up by the end of April 2016.

Following Terry's termination and later notice of "for cause" termination, Terry requested redemption of his and his wife's remaining investments in the CLOVF. Five weeks later, on July 27, 2016, he is advised that his investment has no value. Apparently, when the ITA was wound up in late April, Terry's and his wife's retirement investments were somehow re-characterized as Terry's capital account in the ACIS CLO Value Master Fund II, L.P. or his capital account in the CLOVF.

On or about July 19, 2106, Highland rescinded the DAF contributions to the CLOVF and returned the contributed assets to the DAF. Respondents state this rescission was necessary because they had “recently discovered (a) conflict of interest regarding an ex-employee.” However, the Rescission Agreement itself recites that, “the Parties have each determined that it is in their respective best interests of each of the Parties to rescind and cancel the Contribution.”

Incident to the rescission, the CLOVF returned all of the contributed assets to the DAF and paid in cash or transfer of additional assets the total value of seven hundred and eight thousand dollars, “to make the DAF whole”, and economically in the same position as before its contribution to the CLOVF.

The “recently discovered conflict of interest” is the CCO’s recent epiphany that Terry must have lied when he advised that the CLOVF investors Rampart and Kyser “requested” that distributions be terminated to accommodate reinvestment growth. The CCO’s testimony that he called these investors and confirmed this lie is not persuasive and begs credibility. The only documented evidence are the investors written approvals which the CCO required.

The July 27, 2016 advice that Terry’s and his wife’s retirement accounts had no value is only accurate because the value was taken and used to pay the DAF following the rescission. In the District Court suit, Highland states a claim for damages and offset for the additional value paid to the DAF. Respondents’ witness testified that the retirement fund’s value was in Terry’s capital account and it was swept pursuant to Section 3.5(c) of the ACIS CLO Value Master Fund II, L.P.’s limited partnership agreement.

Terry is a limited partner in the CLOVF and the CLOVF is a limited partner in the ACIS CLO Value Master Fund II (CLOVMF) but the evidence does not show Terry to be a partner in the CLOVMF. Assuming that Terry is a partner, as referenced in Section 3.5(c), Respondents’ claimed authority to sweep the accounts in satisfaction of or offset of damage or loss is directly dependent upon a nexus in causation between the alleged damage or loss and the conduct of Terry.

The evidence establishes that the CCO's claims of "recently discovered conflict of interest" is yet another construct and pretext to support Respondents' denial of limited partnership value based on a "for cause" termination and was not in fact the reason for the DAF rescission. It would make little difference to Highland which of its CLOs managed the DAF investments. Dondero simply reconsidered his decision to support the continuation of the CLOVF with Highland managed funds and realized, that in fact, as Terry had advised, the fund would be too small to manage without significant investors. The CLOVF was ultimately closed out because Dondero did not see benefit to its continuation. The evidence establishes that no conduct of Terry was a cause of damage or loss to the CLOVMF or the CLOVF.

Section 3.10(a) of the ACIS LPA limits compensation and reimbursement of expenses payable to the General Partner and any Affiliate of the General Partner to an amount not to exceed 20% of Revenues without the consent of all members of the Founding Partner Group. There is no dispute that Terry is a member of the Founding Partner Group. There is no evidence that Terry offered written consent to any expenses paid by ACIS in excess of 20% of Revenues. It is undisputed that ACIS habitually paid more than 20% of Revenues to Highland for providing ACIS with overhead and administration. Respondents' evidence and arguments that Terry waived or consented to ACIS's payment of excess expenses is not persuasive. At most, Terry accepted his ACIS distributions without regard to the expenses paid to Highland. This is not consent contemplated by the ACIS LPA. Highland is owned 75% by Dondero and 25% by Okada and Terry is not a partner in Highland. Terry had no reason to consent to excess expenses being paid to Highland. Additionally, the ACIS LPA has an express waiver clause at Section 6.09 which states,

“Waiver. No failure by any party to insist upon strict performance of any covenant, duty, agreement, or condition of this Agreement or exercise of any right or remedy consequent upon breach thereof shall constitute waiver of any such breach or any other covenant, duty, agreement, or condition.”

The evidence establishes that Terry did not consent to ACIS payments of expenses in excess of 20% of Revenue and Terry has not waived his right to claim damages directly resulting from ACIS’ and ACIS GP’s breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty. Clearly ACIS and ACIS GP ignored Terry’s contractual rights and ACIS GP as a general partner has a fiduciary duty not to benefit itself or another at the expense of its limited partner, as they ignore and breach the terms of the partnership agreement and diminish Terry’s distributions.

The Panel next addresses Terry’s claim for conversion of the ITA retirement accounts stated against Highland, ACIS and ACIS GP.

Without again reciting the convoluted structure and history of the ITA retirement accounts in issue, it is established that there is no remaining value to the accounts because its value was swept and used by Highland or CLOVF to pay the DAF incident to the DAF rescission. It is noted that Respondents argue and offer to prove that Terry has no standing to state a claim for conversion of three of the five accounts because his wife is the trustee and owner of those three accounts. She is the trustee and owner of those accounts. Yet those accounts too were swept to pay the DAF and construct a pretextual damage and offset claim for having paid the DAF. While this establishes conversion of the accounts to the damage of Terry and his wife, the converters (CLOVF, CLOVMF, ACIS CLO VF GP), are not parties to this arbitration. The claims for breach of contract and conversion and damages should be stated against those parties or others, elsewhere.

The Panel next addresses Terry’s claims for reputational damages and fraudulent transfer stated against Highland, ACIS and ACIS GP.

The evidence establishes that Highland and not ACIS or ACIS GP was the publisher of any false or defamatory statements. Whether those statements in pleadings or press release to Law360 are actionable against Highland is a matter deferred for the District Court suit. Terry's claims for reputational damages stated against ACIS or ACIS GP are not proved.

Terry states a claim against Highland, ACIS and ACIS GP for the fraudulent transfer or conveyance of assets under the Texas Fraudulent Transfer Act. In October 2016, ACIS sold to Highland a participation interest in ACIS's Service Fees (management fees) which ACIS would receive between November 2016 and through August 2019. This sale of a participation interest represents near one-half of ACIS revenues during the covered period. Highland is to pay, in cash and promissory note with interest at 3%, ACIS a total of thirteen million three hundred and thirty three thousand dollars, plus interest for the participation interest. Highland's payment is scheduled as follows:

- October 7, 2016 - $666,655.00 – cash at closing
- May 31, 2017 - $3,370,694.00 – principal and interest
- May 31, 2018 - $5,286,243.00 – principal and interest
- May 31, 2019 - $4,677,690.00 – principal and interest

The transactional documents recite business purpose and reasonable consideration for the sale. Terry offers no evidence that ACIS did not receive reasonable equivalent value in the transaction or that ACIS made the transfer with "actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud." Terry has not proved a claim for fraudulent transfer or conveyance.

The Panel next addresses Terry's claims for wrongful termination and resulting damages stated against Highland.

Terry's employment with Highland was "At Will" and he could have been terminated for any reason other than an unlawful reason. Terry did not prove that the sole reason for his termination was his refusal to commit an illegal act, as is required under Sabine Pilot. The evidence establishes that Dondero terminated Terry because he was angry with Terry's opposition to his Trussway/Targa acquisition plan and he wanted Terry gone. "At Will" employment contemplates that if the boss wishes, one's employment is terminated and the termination is not actionably wrongful. Even as an "At Will" employee, Terry may have claims for damages against Highland for his unpaid severance, unused vacation, deferred compensation and unreimbursed expenses, but these claims are a matter deferred for the District Court suit. Terry's claims stated against Highland for Sabine Pilot wrongful termination are not proved.

Although Trust and Okada are limited partners in ACIS and are named as Respondents in this arbitration, Terry has failed to offer any evidence of actionable claims against Trust or Okada. All claims stated by Terry in this arbitration against Trust or Okada are not proved.

The Panel next addresses Highland's claims for breach of employment agreement, theft/theft of trade secrets and breach of fiduciary duty stated against Terry.

Although Highland is a party to the District Court suit Ordered to arbitration, Highland is not a party to an arbitration agreement and has stated claims against Terry with the above noted reservation, "subject to and without waiver." To the extent these claims are stated in this Arbitration in affirmative avoidance of Terry's claims stated against ACIS and ACIS GP they are addressed in this Award.

The evidence does not establish that Terry breached his employment agreement or any fiduciary duty to Highland, ACIS or ACIS GP or that Terry self-dealt in anyway. On the contrary, Terry's actions in opposing Dondero's Trussway/Targa acquisition plan and his efforts to restructure the CLOVF were reasonable and appropriate and as his portfolio manager duties required. These claims are not proved and are not an affirmative defense or avoidance available to ACIS or ACIS GP.

The evidence does not establish that Terry is guilty of theft or theft of trade secrets. Respondents offered no evidence of a trade secret or a protectable trade secret interest in the documents in issue. Although Highland's claim for turnover is overreaching, it was heard in this Arbitration at Respondents' insistence and the record and all evidence admitted in that preliminary hearing was offered and admitted in the final hearing. This claim is not proved and is not an affirmative defense or avoidance available to ACIS or ACIS GP. Otherwise, the Panel issues its turnover decision in this Award.

The evidence does not establish that any disparaging remarks of Terry were ever communicated to Dondero prior to Terry's termination or that the alleged remarks could have been a reason for Terry's "for cause" termination. All of Respondents' alleged bases of "for cause" termination of Terry's employment are not proved and none are an affirmative defense or avoidance available to ACIS or ACIS GP.

ANALYSIS OF TERRY'S DAMAGES

The Panel only addresses proved claims stated against appropriate Parties to this Arbitration.

Terry has proved his claims stated against ACIS and ACIS GP for breach of contract and claims stated against ACIS GP for breach of fiduciary duty incident to their payment of excess expenses to Highland and their wrongful forfeiture of Terry's contractual right to be paid for his ACIS limited partnership interest.

The evidence establishes that ACIS and ACIS GP paid excess expenses to Highland during the years of 2013, 2014, 2015 and January through May 2016. These expenses paid exceeded the 20% of Revenues cap stated in Section 3.10(a) of the ACIS LPA. The payment of these excess expenses reduced Terry's ACIS partnership distributions during this period. Had excess expenses not been paid and only the contractually capped expenses had been paid, Terry would have received additional ACIS profits distributions of $1,755,481.00 for his 25% partnership interest in ACIS.

The best evidence of the value of the Section 4.04 limited partnership payout is Terry's June 13, 2016 calculations, which he communicated to Dondero within days of his termination. Terry was the portfolio manager of ACIS and as such was most aware of ACIS's financial performance and expected performance within the payout period. The calculations do not include an assumed growth rate of ACIS revenues and are not burdened by Highland's after termination manipulations of ACIS managed assets or ACIS revenues.

The evidence establishes that Terry's ACIS limited partnership payout upon termination had a total value of $5,688,351.00.

Because ACIS and ACIS GP breached the ACIS LPA and ACIS GP breached its fiduciary duty in June 2016 when they repudiated their obligations to their limited partner, Terry's contractual entitlement to payout under the ACIS LPA is liquidated, accelerated and is now fully due.

Additionally, Terry is entitled to pre-award interest at the rate of five percent (5%) per annum from the date of commencement of this Arbitration, September 20, 2016, until entry of Final Award in the amount of $372,192.00.00.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the Parties' offers of proof, evidence submitted and argument of counsel, the following facts and conclusions are found by these Arbitrators to be established by the evidence to be true and necessary to this Award. To the extent these findings and conclusions differ from any Parties' position that is the result of these Arbitrators determinations as to credibility, relevance, burden of proof considerations, and the weighing of the evidence, both oral and written.

The Arbitration Panel finds and concludes as follows:

1. This dispute is arbitrable pursuant to the Parties' agreement to arbitrate and prior Court Order in Cause No. DC-16-11396, 162nd Judicial District Court, Dallas County, Texas.
2. The Arbitration panel has jurisdiction to resolve all disputes presented and not deferred to the 162nd District Court.
3. JAMS Comprehensive Arbitration Rules and Procedures govern the resolution of this dispute with the law of the States of Texas and Delaware.
4. Prior to his termination on June 9, 2016, Terry was an at will employee of Highland and a 25% limited partner in ACIS.
5. Highland's termination of Terry's employment was not, in fact, "for cause." Highland's stated "for cause" termination of Terry's employment was, in fact, pretextual and for purpose of denying Terry benefits of employment payable at his termination and as a basis for the forfeiture of the value of Terry's limited partnership interest in ACIS.

6. ACIS and ACIS GP knowingly and willingly invoked Highland's false pretext of "for cause" termination to deny Terry the value of his 25% limited partnership in ACIS.
7. ACIS and ACIS GP paid Highland expenses in excess of the contractual limit imposed by Section 3.10(a) of the ACIS LPA.
8. ACIS and ACIS GP wrongfully denied Terry his contractual rights to payment for his limited partnership interest in ACIS and are liable for and owe Terry for same.
9. In breach of contract and fiduciary duties, ACIS and ACIS GP are liable to and owe Terry his ACIS profits distributions which were payable but for the wrongful payment of excess expenses to Highland.
10. ACIS GP's actions were willful and wanton breaches of their fiduciary duties to Terry as their limited partner.
11. All claims stated by Highland, "subject to and without waiver" against Terry are not proved and as such none are an affirmative defense or avoidance of Terry's claims stated against ACIS and ACIS GP.
12. All claims stated by Terry against Trust and Okada are not proved and are denied.
13. All claims stated by Terry against ACIS and ACIS GP for fraudulent transfer or conveyance are not proved and are denied.
14. Terry's fraud claims stated against ACIS and ACIS GP are not proved and are denied.
15. All claims, not denied or awarded, are deferred to the 162nd District Court, Dallas County, Texas or other appropriate venue.

16. ACIS's and ACIS GP's breaches of contract and ACIS GP's breach of fiduciary duties have injured Terry and resulted in damages, together with pre-award interest in the total amount of Seven Million Eight Hundred Sixteen Thousand Twenty-Four Dollars and No/100 ($7,816,024.00).
17. The Parties' agreement to arbitrate does not allow the award of prevailing party attorneys' fees. All claims for attorneys' fees are denied.
18. The Parties' agreement to arbitrate allows the Panel discretion to award the prevailing party costs of arbitration. Terry is entitled to recover his JAMS arbitration costs.
19. Terry is awarded One Hundred Thirty Three Thousand, Seven Hundred Twenty Five and 15/100 Dollars ($133,725.15) for his JAMS arbitration costs.
20. Terry is entitled to recover post-award interest on all amounts awarded herein.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF ORDERS FOR RELIEF ISSUED AFTER TRIAL ON CONTESTED INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS

Joshua N. Terry (the "Petitioning Creditor" or "Mr. Terry") filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (the "Involuntary Petitions") against each of the two above-referenced related companies (the “Alleged Debtors”) on January 30, 2018.<sup>1</sup> The Involuntary Petitions were contested, and the court held a multi-day trial (the “Trial”) spanning March 21, 22, 23, 27, and March 29, 2018.<sup>2</sup> This constitutes the court’s findings of fact, conclusions of law and ruling, pursuant to Fed. Rs. Bankr. Proc. 7052 and 9014.<sup>3</sup> As explained below, the court has decided that Orders for Relief are legally required and appropriate as to each of the Alleged Debtors.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Introduction.

1. The Alleged Debtors—Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”), a Delaware limited partnership, and ACIS Capital Management GP, L.L.C. (“Acis GP/LLC”), a Delaware limited liability company—are two entities in the mega-organizational structure of a company that is known as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”).

2. Highland is a Dallas, Texas-based company that is a Registered Investment Advisor. Highland was founded in 1993 (changing its original name from “Protective Asset Management” to Highland in 1997) by James D. Dondero (“Mr. Dondero”), originally with a

<sup>2</sup> Shortly after the Involuntary Petitions were filed, the court held hearings on February 6-7, 2018, on the Petitioning Creditor’s Emergency Motion to Abrogate or Modify 11 U.S.C. § 303(f), Prohibit Transfer of Assets, and Import, Inter Alia, 11 U.S.C. § 363 [DE # 3] (the “303(f) Motion”) and the Alleged Debtors’ Emergency Motion to Seek Emergency Hearing on the Alleged Debtors’ Motion to Dismiss Involuntary Petitions and Request for Award of Fees, Costs, and Damages [DE # 9] (the “Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss”). The court ultimately granted the 303(f) Motion and denied the Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss. Both the Petitioning Creditor and the Alleged Debtors have proposed that the court should consider the evidence it heard at the hearings held on February 6-7, 2018, in determining whether it should enter orders for relief. The court has, accordingly, considered such evidence in this ruling.

<sup>3</sup> Bankruptcy subject matter jurisdiction exists in this contested matter, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b). This is a core proceeding over which the bankruptcy court may exercise subject matter jurisdiction, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(2)(A) and (O) and the Standing Order of Reference of Bankruptcy Cases and Proceedings (Misc. Rule No. 33), for the Northern District of Texas, dated August 3, 1984. This bankruptcy court has Constitutional authority to issue a final order or judgment in this matter, as it arises under a bankruptcy statute—11 U.S.C. § 303. Venue is proper in this district, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409(a), as the Alleged Debtors have their business headquarters in this district.

75% ownership interest, and Mark K. Akada (“Mr. Akada”), originally with a 25% ownership interest.<sup>4</sup>

3. Both Mr. Dondero and Mr. Akada provided witness testimony at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions, and their names are mentioned numerous times herein—since they were generally the subject of significant evidence and argument presented at the Trial. Mr. Dondero is the chief executive officer for Highland and Mr. Akada is the chief investment officer. Mr. Dondero is also the president of each of the two Alleged Debtors.

4. Highland, through its organizational structure of approximately 2,000 separate business entities, manages approximately $14-$15 billion of investor capital in vehicles ranging from: collateral loan obligation funds (“CLOs”); private equity funds; and mutual funds.

5. Highland’s CLO business was front-and-center at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions. The Alleged Debtor, Acis LP, for approximately the past seven years, has been the vehicle through which Highland’s CLO business has been managed.

6. The Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, became an employee of Highland in the year 2005, starting as a portfolio analyst, promoting to a loan trader, then ultimately becoming the portfolio manager for (and 25% limited partner in) Highland’s CLO business—specifically, Mr. Terry was the human being who was acting for the CLO manager, Acis LP.

7. Mr. Terry was highly successful in his role in the CLO business, managing billions of dollars of assets during his tenure, but Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero had a bitter parting of ways on June 9, 2016. Specifically, Mr. Terry’s employment was terminated on that date (for reasons that have been highly disputed) and his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was deemed forfeited without any payment of consideration to him.

8. In September 2016, Highland sued Mr. Terry in the 162nd Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 1”) for breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing, disparagement, breach of contract, and various other causes of action and theories. Mr. Terry asserted his own claims against Highland, and also claims against the two Alleged Debtors, Mr. Dondero, and others and demanded arbitration. On September 28, 2016, State Court 1 stayed the litigation and ordered the parties to arbitrate. The parties participated in ten days of arbitration in September 2017 before JAMS. On October 20, 2017, Mr. Terry obtained an Arbitration Award (herein so called),<sup>5</sup> jointly and severally against both of the Alleged Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate, which was based on theories of breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duties.

9. There are still claims pending between and among the Petitioning Creditor, Highland, and others (not including the Alleged Debtors) in State Court 1.

10. A Final Judgment (herein so called) confirming the Arbitration Award was entered by the 44th Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 2”) on December 18, 2017, in the same amount as that contained in the Arbitration Award—$7,949,749.15.<sup>6</sup>

11. Mr. Terry began pursuing post-judgment discovery soon after obtaining his Arbitration Award and even more so after entry of the Final Judgment. Mr. Terry undertook a UCC search on November 8, 2017, to investigate whether there were any liens on the Alleged

Debtors' assets (none appeared).<sup>7</sup> Mr. Terry also pursued a garnishment of an Acis LP bank account (at a time when there was only around $2,000 in the account). Mr. Terry's counsel deposed Highland's General Counsel Scott Ellington (who sat for the deposition as a representative of Acis, LP) on January 26, 2018, and asked numerous questions about: (a) how many creditors the Alleged Debtors had,<sup>8</sup> and (b) whether Acis LP was able to pay its debts as they became due,<sup>9</sup> but did not receive meaningful answers.

12. Mr. Terry requested a temporary restraining order ("TRO") from State Court 2, on January 24, 2018, after discovering certain transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's interests, that he believed were pursued without any legitimate business purpose and with the purpose of denuding Acis LP of its assets and to make it judgment proof. Most particularly, it appeared as though Highland was engaged in a scheme to transfer certain fee-generating CLO management contracts of Acis LP away from it and into a Cayman Island affiliate of Highland.<sup>10</sup> At a January 24, 2018 hearing on the request for a TRO, Acis LP agreed and State Court 2 ordered that, between that hearing and a later hearing on a request for a temporary injunction, no CLO management contracts would be transferred away from Acis LP and that no monies would be diverted from it.<sup>11</sup>

13. Then, on January 29, 2018, the Controller of and CPA for Highland (David Klos) submitted a Declaration to State Court 2 concerning the net worth of the Alleged Debtors, stating that Acis GP/LLC had a net worth of $0 and that Acis LP might have a net worth, at best, of $990,141.<sup>12</sup> Mr. Terry thought this was preposterous—given the management fees that Acis LP was entitled to and the receivables that should be owing to it. Mr. Terry believes that the collateral management agreements on which Acis LP receives management fees have a present value of $30 million (about $6 million for each of the five CLOs which Acis LP has been managing).

14. On January 29, 2018, the Alleged Debtors filed a motion for leave to post a supersedeas bond in the amount of $495,070.50 with State Court 2 (purportedly half of the net worth of the two Alleged Debtors—as stated in the David Klos Declaration), so that they could suspend enforcement of the Final Judgment while they appealed it.<sup>13</sup> Although there is a very stringent standard for appealing an Arbitration Award, the Alleged Debtors apparently believe they have an argument that State Court 2 lacked the subject matter jurisdiction to confirm the Arbitration Award (a motion to vacate the Final Judgment based on this argument has previously been denied by State Court 2).<sup>14</sup>

15. Meanwhile, Mr. Terry was learning of more transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's assets and interests. On January 29, 2018, Mr. Terry filed supplemental pleadings with State Court 2, alleging that further shenanigans (i.e., transfers and transactions that would amount to fraudulent transfers) were underway at Acis LP and seeking a receiver.<sup>15</sup> Also, at some point, in the weeks leading up to this, an Acis LP lawyer represented to Mr. Terry's counsel that the Alleged Debtors were "judgment proof."<sup>16</sup>

16. At approximately 11:57 p.m. on January 30, 2018 (on the evening before a scheduled temporary injunction hearing in State Court 2—at which time State Court 2 presumably might have considered the Alleged Debtors' request to post the $495,070.50 supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the Final Judgment), Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions, as a sole petitioning creditor, against both Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.

17. For purposes of this Trial (and this Trial only), the Alleged Debtors do not dispute that Mr. Terry has standing to be a petitioning creditor pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)—in other words, they do not dispute that Mr. Terry is a holder of a claim against the Alleged Debtors that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount and that aggregates at least $15,775 in unsecured amount. However, the Alleged Debtors argue that: (a) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors and, thus, three or more petitioning creditors were required to prosecute the Involuntary Petitions pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)(1); (b) the Petitioning Creditor did not establish, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(h)(1), that the Alleged Debtors are not generally paying their debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount; (c) regardless of whether the Petitioning Creditor has met the statutory tests in sections 303(b)(1) and (h)(1), the Petitioning Creditor has acted in bad faith—which serves as an equitable basis for dismissal of the Involuntary Petitions; and (d) if the court disagrees with the Alleged Debtors and determines that the section 303(b) and (h) statutory tests are met, and also determines that the Petitioning Creditor has not acted in bad faith, the court should nevertheless abstain in this matter, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 305, since this is essentially a two-party dispute and the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by dismissal.

18. The Petitioning Creditor argues that he has met the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) but, even if he has not, there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor—which “special circumstances,” Mr. Terry alleges, have been established here. Moreover, the Petitioning Creditor argues that the facts here do not warrant section 305 abstention because the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would not be better served by dismissal.

19. As further explained below, the court finds and concludes that the Petitioning Creditor has met his burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) are met here. Thus, the court does not need to reach the question of whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor, and—if so—whether the exception is applicable here.<sup>17</sup>

20. Moreover, the Alleged Debtors have not shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the Petitioning Creditor acted in bad faith, such that the Involuntary Petitions should be dismissed.

21. Finally, the Alleged Debtors also have not shown facts here that warrant section 305 abstention because they have not shown that the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would be better served by dismissal.

B. The CLO Business: Understanding the Alleged Debtors' Business Operations, Structure, and What Creditors and Interest Holders They Actually Have.

22. Highland set up its first CLO in the year 1996. Highland was one of the early participants in the CLO industry.

23. The Alleged Debtors were formed in 2011 to be the new “brand” or face of the Highland CLO business, after Highland’s name had suffered some negative publicity in the marketplace.

24. Acis LP has acted as the portfolio manager of Highland’s CLOs since 2011. Acis LP currently has a contractual right to CLO portfolio management fees on five CLOs<sup>18</sup> which were referred to at the Trial as CLO 2013-1; CLO 2014-3; CLO 2014-4; CLO 2014-5; and CLO 2016-6. CLOs typically have an 8-12 year life. Thus, there are still several years of life left on these CLOs (since the oldest one was established in the year 2013).

25. The key “players” in and features with regard to the Highland CLOs, during the time period relevant to the issues adjudicated at the Trial, have been:

- (a) The CLO manager. As mentioned earlier, the CLO manager is the Alleged Debtor, Acis LP. Acis LP, has collateral management agreements (hereinafter, the “CLO Collateral Management Agreements”) with the CLOs (which CLOs were set up as special purpose entities) and, pursuant thereto, receives

---

<sup>18</sup> There is still another Highland CLO (CLO 2017-7), set up in April 2017, as to which Acis LP’s contractual right to manage was terminated shortly before the Petition Date, as will be further described herein.

management fees<sup>19</sup> from the CLOs in exchange for managing the pool of assets within the CLOs and communicating with investors in the CLOs.<sup>20</sup> As mentioned earlier, Mr. Terry was the human being that performed the management function at Acis LP until Highland fired him on June 9, 2016 and also terminated his limited partnership interest in Acis LP. Mr. Terry, and all employees who have ever provided services to the CLO manager, are Highland employees—which were provided to Acis LP through shared and sub-advisory services agreements—as further explained below. Thus, to be clear, Acis LP has always essentially subcontracted its CLO managerial function out to Highland.

- (b) The pool of assets. Within each CLO that the CLO manager manages is a basket of loans that the CLO manager purchases. The basket of loans typically consists of approximately 200 loans-payable (or portions of loans payable), on which large well-known companies typically are the makers/obligors (and which loans, collectively, provide a variable rate of interest).<sup>21</sup> The CLO manager can typically decide to buy and sell different loans to go into the pool of assets, with certain restrictions, during a four or five year reinvestment time period.

<sup>19</sup> These fees typically include “senior fees” (e.g., 15 basis points); additional “subordinate fees” (e.g., 25 basis points) if the CLOs are passing certain tests; and perhaps even an “incentive fee” beyond a certain hurdle rate (e.g., after the equity in the CLO received an internal rate of return of 10%, the CLO manager would get 15% of the excess). Exh. 82, p. 59, lines 14-25.

<sup>20</sup> See, as an example, Exh. 3 (the collateral management agreement between Acis LP and CLO 2014-3). Note that the document is entitled “Portfolio Management Agreement” but, to avoid confusion with other similarly titled documents and to highlight the true nature of the agreement, the court uses the defined term “CLO Collateral Management Agreement,” which terminology the lawyers also sometimes used at the Trial.

- (c) The CLO investors (i.e., CLO note holders). These may be any number of persons or entities, including pension funds, life insurance companies, or others who decide to invest in the CLOs and contribute capital to fund the purchase of a CLO's loan pool, and, in return, receive fixed rate notes payable—the ratings on which can range anywhere from Triple-A to Single-B, depending upon the risk option the investor chooses. There are typically five or six tranches of notes issued by the CLO (with the top AAA-rated tranche being the least risky and the bottom tranche being the most risky) and—to be clear—the CLO itself (again, in each case, the CLO is a special purpose vehicle) is the obligor. As the CLO manager receives income from the pool of loans in the CLO, he distributes that income to the CLO investors, in accordance with their note indentures,<sup>22</sup> starting with the top tranche of notes and then down to the other tranches. The top tranche of notes (AAA-rated) is considered the “controlling” class and a majority of holders in this class can terminate the CLO manager (i.e., Acis LP) for cause on 45 days' notice, although all parties seem to agree this would be a rare event.
- (d) The CLO equity holder. The CLO equity holder actually is a holder of subordinated notes issued by the CLOs (i.e., the bottom tranche of notes on which the CLO special purpose entity is obligated), and has voting rights and is itself a capital provider, but it takes the most risk and receives the very last cash flow from the CLOs. It, in certain ways, controls the CLO vehicle<sup>23</sup>—for example, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain “no-call” period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A’s). Note that, until recently, a separate entity known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“ALF”), which was incorporated under the laws of the island nation of Guernsey,<sup>24</sup> was the CLO equity holder. To be clear, ALF was essentially the equity owner in the CLO special purpose entities—not the equity owner of Acis LP. Acis LP was a party to a separate portfolio management agreement with ALF (hereinafter, the “ALF Portfolio Management Agreement”—not to be confused with the CLO Collateral Management Agreements that Acis LP separately has with the special purpose CLOs). No fees were paid from ALF to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement (rather, fees are only paid to Acis LP on the CLO Collateral Management Agreements). The complicated structure of the CLO business—all parties seemed to agree—has been developed, among other reasons, to comply with “risk-retention requirements” imposed by the U.S. Congress’s massive Dodd-Frank financial reform legislation<sup>25</sup> enacted in year 2010, in response to the financial crisis and recession that first began in 2008.

<sup>22</sup> The indenture trustee on the CLO notes may actually operate as a payment agent in some cases, for purposes of making the quarterly note payments to holders.

---

<sup>23</sup> The top tranche of AAA notes also has certain control—such as the ability to terminate the portfolio manager for cause, on notice.

(e) The Equity Owners of ALF. Until recently (i.e., until October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP itself, as required for a CLO manager, had a 15% indirect ownership in ALF, in order to be regulatory compliant.<sup>26</sup> The parties sometimes refer to ALF (and the web of ownership between it and Acis LP) as the “risk retention structure.”<sup>27</sup> The evidence at the Trial revealed that ALF (which has recently been renamed), now, has three equity owners: (i) a 49% equity owner that is a charitable fund (i.e., a donor advised fund or “DAF”) that was seeded with contributions from Highland, is managed/advised by Highland, and whose independent trustee is a long-time friend of Highland’s chief executive officer, Mr. Dondero; (ii) 2% is owned by Highland employees; and (iii) finally, ALF may be 49% owned by a third-party institutional investor based in Boston that Highland believed it was required to keep anonymous at the Trial. Not only is the court unaware of who this independent third-party is, but the evidence seems to suggest that it may have acquired its interest fairly recently or may have simply committed to invest recently.<sup>28</sup> issued, the CLO manager would need to retain at least 5% or $20 million of the assets in the CLO (which 5% could be either all at the equity level or vertically, up and down the note tranches). There are multiple ways to accomplish this 5% retention (i.e., with either the CLO manager directly investing in at least 5% of the CLO or doing it through a controlled subsidiary). This particular rule was announced in December 2014 and the SEC thereafter issued a no action letter stating that if a CLO was issued prior to December 2014, then any refinancing of such CLO that happens within four years can be done without risk retention in place. Resets of any CLO (i.e., changes in terms and maturity—as opposed to mere changes in interest rates), on the other hand, must have risk retention in place. Four of Acis LP’s current CLOs were issued prior to December 2014. Thus, these four CLOs are still technically able to do a refinancing without a risk retention structure in place. In any event, by early-to-middle 2017, Acis LP was risk retention compliant. Exh. 82, pp. 65-69 & 75. That was recently changed—on October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award—as later explained herein.

<sup>28</sup> See Exh. 173, which seems to suggest that the only equity owners of ALF just prior to October 24, 2017 were Acis LP and the DAF, until Acis LP’s interest in ALF was sold back to ALF on October 24, 2017. See also Exh. 82, p. 162, lines 2-7.

- (f) The underwriter for the CLO notes. As with any publicly traded notes, there is an underwriter for the CLO notes which solicits investors for the CLO notes (examples given at the Trial: Mizuho Securities USA, LLC; Merrill Lynch; JP Morgan Chase).<sup>29</sup> The CLO notes are traded on the Over-the-Counter Market.
- (g) The independent indenture trustee for the CLO notes. As also with any issuance of publicly traded notes, there is an indenture trustee (example given at the Trial: U.S. Bank).<sup>30</sup>

26. Mr. Terry, the Petitioning Creditor, as earlier mentioned, began working for Highland in 2005 until his employment was terminated on June 9, 2016.

27. Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC have never had any employees. Rather, all employees that work for any of the Highland family of companies (including Mr. Terry) have, almost without exception, been employees of Highland itself. Highland has approximately 150 employees in the United States. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC, through both the mechanism of: (a) a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called),<sup>31</sup> which provides “back office” personnel—such as human resources, accounting, legal and information technology to the Highland family of companies; and (b) a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called),<sup>32</sup> which provides “front office” personnel to entities—such as the managers of investments like Mr. Terry. The evidence indicated that this is typical in the CLO industry to have such agreements. The court notes that all iterations of the Shared Services Agreements and Sub-Advisory Agreements between Acis LP and Highland were signed by Mr. Dondero both as President of Acis LP and as President of the General Partner of Highland.

28. Because Acis LP essentially subcontracts out all of its functions to Highland pursuant to the Shared Services Agreement and the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Acis LP has very few vendors or creditors. Rather Highland incurs expenses and essentially bills them to Acis LP through these two agreements.<sup>33</sup> In other words, Highland is one of Acis LP's largest and most frequent creditor.

29. The evidence reflected that at all times Mr. Dondero has been the President of both of the Alleged Debtors, and there have been, at all times, very few, if any, other officers. It appears that the only other officer of Acis GP/LLC that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer.<sup>34</sup> It also appears that the only other officer of Acis LP that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer, Mr. Terry as Portfolio Manager, and someone named Patrick Boyce as Secretary at one time.<sup>35</sup>

30. Mr. Dondero testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) and is rarely involved in "nitty gritty negotiations." Sometimes instructions will come to him from the compliance group headed up by Chief Compliance Officer Thomas Surgent. Additionally, he testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week, and much of what he signs is on advice of counsel and he sometimes even delegates to his assistant the authority to sign his name. As set forth above, Mr. Ellington (who did not testify at the Trial)<sup>36</sup> and Mr. Leventon (who did testify at the Trial) are not officers, directors, or employees of the Alleged Debtors. Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-Trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington, although Highland partners can ask him to perform legal services for any of Highland's 2,000 entities.

C. Transfers and Transactions Involving the Alleged Debtors Since the Litigation with Mr. Terry Commenced—and Especially After the Arbitration Award.

31. Below is a listing of some (but not necessarily all) of the transfers and transactions that the Alleged Debtors, Highland, and related parties undertook after the litigation with Mr. Terry commenced.

- (a) Acis LP's Sale to Highland of a "Participation Interest" in its CLO Cash Flow Stream. On October 7, 2016 (approximately one month after the litigation arose among Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors), Acis LP sold to Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow from the CLO Collateral Management Agreements—specifically, it sold a portion of the cash flow it expected to earn from November 2016 to August 2019 (not the full life of the CLOs), for $666,655 cash, plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to <sup>36</sup> Mr. Ellington did testify at a hearing in the bankruptcy court on February 6, 2018—which the parties asked this court to take judicial notice of—and also provided deposition testimony that was submitted into evidence. See Exh. 25.

Acis LP (hereinafter, the “Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland”). Mr. Dondero signed the purchase and sale agreement for both purchaser and seller.<sup>37</sup> Mr. Dondero signed the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland, which accrued interest at 3% per annum. It appears that the $666,665 cash down payment was actually paid, and a payment required on the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland of $3,370,694 on May 31, 2017, was actually made. The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland was payable in three installments, with a $5,286,243 payment required on May 31, 2018, and a $4,677,690 payment required on May 31, 2019. When viewed in complete isolation, this transaction does not necessarily appear problematic. Although there was evidence that Acis LP had been managing the five CLOs for about $10 million per year of fees, some of the recitals in the purchase and sale agreement suggest that there may have been a sound business reason for the transaction and the arbitration panel,<sup>38</sup> viewing this transaction in isolation, did not think it was necessarily problematic or actionable. In any event, Highland is adamant it was a net neutral transaction.

- (b) Transfer of Acis LP’s interest in ALF. Recall that ALF was the entity that held equity (i.e., the subordinated notes) in the CLO special purpose vehicles, and held voting rights and was a capital provider to the overall risk retention structure supporting the CLOs. And Acis LP, in turn, held a 15% indirect interest in ALF. On October 24, 2017 (four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis, LP entered into an agreement with ALF whereby ALF acquired back the shares that Acis LP indirectly held in ALF (966,679 shares) for the sum of $991,180.13.<sup>39</sup> No credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was “toxic” in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.<sup>40</sup> The court finds the testimony about Acis LP’s toxicity in the marketplace to not be credible or at all convincing. For one thing, a new CLO (Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd.) was closed on April 10, 2017 with Acis LP as the portfolio manager. Moreover, Acis LP subcontracts all of its CLO management function to Highland—and there was no evidence to suggest that anyone in the marketplace at this juncture differentiates between Acis LP (whose president is Mr. Dondero) and Highland (whose president is Mr. Dondero). In any event, the October 24, 2017 transaction had the highly consequential effect of making Acis LP “noncompliant” or unable to continue serving as a CLO manager for regulatory purposes for any new CLOs or reset CLOs (or for a refinancing of any of the Highland CLOs that had been created after December 2014)<sup>41</sup> because aspects of the federal Dodd Frank legislation require CLO managers to have “skin in the game” with regard to the CLOs they manage (i.e., they must retain at least 5% of CLOs they manage). Mr. Akada, who testified that he had been involved with the CLO business from the beginning and that the CLO team reported to him (including Mr. Terry before his termination), testified that he had no knowledge of this particular transaction. The document effectuating this transaction was signed by Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer for and on behalf of Acis LP, acting by its general partner, Acis GP/LLC.<sup>42</sup>

- (c) ALF Next Decides to Jettison Acis, LP as its Portfolio Manager and Replace it with a new Highland Cayman Island Entity. On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF.<sup>43</sup> This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.<sup>44</sup>
- (d) The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland is Transferred from Acis LP to Yet Another Highland Cayman Island Entity. On November 3, 2017 (10 days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP assigned and transferred its interests in the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland—which at that point had a balance owing of over $9.5 million—to a Highland Cayman Island entity known as Highland CLO

Management Ltd. which apparently was created sometime recently to be the new collateral manager of the CLOs (in other words, the new Acis LP).<sup>45</sup> The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for Acis LP and Mr. Dondero for Highland and some undecipherable name for Highland CLO Management Ltd.<sup>46</sup> The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to Acis LP, (ii) Acis LP, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland CLO Management Ltd. agrees to step into the collateral manager role if Acis LP will assign to it the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. One more thing: since Acis LP was expected to potentially incur future legal and accounting/administrative fees, and might not have the ability to pay them when due, Highland CLO Management Ltd. agreed to reimburse Acis LP (or pays its vendors directly) up to $2 million of future legal expenses and up to $1 million of future accounting/administrative expenses.<sup>47</sup>

- (e) Various Additional Transactions that further Transitioned CLO Management and Fees Away from Acis LP to Highland Cayman Island Entity. On December 19, 2017—just one day after the Arbitration Award was confirmed with the entry of the Final Judgment—the vehicle that can most easily be described as the Acis LP “risk retention structure” (necessitated by federal Dodd Frank law) was transferred away from Acis LP and into the ownership of Highland CLO

Holdings, Ltd. (yet another Cayman Island entity, incorporated on October 27, 2017<sup>48</sup>).

- (f) In addition to transferring Acis LP's interest in the Acis LP risk retention structure on December 19, 2017, Acis LP also transferred its contractual right to receive management fees for Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. (which had just closed April 10, 2017), which Mr. Terry credibly testified had a combined value of $5 million, to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity, purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a $2.8 million receivable that was owed to Highland under the most recent iteration of the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7.<sup>49</sup> In conjunction with this transfer, Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. then entered into new Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements with Highland.<sup>50</sup>
- (g) Change of Equity Owners of the Alleged Debtors. When Acis LP was first formed, it was owned by one general partner (Acis GP/LLC, with a .1% interest) and it had three limited partners: (a) Dugaboy Investment Trust (a Dondero family trust of which either Mr. Dondero or his sister, Nancy Dondero, have been the Trustee at all relevant times) with a 59.9% interest; (b) Mr. Terry with a 25% interest; and (c) Mr. Akada with a 15% interest. When Acis GP/LLC was formed

(i.e., the .1% owner of Acis LP), its sole member was the Dugaboy Investment Trust. After Mr. Terry was terminated by Highland, his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was forfeited and divided among the two remaining limited partners: Mr. Akada (increasing his interest by 10% up to 25%), and Dugaboy Investment Trust (increasing its interest by 15% up to 74.9%). But, more importantly, on the day after entry of Mr. Terry's Final Judgment (i.e., on December 18, 2017), both Mr. Akada and Dugaboy Investment Trust conveyed their entire limited partnership interests in Acis LP—25% and 74.9%, respectively—to a Cayman Island entity called Neutra, Ltd., a Cayman Islands exempted company. Dugaboy Investment Trust also conveyed its 100% membership interest in Acis GP/LLC to Neutra, Ltd. Mr. Akada testified that he did this on advice of counsel. He also did not dispute that he had made millions of dollars of equity dividends from his equity investment in Acis LP in recent years<sup>51</sup>—which he conveyed away for no consideration on December 18, 2017.

- (h) The Intended Reset of Acis CLO 2014-3. With all of the above maneuverings having been accomplished, Highland was posed to do a reset on Acis CLO 2014-3 in February 2018 (until Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions). The investment bank Mizuho Securities USA, LLC was engaged November 15, 2017<sup>52</sup> and a final offering circular was issued in January 2018<sup>53</sup>—contemplating a reset of Acis CLO 20-14-3 with the recently created Highland CLO Management Ltd.

Identified as the new portfolio manager, rather than Acis LP. The act of implementing a reset on the CLO was not in itself suspect. However, the reset would, of course, have the effect of depriving Acis LP from a valuable asset—an agreement that could realistically be expected to provide millions of dollars of future collateral management fees—coincidentally (or not) just after Mr. Terry obtained his large judgment.

D. Findings Regarding Credibility of Witnesses.

32. The court found the testimony of Mr. Terry to be very credible. He was very familiar with the financial condition of the Alleged Debtors, since he presided over the business of the Alleged Debtors from their inception until June 9, 2016, and has also closely followed publicly available information regarding the companies since his termination. Mr. Terry credibly testified that the Alleged Debtors have never had a significant number of creditors, since most of the Alleged Debtors' vendors are engaged by and send their invoices to Highland, and Highland simply obtains reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors (and other entities in the Highland family), as its in-house lawyers determine is appropriate, through the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement. Thus, Highland should at all times be the Alleged Debtors' main creditor. The court finds that Mr. Terry had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors had only a handful of creditors (maybe four or so) besides him and Highland. The court also finds that Mr. Terry—at the time he filed the Involuntary Petitions—had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors and those controlling them were engaged in an orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value (i.e., transferring assets and rights for less than reasonably equivalent value), which started with intensity after issuance of the Arbitration Award (if not sooner).<sup>54</sup>

33. The court found the testimony of almost all of the witnesses for the Alleged Debtors to be of questionable reliability and, oftentimes, there seemed to be an effort to convey plausible deniability. For example, sometimes business decisions concerning the Alleged Debtors were said to have been made by a “collective,” and other times the in-house Highland lawyers (who, of course, are not themselves officers or employees of Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC) stressed that Mr. Dondero (the president and manager of the two entities) had ultimate decision making authority for them. Meanwhile, Mr. Dondero testified that, while he has decision making authority at Acis LP, he usually delegates to Highland’s in-house lawyers Scott Ellington and Isaac Leventon. He testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week and often must rely on information of others when signing. Additionally, Mr. Dondero (again, the President of each of the Alleged Debtors) testified that he had never even read the Arbitration Award. While Mr. Dondero is the chief executive of a multi-billion dollar international investment company, and naturally has widespread responsibilities and must delegate to and rely upon others including lawyers, this court simply does not believe that he never read the Arbitration Award. The court perceived the animosity between Mr. Dondero and Mr. Terry to be rather enormous and Mr. Dondero even testified (as did others) that the litigation with Mr. Terry was hurting Acis LP and Highland in the CLO marketplace (i.e., no investors or underwriters wanting to be associated with the Acis brand).<sup>55</sup> If that were the case, it strains credulity to suggest Mr. Dondero never even read the Arbitration Award.

---

<sup>54</sup> The court also found that the deposition testimony of Brian Shaw and Rahkee Patel (counsel for Mr. Terry) was also credible and did not demonstrate any bad faith on their parts in filing the Involuntary Petitions on behalf of Mr. Terry.

34. As mentioned earlier, in December 2017, Acis GP/LLC became 100% owned by a Cayman Island entity known as Neutra, Ltd. (whose beneficial owner is a Dondero family trust) and Acis LP became 99.9% owned by Neutra, Ltd. The directors of Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP are provided to it now by an entity known as “Maples Fiduciary Services”—another Cayman Island entity, but the Highland Assistant General Counsel could not remember the names of those directors provided to Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP, except for perhaps one. Mr. Dondero, when questioned about some of the recent transactions pertaining to Acis LP, testified that there were tax reasons—tax lawyers recommended the recent transactions and transfers. No tax lawyers testified. Mr. Dondero also testified that certain transactions were at the directive of the Thomas Surgent group (the Highland chief compliance officer). Neither Mr. Surgent nor anyone else from the compliance group testified.

35. Meanwhile, Mr. Akada, who, while testifying, seemed like a generally lovely person and seemed as knowledgeable as a human being could possibly be on the topic of CLOs generally, had no idea if he was an officer or director of the Alleged Debtors, nor did he know whom its officers were. He could not testify as to the meaning of certain transactions in which Acis LP had engaged in during recent weeks and said that he signed certain documents on advice of counsel. He also could not even testify as to whether Highland was opposing the Involuntary Petitions.

36. Again, there was a lot of plausible deniability at Trial as to the “whos” and “whys” for the recent maneuverings involving the Alleged Debtors assets and rights in the weeks since the Arbitration Award. The one thing that the court was wholly convinced of was that conflicts of interest among Highland and the Alleged Debtors abound, and no one is looking out for the interests of the Alleged Debtors as a fiduciary should.

E. Evidence Regarding the Number of Creditors of the Alleged Debtors.<sup>56</sup>

37. The Alleged Debtors do not dispute Mr. Terry's claim for the purposes of counting creditors under section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. However, Mr. Terry asserts that the Alleged Debtors have fewer than 12 creditors, and the Alleged Debtors dispute this fact. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors initially filed on January 31, 2018, a Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Dondero listing 18 creditors (the "Original Notice of Creditors").<sup>57</sup> The Alleged Debtors subsequently filed on February 5, 2018, a First Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 19 creditors (the "First Amended Notice of Creditors").<sup>58</sup> Finally, the Alleged Debtors filed on March 6, 2018, a Second Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bank. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 20 creditors (the "Second Amended List of Creditors").<sup>59</sup> The following chart summarizes the name, amount, and nature of the 20 creditors listed by the Alleged Debtors in their Second Amended List of Creditors.

---

<sup>56</sup> The court notes that neither Mr. Terry nor the Alleged Debtors attempted to differentiate between the creditors of Acis GP/LLC versus the creditors of Acis LP, but rather presented evidence regarding the collective number of creditors for both of the Alleged Debtors. This seems legally appropriate, since Acis LP is the entity that incurred most of the debt, and ACIS GP/LLC would be liable on such debt as the general partner of Acis LP.

38. First, the court believes it necessary to remove certain insider creditor claims, which are required not to be counted pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>61</sup> This would clearly include Highland (the Alleged Debtors do not dispute this).

39. Additionally, there were certain creditors that filed sworn statements saying they were not creditors of the Alleged Debtors or were subsequently removed from the creditor list by agreement of the Alleged Debtors. These creditors would include Case Anywhere, CSI Global Deposition Services,<sup>62</sup> Elite Document Technology, JAMS, Inc.,<sup>63</sup> Stanton Advisors LLC,<sup>64</sup> and the TASA Group, Inc..<sup>65</sup> Thus, the updated chart now shows 13 creditors of the Alleged Debtors.

40. Next, the court finds that there are certain creditors included in the “Law Firm Vendor” category (e.g., experts, data hosting, document managers, court reporters) that are really creditors of the individual law firms and/or Highland, and that these law firm vendor creditors should not be considered creditors of the Alleged Debtors. For these, there was no evidence of a direct contractual obligation on the part of either the Alleged Debtors or Highland—although the court certainly understands that, when the law firms would retain vendors, they would bill these to either the Alleged Debtors or Highland as an expense to be reimbursed. Most of these were already eliminated with agreement of the Alleged Debtors but, from the remaining list of creditors, this would include David Langford (a Dallas County court reporter).<sup>66</sup> To be clear, while the individual law firm creditors may ultimately have a right to reimbursement for these vendor expenses from Highland (who may then potentially have a right to reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors via the Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements), the court does not find this vendor to have a claim directly against the Alleged Debtors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

41. Next, as to the Stanton Law Firm, the court finds that this creditor should also be removed from the pool of creditors that “count,” for section 303(b) purposes, since this claim appears to be the subject of a “bona fide dispute as to liability or amount,”<sup>67</sup> based on the evidence presented at the Trial. First, there was no engagement letter between either of the Alleged Debtors and the Stanton Law Firm produced.<sup>68</sup> Second, the heavily redacted invoice of the Stanton Law Firm dated October 18, 2016 shows only that it was relating to the “Joshua Terry Matter” and that it was billed to Highland.<sup>69</sup> Third, the Responses and Objections to Mr. Terry’s Notice of Intention to Take Depositions by Written Questions sent to the Stanton Law Firm<sup>70</sup> provides the following responses:

Question No. 11: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management L.P. to the Firm. is liable to the Firm.

Answer: Acis Capital Management L.P.’s debt to the Firm is unknown at this time.

Question No. 12: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management GP, LLC is liable for to the firm?

Answer: Acis Capital Management GP, LLC to the Firm is unknown at this time.

Question No. 13: Is any other party also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management L.P. to the Firm? If so, please state the liable party and portion of Acis Capital Management L.P. debt the other party is liable for to the Firm.

<sup>67</sup> See Credit Union Liquidity Servs., L.L.C. v. Green Hills Dev. Co., L.L.C. (In re Green Hills Dev. Co., L.L.C.), 741 F.3d 651, 655 (5th Cir. 2014) (a claimholder does not have standing to file a petition under section 303(b) if its claim is “the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount”); In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222, 237 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009) (only “a holder of a claim ... that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount” is counted in determining the number of creditors necessary to file an involuntary petition).

<sup>68</sup> Rather, there is only an engagement letter between Lackey Hershman LLP (acting on behalf of its client, Highland) and Stanton Advisors LLC to act as an expert in the Terry litigation. See Exh. 144. As previously noted, the claim of Stanton Advisors LLC was removed from the creditor list by agreement of the Alleged Debtors.

<sup>70</sup> The court notes that these responses were actually signed by James Michael Stanton, attorney for Stanton LLP. See Exh. 139.

Answer: Whether any other party is also liable to the firm for the debt of Acis Capital Management, L.P. is unknown at this time.

Question No. 14: Is any other party also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC to Firm? If so, please state the liable party and portion of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC debt the other party is liable for to the Firm.

Answer: Whether any other party is also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC is unknown at this time. . . .

Question No. 21: Does the Firm currently represent Acis Capital Management, L.P.? If so, please state the representation.

Answer: Based on Acis's assertion that this question calls for information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the Firm cannot answer this question at this time.

Question No. 22: Does the Firm currently represent Acis Capital Management GP, LLC? If so, please state the representation?

Answer: Based on Acis's assertion that this question calls for information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the Firm cannot answer this question at this time. . . .<sup>71</sup>

The court finds that this evidence demonstrates that the claim of the Stanton Law Firm is the subject of a bona fide dispute as to either liability or amount and should not be counted since there is no real way of even knowing who the Stanton Law Firm was engaged by and, thus, whether the Alleged Debtors are even responsible for these alleged legal fees. The court would also specifically refer to the testimony of Mr. Leventon, the in-house lawyer employed by Highland who was in charge of allocating all of the bills that came into Highland's legal invoicing system, where he described a process in which all legal bills relating to the "Terry Matter" would automatically be assigned to the Alleged Debtors, without any real regard to whether the particular law firm had even been engaged by the Alleged Debtors or if whether the representation was actually relating to one of the other parties in the Terry litigation (e.g., Highland, Mr. Dondero, etc.). Accordingly, the court finds that there is a bona fide dispute as to whether the Alleged Debtors are actually liable for the Stanton Law Firm legal fees and that they should not be counted as a creditor for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>72</sup>

42. Thus, it appears, at most, that there are 11 creditors<sup>73</sup> of the Alleged Debtors as set forth in the chart below:

Creditor No.	Creditor Name	Nature of Claim	Total Indebtedness
1	Andrews Kurth	Legal Fees	$211,088.13
2	Case Anywhere, LLC	Law Firm Vendor	$417.20

<sup>72</sup> See also In re CorrLine Int'l, LLC, 516 B.R. 106, 152 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2014) (bankruptcy court found that creditors contained in the alleged debtor's list of creditors with uncertain or unknown amounts could not be counted towards the numerosity requirement of section 303(b)).

<sup>73</sup> The court notes that, in all likelihood, the list of creditors that should be tallied for purposes of section 303(b) may actually be less than 11, because certain of the remaining creditors (i.e., Drexel Limited, Highfield Equities, Inc., Lackey Hershman LLP, and David Simek) received payments during the 90 days preceding the Petition Date—and, thus, arguably should not be counted as creditors pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code (which instructs that transferees of voidable transfers should not be counted). See, e.g., Exh. 124 & Exh. 131. Additionally, certain of the remaining law firm creditors that are owed legal fees are also creditors of Highland and Highland-affiliates, not just the Alleged Debtors. To elaborate, many of these law firm creditors were employed to represent not only the Alleged Debtors, but also Highland and Highland-affiliates, so there may be an actual dispute as to the allocation of these legal fees among Highland and the Alleged Debtors (thus there could be bona fide disputes as to the amounts allocated by Highland's in-house lawyers to the Alleged Debtors). See, e.g., Ex. 123 (McKool Smith, P.C. engagement letter referencing representation of numerous parties) & Exhibit 90 (Reid Collins & Tsai's Answers and Objections to Mr. Terry's Deposition by Written Questions, questions 13 & 14, stating that based upon allocation determinations to be made by Highland, other individuals may be liable for the full amount of the debt including Acis LP, Highland, Mr. Dondero, and Mr. Okada).

43. Finally, on the topic of creditor numerosity, the court further finds that the evidence strongly suggested hurried manufacturing of creditors on the part of the Alleged Debtors and Highland, in order to bolster an argument that having a sole petitioning creditor was legally inadequate in this case.<sup>75</sup> For example, the Klos Declaration and other information, that was provided to State Court 2 and in discovery, only days before the Involuntary Petitions were filed,

<sup>74</sup> Mr. Terry has also argued that certain of the law firm creditors (McKool Smith, P.C., Lackey Hershman, LLP, and Reid Collins & Tsai) are “insiders” that must be excluded from the creditor list pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. While there may be some support in case law for such an argument, Mr. Terry would ultimately need to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the law firms exercised such control or influence over the Alleged Debtors as to render their transactions not at arm’s length. See In re CorrLine Intern., LLC, 516 B.R. 106, 157-58 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2014) (citing to Kepler v. Schmalbach (In re Lemanski), 56 B.R. 981, 983 (Bankr.W.D.Wis.1986)). See also In re Holloway, 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992) (in evaluating whether insider status existed for purposes of evaluating alleged fraudulent conveyance court considered (1) the closeness of the relationship between the transferee and the debtor; and (2) whether the transactions between the transferee and the debtor were conducted at arm’s length). Because there was no evidence suggesting abuse or control by these law firm creditors, nor was there any evidence that would suggest that their dealings with the Alleged Debtors were anything but arm’s length, the court finds that these law firm creditors should not be excluded from the creditor list as “insiders” pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

<sup>75</sup> See the Original Notice of Creditors, the First Amended Notice of Creditors, and the Second Amended Notice of Creditors.

seemed to show only a small number of creditors of Acis LP—Mr. Terry credibly testified that he thought there were less than 12 creditors based on his review of such information, as well as his understanding of the Alleged Debtors’ business. Yet, only a few days later, the Alleged Debtors filed their Original Notice of Creditors, which showed 18 creditors, which was amended twice to add another creditor and then yet another. This simply does not jive in the court’s mind and supports this court’s belief that the Alleged Debtors were scurrying to determine which Highland creditors might cogently be painted as Acis LP creditors—so as to preclude Mr. Terry from being able to file the Involuntary Petitions as the single, petitioning creditor.

F. Evidence Regarding Whether the Alleged Debtors are Generally Not Paying Debts as They Become Due (Unless Such Debts are the Subject of a Bona Fide Dispute as to Liability or Amount).

44. The evidence submitted reflects that, for the 11 creditors identified above, 9 out of 11 have unpaid invoices that were more than 90 days old. The remaining 2 of the 11 were McKool Smith, P.C. (current counsel for the Alleged Debtors) and the Petitioning Creditor.<sup>76</sup> The court makes findings with regard to each of the 11 creditors below—focusing specifically on whether the Alleged Debtors have been paying these creditors as their debts have become due.

45. First, with regard to Andrews Kurth & Kenyon (“AKK”), the evidence reflected that out of the $211,088.13 allegedly owed by Acis LP to AKK, the great majority of it—$173,448.42—was invoiced on November 16, 2016<sup>77</sup> (more than 14 months before the Petition Date). Other, smaller amounts were invoiced on a monthly basis in each of the months August 2017, September 2017, October 2017, November 2017, and December 2017. Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for AKK was produced and AKK represented in written discovery that, to its knowledge, none existed.<sup>78</sup> The court notes anecdotally that AKK's invoices (although allegedly related to Acis LP legal matters) were addressed to Highland.<sup>79</sup> In any event, AKK represented that both the Alleged Debtors and Highland are jointly and severally liable for the fees owed to it.<sup>80</sup> AKK also represented that, to its knowledge, the amounts owing to it by Acis LP and Highland are not disputed.<sup>81</sup> AKK also represented that it has not provided legal work on a contingency basis for the Alleged Debtors or Highland.<sup>82</sup> The court makes a logical inference that AKK expected timely payment of its invoices—the largest of which was dated more than 14 months prior to the Petition Date—and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

46. Next, with regard to Drexel Limited, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $6,359.96 indebtedness (which is a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

47. Next, with regard to Highfield Equities, Inc., the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $2,510.04 indebtedness (which is also a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

48. Next, with regard to the Jones Day law firm, the $368.75 indebtedness owed to it is well more than 90 days old. Specifically, there is a six-and-a-half-month old invoice dated July 19, 2017 invoice in the amount of $118.75, and two five-month old invoices dated August 30, 2017 (both in the amount of $150).<sup>83</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Jones Day expected timely payment of its invoices prior to the Petition Date and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

49. Next with regard to the Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, the court notes that his liquidated claim in the amount of $8,060,827.84 first arose with the final Arbitration Award on October 20, 2017 (although such award was not confirmed by State Court 2 until December 18, 2017). The judgment was unstayed as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date, although the Alleged Debtors state that they still desire to appeal it—as difficult as that is in the situation of an arbitration award. The court makes a logical inference that the Alleged Debtors had, on the Petition Date, no intention of paying this claim any time soon based on their conduct after the Arbitration Award—although the Arbitration Award had only been in existence for three-and-a-half months as of the Petition Date. The cash in the Alleged Debtors’ bank accounts is wholly insufficient to cover the Arbitration Award and, meanwhile, corporate transactions have been ongoing to ensure that no cash streams will be coming into Acis LP in the future in the same way that they have in the past. Thus, this court finds that this large claim, as of the Petition Date, was not being paid timely.

50. Next with regard to KPMG LLP, the $34,000 indebtedness owed to it was for the service of auditing Acis LP’s financial statements, pursuant to an engagement letter with it dated March 1, 2017.<sup>84</sup> KPMG’s engagement letter reflected a $40,000 flat fee was agreed to by Acis LP for the service, of which 40% was due October 2017 (i.e., $16,000), with another 45% was due in January 2018 ($18,000), and the remaining 15% would be due at the time that a final bill was sent. Acis LP has only paid $6,000 of the agreed upon amount—meaning $28,000 was overdue as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date (with $10,000 of that being four months past due). The court makes a logical inference that KPMG LLP expected payment of its audit fees in accordance with its engagement letter and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

51. Next with regard to Lackey Hershman LLP, the $236,977.54 indebtedness owed to it was for legal services provided to the Alleged Debtors and Highland in connection with the arbitration and litigation with Mr. Terry. No engagement letter was provided, but the invoices for their services are all directed to Highland.<sup>85</sup> The evidence reflected that three invoices had not been paid as of the Petition Date: an October 31, 2017 invoice in the amount of $56,909.53; a November 30, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $84,789.83; and a December 31, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $95,278.18.<sup>86</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Lackey Hershman LLP expected prompt payment on its invoices (if nothing else, the statement on its invoice indicating “Total now due”)<sup>87</sup> and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

52. Next with regard to Reid Collins & Tsai LLP, the $17,383.75 indebtedness owed to it was billed in an invoice dated August 31, 2017, indicating an August 31, 2017 “Due Date” (five months before the Petition Date).<sup>88</sup> Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for this firm was produced and Reid Collins & Tsai LLP in fact represented in written discovery that none existed.<sup>89</sup> Moreover, written discovery propounded on the law firm indicated that, while Acis LP was liable on this debt, other parties including Acis GP/LLC, Highland, Mr.

Dondero, the Dugaboy Trust, and Mr. Akada might also be liable for the full amount of the debt—subject to Highland’s allocation determinations.<sup>90</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that Reid Collins & Tsai LLP generally has not been paid timely.

53. Next with regard to CT Corporation and the $517.12 indebtedness that the Alleged Debtors represent is owed, CT Corporation asserts that $4,074.84 is, in fact, owed to it by Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.<sup>91</sup> CT Corporation also believes Highland has liability for the Alleged Debtors’ indebtedness.<sup>92</sup> CT Corporation also believes the amount owed to it is undisputed.<sup>93</sup> CT Corporation further represents that its invoices are due upon receipt.<sup>94</sup> CT Corporation produced several invoices in discovery, all showing due upon receipt, and one was dated as far back as December 31, 2016 (in the amount of $932).<sup>95</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that CT Corporation expected prompt payment on its invoices and, thus, has not been paid timely.

54. Next with regard to David Simek, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that his $1,233.19 indebtedness (which is apparently an expense reimbursement relating to some consulting) is not past-due.

55. In summary, the evidence reflects that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors are generally not being paid timely (except for perhaps four that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment).<sup>96</sup>

56. Further on the topic of timeliness, Mr. Leventon (Highland's in-house Assistant General Counsel) testified that 96% of bills submitted get paid more than 90 days after they are submitted, that approximately 70% of bills are later than 120 days after they are submitted, and some are even later than 150 days. Mr. Leventon testified that this was a result of Acis LP receiving cash on a quarterly basis from the CLOs. He further elaborated and testified that, for example, if Acis LP got cash on say February 1st, and it received a legal bill on that same day, that he would probably not approve it and allocate it until say February 8th. By that time, Acis LP would have already used up all its cash, and that particular creditor would need to wait until the next quarterly payment was received in order to be paid. He further testified that he explained this to law firms before their engagements and that, if they wanted the business, they would need to understand the process. There are several things the court finds problematic about this testimony. First, no testimony was offered showing that this was, in fact, the understanding of the law firms or other creditors, and, moreover, none of the engagement letters or invoices submitted into evidence reflect such payment terms. Without this additional evidence, the court believes that the Alleged Debtors' testimony regarding how it paid invoices was mostly self-serving and did not support a finding that the Alleged Debtors were generally paying their debts

<sup>96</sup> Courts have also held that a debtor is generally not paying its debts as they become due when a debtor is found to have been transferring assets so as to avoid paying creditors. See, e.g., In re Moss, 249 B.R. 411, 423 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000) (bankruptcy court determined that an alleged debtor was not paying its debts as they came due when the alleged debtor "attempted to delay creditors through the transfers of assets she has made," concluding that "[the alleged debtor's] overall conduct of her financial affairs has been poor"). This court has also found that there may have been significant transfers of the Alleged Debtors' assets prior to the filing of the Involuntary Petitions to potentially avoid paying creditors (i.e., Mr. Terry) and this may provide further support for the court's finding that the Alleged Debtors are generally not paying their debts as they become due under section 303(h).

as they became due.<sup>97</sup> Second, to the extent Mr. Leventon's testimony demonstrates that creditors of the Alleged Debtors expected to be paid on a quarterly basis (at the latest), certain of the remaining 11 creditors have debts that are significantly older than four months (i.e., CT Corporation, Jones Day, AKK, and possibly even Reid Collins & Tsai LLP). Third, the Financial Statements of Acis LP submitted into evidence do not support the notion that the cash balances at Acis LP were only sufficient enough to pay vendors once every quarter.<sup>98</sup> For example, the balance sheet for January 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $1,061,663.19; the balance sheet for February 28, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $905,212.36; the balance sheet for March 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $525,626.59; the balance sheet for April 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $117,885.96; the balance sheet for May 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $62,733.31; the balance sheet for June 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $10,329.15; the balance sheet for July 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $701,904.39; the balance sheet for August 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $332,847.05.<sup>99</sup> In summary, while there may be cash fluctuations with Acis LP, there is not a clear pattern of Acis LP being only able to pay vendors once every quarter.

S.D.N.Y. 1980) (bankruptcy court found that evidence showing that the petitioning creditor gave the debtor generous terms of payment (90 days) which were substantially better than the terms set forth in the actual writings between the parties supported finding that the alleged debtors were generally paying debts as they became due and that the involuntary petition must be dismissed).

II. Conclusions of Law

Section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the various requirements for initiating an involuntary bankruptcy case. First, pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, an involuntary case may be filed against a person by the filing with the bankruptcy court of a petition under Chapter 7—

(1) by three or more entities, each of which is either a holder of a claim against such person that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount ... [that] aggregate at least $15,775 more than the value of any lien on property of the debtor securing such claims held by the holders of such claims;

(2) if there are fewer than 12 such holders, excluding any employee or insider of such person and any transferee of a transfer that is voidable under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724(a) of this title, by one or more of such holders that hold in the aggregate at least $15,775 of such claims . . .<sup>100</sup>

Thus, if there are twelve or more eligible creditors holding qualified claims on the Petition Date, three or more entities must participate in the involuntary filing and must hold unsecured claims aggregating $15,775.00. If there are less than twelve creditors, a single creditor with an unsecured claim of $15,775.00 may file the involuntary petition. To the extent a bankruptcy court finds that the requisite number of petitioning creditors have commenced the involuntary case, the court shall order relief against the debtor under the chapter under which the petition was filed only if “the debtor is generally not paying such debtor’s debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount.”<sup>101</sup>

Here, as noted earlier, the Alleged Debtors have made four arguments as to why an order for relief should not be entered against the Alleged Debtors: (1) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors, and, thus, with Mr. Terry being the sole petitioning creditor, the Involuntary Petitions were not commenced by the requisite number of creditors; (2) the Alleged Debtors are generally paying their debts as they become due; (3) the Involuntary Petitions were filed in bad faith by Mr. Terry; (4) the interests of creditors and the debtors would be better served by dismissal and the court should abstain pursuant to section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code.

A. Have the Requisite Number of Creditors Commenced the Involuntary Proceedings?

Pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, a sole petitioning creditor holding at least $15,775 in claims can initiate an involuntary bankruptcy case so long as the alleged debtors have fewer than 12 creditors. After the Second Amended List of Creditors was filed, Mr. Terry had the burden, by a preponderance of the evidence, of showing that the Alleged Debtors actually had less than 12 qualified creditors.<sup>102</sup> Here, the court has found that the Alleged Debtors have, at most, 11 qualified creditors.<sup>103</sup> Accordingly, Mr. Terry has met his burden of showing that the Alleged Debtors have less than 12 creditors for section 303(b) purposes, and that he, as the sole petitioning creditor, was permitted to file the Involuntary Petitions. While Mr. Terry has made additional arguments as to why certain of these 11 creditors should not be counted as creditors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, the court does not believe it necessary to address these arguments at this time.<sup>104</sup>

<sup>103</sup> To be clear, the court believes that even on these 11, there are likely bona fide disputes as to the liability or amount that Acis LP has—as opposed to the liability or amount that Highland or other insiders bear responsibility.

<sup>104</sup> Moreover, as previously stated, since the court has determined there are fewer than 12 creditors, the court need not address whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the statutory requirements of section 303, in situations where an alleged debtor may have engaged in fraud, schemes, or artifice to thwart a creditor or creditors. See, e.g., In re Norriss Bros. Lumber Co., 133 B.R. 599 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991); In re Moss, 249 B.R. 411 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000); In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009).

B. Are the Alleged Debtors Generally Paying Their Debts as They Become Due?

Section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code requires that a court shall enter order for relief in an involuntary case “if ... (1) the debtor is generally not paying such debtor's debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount . . . .”<sup>105</sup> Again, the burden is on the Petitioning Creditor to prove this element by a preponderance of the evidence.<sup>106</sup> The determination is made as of the filing date of the Involuntary Petitions.<sup>107</sup> In determining whether an alleged debtor is generally paying its debts as they come due, courts typically look to four factors: (i) the number of unpaid claims; (ii) the amount of such claims; (iii) the materiality of the non-payments; and (iv) the nature of the debtor's overall conduct in its financial affairs.<sup>108</sup> No one factor is more meritorious than another; what is most relevant depends on the facts of each case.<sup>109</sup> Courts typically hold that “generally not paying debts” includes regularly missing a significant number of payments or regularly missing payments which are significant in amount in relation to the size of the debtor's operation.<sup>110</sup>

Furthermore, any debt which the alleged debtor is not current on as of the petition date should be considered as a debt not being paid as it became due.<sup>111</sup>

Here, the court concludes that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors—what few there are—are generally not being paid as their debts have become due (except for perhaps four<sup>112</sup> that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment). Mr. Terry has met his burden by a preponderance of the evidence as to section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code.

C. With the Section 303 Statutory Requirements Being Met by the Petitioning Creditor, Should the Court, Nonetheless, Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Because They Were Filed in Bad Faith?

Despite Mr. Terry meeting the necessary statutory requirements for this court to enter orders for relief as to the Alleged Debtors pursuant to section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Alleged Debtors have argued that the Involuntary Petitions must, nonetheless, be dismissed because they were filed in “bad faith” by Mr. Terry. As support for this argument, the Alleged Debtors rely primarily on the Third Circuit’s decision in In re Forever Green Athletic Fields, Inc., 804 F.3d 328 (3d Cir. 2015). While the court certainly acknowledges that authority exists in other circuits that suggests that dismissal of an involuntary bankruptcy case may be appropriate—even when section 303’s statutory requirements have been met—based upon an independent finding of “bad faith,” the court need not ultimately decide the efficacy or applicability of such authority, because the court does not believe that the evidence demonstrated any “bad faith” on the part of Mr. Terry (or his counsel) in filing the Involuntary Petitions. Indeed, the evidence suggested that Mr. Terry and his counsel filed the Involuntary Petitions out of a legitimate concern that Highland was dismantling and denuding Acis LP of all of its assets and value and that a bankruptcy filing was the most effective and efficient way to preserve value for the Acis LP creditors. The court concludes that Mr. Terry was wholly justified in pursuing the Involuntary Petitions.

N.D. Tex. 2009) (while the debtor was paying small recurring debts, he was not paying 99 percent of his debts in the aggregate amount and thus was not generally paying his debts as they became due).

D. Should This Court, Nonetheless, Abstain and Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Pursuant to Section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code?

Section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that:

- (a) The court, after notice and a hearing, may dismiss a case under this title, or may suspend all proceedings in a case under this title, at any time if—
 (1) the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by such dismissal or suspension; . . .<sup>113</sup>

Courts construing section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code have found that abstention in a properly filed bankruptcy case is an extraordinary remedy.<sup>114</sup> Moreover, granting an abstention motion pursuant to section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires more than a simple balancing of harm to the debtor and creditors; rather, the interests of both the debtor and its creditors must be served by granting the request to abstain.<sup>115</sup> The moving party bears the burden to demonstrate that dismissal benefits the debtor and its creditors.<sup>116</sup> Courts must look to the individual facts of each case to determine whether abstention is appropriate.<sup>117</sup>

Case law has set forth a litany of factors to be considered by the court to gauge the overall best interests of the creditors and the debtor for section 305(a)(1) purposes:

- (1) the economy and efficiency of administration;
- (2) whether another forum is available to protect the interests of both parties or there is already a pending proceeding in state court;
- (3) whether federal proceedings are necessary to reach a just and equitable solution;
- (4) whether there is an alternative means of achieving an equitable distribution of assets;
- (5) whether the debtor and the creditors are able to work out a less expensive out-of-court arrangement which better serves all interests in the case;
- (6) whether a non-federal insolvency has proceeded so far in those proceedings that it would be costly and time consuming to start afresh with the federal bankruptcy process; and
- (7) the purpose for which bankruptcy jurisdiction has been sought.<sup>118</sup>

While all factors are considered, not all are given equal weight in every case and the court should not conduct a strict balancing.<sup>119</sup>

i. Factor 1: The Economy and Efficiency of Administration.

Colo. 2001) (applied a four criteria test in evaluating section 305 abstention which included: (1) the motivation of the parties who sought bankruptcy jurisdiction; (2) whether another forum was available to protect the interests of both parties or there was already a pending proceeding in state court; (3) the economy and efficiency of administration; and (4) the prejudice to the parties). The Alleged Debtors cite to the case of In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), in particular, as support for why this court should abstain under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions. However, in Murray, Judge Gerber was analyzing dismissal of an involuntary proceeding pursuant to section 707 of the Bankruptcy Code, more specifically for “cause,” and not based upon abstention under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. Thus, the court is not convinced Murray is relevant to this court’s section 305 abstention analysis.

The economy and efficiency of administering a case in the bankruptcy court is routinely evaluated in considering abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code. Here, the evidence suggests that the most economical and efficient forum for these parties to resolve their disputes is the bankruptcy court. The court heard ample evidence that the Alleged Debtors are already, essentially, in the process of being liquidated by Highland. This is not a situation where an ably-functioning, going-concern business is being foisted in disruptive fashion into a bankruptcy.<sup>120</sup> Because of the fact that the Alleged Debtors are already in the process of being liquidated, the bankruptcy court (and not a state court) is the most efficient and economical forum to complete this liquidation and distribute whatever assets remain to creditors in accordance with the distribution scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code and with the oversight of a neutral third-party trustee. Thus, with the bankruptcy court being the more economic and efficient forum for administering this case, this factor goes against abstention.

- ii. Factors 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6: Whether Another Forum is Available to Protect the Interests of Both Parties or There is Already a Pending Proceeding in State Court; Whether Federal Proceedings are Necessary to Reach a Just and Equitable Solution; Whether There is an Alternative Means of Achieving an Equitable Distribution of Assets; Whether the Debtor and the Creditors are Able to Work Out a Less Expensive Out-of-Court Arrangement Which Better Serves All Interests in the Case; and Whether a Non-Federal Insolvency Has Proceeded so Far in Those Proceedings That it Would Be Costly and Time Consuming to Start Afresh With the Federal Bankruptcy Process.

<sup>120</sup> See, e.g., In re The Ceiling Fan Distrib., Inc., 37 B.R. 701 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1983) (noting that while the dissection of a living business may not properly be the business of a bankruptcy court, the division of a “carcass” and the reclamation of pre-petition gouging may well be); In re Bos, 561 B.R. 868, 898-99 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 2016) (citing as one of the reasons to abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code the fact that entities and subsidiaries under the alleged debtor’s umbrella were still operating successful businesses and had employed more than 500 people); but see Remex Elecs. Ltd. v. Axl Indus., Inc. (In re Axl Indus., Inc.), 127 B.R. 482, 484-86 (S.D. Fla. 1991) (in affirming the bankruptcy court’s decision to dismiss an involuntary bankruptcy case, the district court also found that “the interests of a defunct business enterprise would be little affected by the pendency of a bankruptcy proceeding,” which the district court believed favored abstention).

The court believes that factors 2-6 should be grouped together for purposes of its abstention analysis, since all of these factors specifically touch on the availability of an alternative forum to achieve an equitable distribution.<sup>121</sup> By way of example, where bringing a case into the bankruptcy court would simply add an additional layer of expense to the resolution of a two-party dispute and another forum already provides a suitable place to resolve the dispute, some courts have found that abstention is the more appropriate choice since keeping the case would transform the bankruptcy process into a collection device.<sup>122</sup> Here, the Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that, because there is already pending state court litigation involving Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors, these cases should be dismissed and the parties should go back to state court to resolve their issues. The court does not agree for several reasons.

First, it is worth noting that this court has already heard multiple days of evidence in this case (including almost five days just for the Trial) and would certainly not be “starting afresh” by any means if things go forward in the bankruptcy court. Additionally, while the Alleged Debtors have argued that a significant amount of attorney’s fees have already been spent litigating this case in state court (which they believe supports abstention), the court surmises that these fees have not been wasted dollars, as the money expended by the parties developed discovery of facts that could assist a bankruptcy trustee in pursuing avoidance actions that may be viable and might lead to value that could pay creditors’ claims.<sup>123</sup>

<sup>123</sup> See, e.g., The Ceiling Fan Distributor, Inc., 37 B.R. at 703 (the court noted that, despite there being significant legal expenses in the state court, such expenses were not wasted since the legal work done to date would be quite helpful to a trustee).

Second, this court heard considerable evidence involving potentially voidable transfers that may have occurred involving the Alleged Debtors and Highland/Highland-affiliates and, while the state court certainly provides a forum for eventually bringing fraudulent transfer claims, the court also heard evidence that none of these claims have actually been brought in the state court.<sup>124</sup> Moreover, to the extent fraudulent transfer claims were to be pursued in state court and were successful, the state court would still need the ability to reach the assets of alleged fraudulent transfer recipients (which, in this situation, include certain Highland-affiliates located in the Cayman Islands). The bankruptcy court has concerns whether a state court process could efficiently accomplish this task.<sup>125</sup> Similarly, it is worth noting that, while a request for a receiver was filed in the state court by Mr. Terry, such request had not yet been heard and decided by the state court. Thus, at the present time, it does not appear that there is an alternative forum to address the pertinent issues in this case, without the necessity of significant, additional steps being taken by the parties in the state court.

Third, this court believes that a federal bankruptcy proceeding is necessary in order to achieve an equitable result in this case. Specifically, the court heard evidence from the Alleged Debtors that, if this court chose to abstain and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions, the Alleged Debtors would ultimately pay all of their creditors in full, except for Mr. Terry. This clearly demonstrates how keeping the case in the bankruptcy court is necessary to allow an equitable distribution to all creditors, including Mr. Terry. Additionally, a federal bankruptcy court has certain tools available to it that are not available to a state court such as the ability to invalidate potential ipso facto clauses in contracts pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, sell assets free and clear of liens, claims and encumbrances pursuant to section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, and impose the automatic stay pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code. These are all useful tools available to the Alleged Debtors in a bankruptcy case that would be lost if this court were to ultimately abstain.

Finally, there was more than enough evidence showing the acrimonious and bitter relationship that exists between Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero. Thus, the availability of an out-of-court arrangement being obtained in this case is, in this court's mind, slim to none.

In summation, the court finds that all of the factors above support this case staying with the bankruptcy court.

iii. Factor 7: The Purpose for Which Bankruptcy Jurisdiction Has Been Sought.

The Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that Mr. Terry filed this case in bad faith and as a litigation tactic to gain some sort of advantage in the state court proceedings. The court has already found above that these cases were not filed in bad faith and that Mr. Terry has met the necessary statutory requirements of section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code. Moreover, it is worth noting that at least one court has stated that the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition is always a "litigation tactic," but whether the filing is inappropriate for abstention purposes is a fact-dependent determination.<sup>126</sup> Here, the facts show that there was no inappropriateness <sup>126</sup> In re Marciano, 459 B.R. 27, 50 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2011) (noting that while the filing of the involuntary bankruptcy was a litigation tactic, the bankruptcy court did not abuse its discretion in denying the alleged debtor's motion to dismiss based upon the bankruptcy court's primary concern that the issue of equality of distribution would not effectively be dealt with in another forum).

behind Mr. Terry's decision to file the Involuntary Petitions. Specifically, Mr. Terry repeatedly and credibly testified that the purpose for filing the Involuntary Petitions was to ensure that creditors (including him) were treated fairly and received an equal distribution from the Alleged Debtors' assets, not to gain some sort of advantage in the state court. This testimony was absolutely consistent with additional evidence showing that, since the entry of the arbitration award, there has been a calculated effort (largely by Highland) to effectively liquidate the Alleged Debtors. Unlike the bankruptcy court in In re Selectron Mgmt. Corp.,<sup>127</sup> which had no evidence or "smoking gun" showing that steps were being taken by the alleged debtor to evade payment on the petitioning creditor's judgment, thereby necessitating abstention, this court has heard ample evidence showing that the Alleged Debtors, with the aid of Highland, were transferring assets away from the Alleged Debtors, so that Mr. Terry would have nowhere to look at the end of the day.

In light of the court's analysis of all the seven factors above, the Alleged Debtors have not credibly shown how both the Alleged Debtors and the creditors are better served outside of bankruptcy. If this matter were to remain outside of bankruptcy, there seems to be a legitimate prospect that the Alleged Debtors and Highland will continue dismantling the Alleged Debtors, to the detriment of Acis LP creditors. Abstention would fly in the face of fundamental fairness and the principles underlying the Bankruptcy Code.

Beyond just addressing the factors above, the Alleged Debtors have also argued that, if this court were to not abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, there would be significant harm to the “equity” of the Alleged Debtors. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors have argued that, if this court were to enter orders for relief, the equity would be forced to “call” and ultimately liquidate CLO 2014-3 (and perhaps all of the CLOs Acis LP manages), resulting in substantial losses to the equity on their investments. First, to be clear, the current equity of the Alleged Debtors is being held by a Highland-affiliate called Neutra, Ltd., which actually only became the equity of the Alleged Debtors on December 19, 2017. But this is not the “equity” being referred to by the Alleged Debtors in its argument. Rather, the so-called “equity,” about which the Alleged Debtors seemed so concerned, is actually certain parties that own the equity of the entity that owns the equity in the CLOs—which includes (a) an unnamed third-party investor out of Boston (49%),<sup>128</sup> (b) a charitable foundation managed by a Highland-affiliate (49%), and (c) Highland employees (2%). However, abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code does not require this court to look at what is in the best interests of these third-parties (who are not current creditors or interest holders of the Alleged Debtors), but rather what is in the best interests of the Alleged Debtors and the creditors. Accordingly, the Alleged Debtors’ effort to argue potential harm to these parties is misplaced for purposes of evaluating abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, and, if anything, further highlights who the Alleged Debtors are really out to protect—Highland and Highland-affiliates. Moreover, the court would note that, even if there were to be a “call” and liquidation of CLO 2014-3, thereby ending the Alleged Debtors’ right to receive future management fees, there would still be potential assets for a chapter 7 trustee to administer such as chapter 5 causes of action (which include fraudulent transfers) as well as the Alleged Debtors’ contingent claim for approximately <sup>128</sup> Notably, this entity never appeared at the Trial or filed papers stating that it would be harmed by entry of orders for relief in these cases.

$3 million in expense reimbursement owing by Highland CLO Management Ltd., as part of the November 3, 2017 transfer of the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. Thus, even if the so-called doomsday scenario of an equity call on CLO 2014-3 (or other CLOs) were to happen, there is still a potential benefit to creditors if this court chooses not to abstain.

III. CONCLUSION

In conclusion, these involuntary proceedings were appropriately filed under section 303, and orders for relief will be issued forthwith. This court declines to exercise its discretion to abstain, because a chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP, as discussed above. A chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to resolve the inherent conflicts of interest between the Alleged Debtors and Highland. A chapter 7 trustee will have tools available to preserve value that a state court receiver will not have. The bankruptcy court is single handedly the most efficient place to administer property of the estate for creditors. This is not just a two party dispute between Mr. Terry and the Alleged Debtors, and even if it were, dismissal or abstention is clearly not warranted.

OUR ADVISORY SERVICES

Highland provides investment advisory services in several different strategies and types of investment vehicles. Highland makes investment decisions with regard to bank loans, high yield credit, distressed debt, structured products, real assets, and long/short equities. Highland acts as an investment adviser or sub-adviser to structured product vehicles (including but not limited to CLOs and Collateralized Debt Obligations ("CDOs")) ("Structured Product Vehicles"), unregistered investment funds ("Unregistered Investment Funds"), single Client accounts ("Separate Accounts", together with Structured Product Vehicles, Unregistered Investment Funds, "Client Accounts" or "Clients").

TAILORING SERVICES

We tailor our investment advice to the needs of our Clients and are subject to applicable investment restrictions set forth in the governing documents for the applicable Clients.

ITEM 5. FEES AND COMPENSATION

For providing investment advisory services, Highland typically charges Clients a management fee and/or performance fee or carried interest, and other fees as necessary and agreed to (including, but not limited to, expenses related to servicing accounts, such as administration and legal services).

Under appropriate circumstances and where permitted by applicable law, the terms of an investment advisory contract, including fees, terms of payment and performance fees and termination provisions, are negotiable. In negotiating fees, Highland considers various factors, including assets under management, investment objectives, strategies and restrictions, and the resources required to meet investment objectives.

Clients incur brokerage and other transaction costs associated with Highland's management of Client Accounts. Please see the section titled Brokerage Practices of this ADV Part 2 for a discussion of Highland's brokerage practices.

FEE SCHEDULE

The following summary of fees is typically updated in this brochure annually (on or about March 31) and does not reflect subsequent changes unless expressly indicated otherwise. Fees in the below Fee Schedule are annualized.

Product	Management Fee	Performance Fee or Carried Interest	Other Fees
Structured Product Vehicles	From 0.15% to 0.85%	From 0.00% to 20.00%	None
Separate Accounts	From 0.375% to 1.25%	Up to 20.00% over IRR on some accounts	None
Unregistered Investment Funds	From 0.3% to 2.00%	From 0% to 20.00% <sup>1</sup>	None

Certain investment vehicles managed by Highland invest in other investment vehicles managed by Highland or our affiliates. Both investment vehicles may impose management fees, performance fees or other expenses (including administrative fees). This results in greater expense to a Client than if such Client had invested directly in the underlying investment vehicle. Certain companies in which Clients are invested also use the products or services, or invest in investment vehicles, offered by Highland or its affiliates and pay fees or other compensation accordingly.

<sup>1</sup> In limited circumstances where Highland and/or its related parties may agree to bare a disproportionate share of losses, if any, with respect to an account, Highland and/or such applicable related party may contract in advance with such client to receive a performance fee and/or carried interest in excess of 20%.

FOR INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS

Unregistered Investment Funds

As compensation for our advisory services, each Unregistered Investment Fund typically pays Highland management fees that range from 0.3% to 2.00% annually. Management fees are based upon outstanding capital accounts or amounts of committed capital and are deducted quarterly in advance or in arrears depending on the specific fund. For accounts that also provide for incentive compensation, Highland also deducts performance fees or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest ranging from 0% to 20% of returns, which may be after the achievement of a hurdle rate, and which is typically contingent on the manager of the applicable Unregistered Investment Fund eclipsing the high-water mark. In some cases, certain investors in an Unregistered Investment Fund enter into side letter agreements with Highland, under which they may pay a different fee than others based on the terms of their agreement with Highland or may otherwise receive certain additional rights. Upon termination of the applicable Unregistered Investment Fund's advisory agreement, any management fees that have been prepaid are generally returned on a pro-rated basis.

In addition to management fees, performance fees, and brokerage and transaction costs, investors in the Unregistered Investment Funds will indirectly bear the fees and expenses paid by the Unregistered Investment Funds, including custody fees, administration, legal, audit and tax preparation fees, and certain other fees and expenses. Each Unregistered Investment Fund's offering documents include more detailed information about the fees and expenses paid by such Unregistered Investment Fund.

STRUCTURED PRODUCT VEHICLES

As compensation for our advisory services, each Structured Product Vehicle pays Highland management fees ranging from 0.15% to 0.85% annually. Management fees are based on the principal balance of the assets held in the portfolio on defined determination dates. Management fees are established during structuring and remain constant for the duration of the life of the Structured Product Vehicle. Management fees also accrue during a payment period. Highland may also charge performance fees of up to 20% of any remaining interest or principal proceeds after a hurdle rate. Fees are calculated and paid on a quarterly basis by the Trustee in accordance with the governing documents. All fees are paid in arrears on the payment date. In some cases, certain investors in a Structured Product Vehicle pay a different fee than others based upon, without limitation, the size of the investment and Highland's overall relationship with the investors in the vehicles.

In addition to management fees, performance fees, and brokerage and transaction costs, investors in Structured Product Vehicles will indirectly bear the fees and expenses paid by the Structured Product Vehicle, including administration, legal, audit and accounting fees, and certain other fees and expenses. Each Structured Product Vehicle's governing documents include more detailed information about the fees and expenses paid by such Structured Product Vehicle.

SEPARATE ACCOUNTS

For our Separate Accounts, the agreement entered into with Highland will determine the fee structure. Typically, a Separate Account will pay Highland management fees ranging from 0.375% to 1.25% annually. Management fees are based upon the average daily net assets, which may or may not be net of investment leverage. Highland may also collect a performance fee of up to 20% after reaching an internal rate of return ("IRR").

Please see the section titled Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management of this ADV Part 2 for additional information regarding performance fees or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest.

OTHER COMPENSATION

Client Accounts may hold significant positions, individually or collectively, in the securities issued by a company. Accordingly, Highland may have the right to appoint a board member or officer for such company. Highland may appoint an employee or a third party to such position as it sees fit in the best interest of the company and its Clients. Employees are permitted to retain all compensation received for such positions except to the extent contrary to the governing documents for one or more Client Accounts, in which case the proportion of such compensation related to such Client Account(s) will be paid to those Account(s) (generally in proportion to relative assets of the Client Account as of the date paid).

In addition, to the extent permitted by the offering and/or governing documents of the applicable advised accounts, Highland and/or its affiliates receive other fees for services provided to portfolio companies, provided such fees are on arms-length terms. See also Item 10. Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations.

We have established procedures designed to address possible conflicts of interest that such board or officer positions might present, including requiring authorization from the Chief Compliance Officer prior to an officer or employee serving as a board member. As a result of such activities, Highland may acquire confidential information, which may restrict Client Accounts from transacting in certain securities. As a result, we may not initiate a transaction on behalf of Clients which we otherwise might have. Additional information regarding certain conflicts of interest we face is contained in Item 11. Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading.

ITEM 6. PERFORMANCE-BASED FEES AND SIDE-BY-SIDE MANAGEMENT

As described above, certain Clients pay Highland a performance fee or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest. To the extent that Highland charges a performance-based fee, the performance-based fee will comply with the requirements of Section 205 and Rule 205-3 under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the “Advisers Act”). In situations where Highland has entered into a performance fee arrangement, it has an economic incentive to make riskier investments and/or pursue riskier strategies than it might otherwise. In addition, because Highland manages both accounts with an asset-based fee and accounts with a performance fee or a combination of an asset-based fee and performance fee, we have an incentive to favor Client accounts for which we receive a performance-based fee. In addition, Highland and its principals also make investments through a number of proprietary accounts, including Highland Capital Management, L.P. In order to mitigate any such conflicts, Highland has developed allocation procedures that are intended to result in fair and equitable allocation over time. To mitigate any actual or perceived conflicts of interest, allocation of limited offering securities (such as IPOs and registered secondary offerings) to principal accounts that do not include third party investors may only be made after all other Client Account orders for the security have been filled. A more detailed summary of our allocation guidelines is available to Clients or prospective Clients upon request. Additional information regarding certain conflicts of interest we face is contained in Item 11. Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading.

A description of performance-based fees is included in the section titled Fees and Compensation.

ITEM 7. TYPES OF CLIENTS

Our Clients include:

- ❖ Structured Product Vehicles
- ❖ Unregistered Investment Funds
- ❖ Separate Accounts

Investment advice is provided directly to Clients and not individually to investors in a particular Client.

Highland has minimum account requirements for Unregistered Investment Funds, Structured Product Vehicles and Separate Accounts and generally requires a minimum investment of $100,000 to $50 million depending on the structure. Minimum account size may be waived for certain investors at Highland's discretion.

ITEM 8. METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES, AND RISK OF LOSS

The items below are types of investment strategies we currently utilize although we may add or subtract from this list based on various factors including macro-economic conditions.

INVESTMENT STRATEGIES

Bank Loan Strategy

Highland's bank loan strategy seeks to generate attractive absolute returns by opportunistically making investments across the capital structure, with a core focus in senior secured bank loans. The bank loan strategy is long-biased and U.S. focused, but has the ability to invest in Canada and Europe.

The strategy may use hedging investments to manage interest rate, default, currency and systemic risks.

Multi Strategy Credit Strategy

Highland's Multi-Strategy Credit Strategy is focused across the credit markets in both private and public transactions. It seeks to deliver attractive risk-adjusted returns to its investors by investing, directly or through one or more financing or swap vehicles or other arrangements for obtaining leverage, primarily in (i) bank loans; (ii) other high yield debt; (iii) credit default swaps; (iv) debt and equity securities issued by collateralized loan obligations; and (v) special situation investments. It will take long and short positions.

Long/Short Equity Strategy

Highland's long/short equity strategy generally involves a fundamental, bottom-up stock picking style. Investments will be made in value and growth stocks with a domestic focus. The strategy aims to generate equity-like returns over an entire market cycle with less volatility, lower drawdowns, and lower correlation compared to the equity markets. There is generally a strong focus on preservation of capital and risk management. In addition to purchasing or taking "long" positions in equity securities, the strategy will include short selling, investments in derivatives, exchanged-traded funds, or fixed income securities.

Equity securities of U.S. or non-U.S. issuers in which Highland may invest include common stocks, preferred stocks, convertible securities, depositary receipts, warrants to buy common stocks and "derivatives" on any of the foregoing securities. The exposure of the various funds will vary over time based on assessments of market conditions and other factors.

Special Situations Strategy

Highland's special situations strategy employs directional, capital structure arbitrage, relative value, and event-driven investment strategies across various credit markets where Highland holds significant investment experience, primarily the distressed, leveraged loan, high yield and structured products markets. It also utilizes an investment approach to exploit relative value and arbitrage opportunities within these markets. The objective is to maintain low correlation to the broader equity and corporate bond markets, as well as other alternative investment strategies, and to provide attractive risk-adjusted returns on capital. Highland also looks to implement selected trading strategies to exploit pricing inefficiencies across the credit markets and within an individual issuer's capital structure.

Private Equity Strategy

The private equity strategy targets investments in the fulcrum securities of distressed credits based in the U.S. and Western Europe. It seeks to capitalize on the following market dynamics: balance sheets remain over levered and companies continue to address looming maturities, while financing markets are bifurcating between good and bad credits. The strategy generally involves investing in undervalued senior secured loans and debt obligations of financially troubled companies to achieve value recoveries via refinancing, at par take-outs or conversions to equity and thereafter create value through operational and financial improvements. This strategy offers a compelling alternative to equity by providing a different downside risk while seeking positive risk-adjusted returns and upside potential in misunderstood industries and companies.

Floating Rate Loan Strategy

This strategy seeks to achieve its objective by investing, under normal market conditions, approximately 80% of its net assets in a portfolio of interests in adjustable rate senior loans, the interest rates of which float or vary periodically based upon a benchmark indicator of prevailing interests rates, to domestic or foreign corporations, partnerships and other entities that operate in a variety of industries and geographic regions. The strategy may invest all or substantially all of its assets in senior loans that are rated below investment grade and unrated senior loans of comparable quality. This strategy may also include investments in (i) high quality, short-term debt securities; (ii) warrants, equity securities and junior debt securities; (iii) senior loans of foreign issuers that are foreign currency denominated; and (iv) senior loans the interest rate of which are fixed and do not float.

Structured Finance Investments

Highland invests in various structured finance instruments, including asset-backed securities; collateralized loan obligations and collateralized debt obligations; and swaps (including total rate of return swaps) whose rates of return are determined primarily by reference to the total rate of return on one or more loans referenced in such instruments. The rate of return on the structured finance instrument may be determined by applying a multiplier to the rate of total return on the reference loan or loans. Application of a multiplier is comparable to the use of financial leverage, a speculative technique. Leverage magnifies the potential for gain and the risk of loss, because of a relatively small decline in the value of a reference loan could result in a relatively large loss for the value of a structured finance instrument.

METHOD OF ANALYSIS

For all Client Accounts, we utilize both fundamental and technical analysis methods. Our investment philosophy is rooted in a value-oriented, long-term approach, which combines bottom-up research with top-down technical market analysis. Our analysts follow a rigorous and time-tested bottom-up credit analysis for each credit we manage. We have also devised and applied an institutionalized process of credit evaluation and approval, via our Investment Committee, and have built a dedicated experienced restructuring team that has been integrated into Highland's investment process.

Highland's self-discipline is largely enforced by the ongoing monitoring of individual credit names by the responsible analyst and his or her supervisor.

Other sources of information include obtaining and reviewing due diligence packages prepared by debt issuers and underwriters of institutional private placements and meetings with management of issuers.

MATERIAL RISKS OF SIGNIFICANT STRATEGIES AND METHODS OF ANALYSIS:

In this section we summarize some of the material risks of Highland's investment strategies and methods of analysis. More complete information about the specific risks associated with each strategy or Client Account is available in the applicable offering documents. All methods of investments in securities and loans involve risk of loss including risk that a Client will lose the entire value of their investment.

Allocation of Investments

There is a risk that the allocations methodology employed by Highland will not result in optimal allocation and may disadvantage one Client Account while benefiting another Client Account. Since the process involves human input there is the risk that human error may cause harm to a Client Account. Poor or mistaken allocation decisions could result in the loss of money for investors.

Credit Risk

Clients engage in transactions in securities and financial instruments that involve counterparties. Under certain conditions, a counterparty to a transaction could default or the market for certain securities and/or financial instruments may become illiquid. There is a risk that the issuer of a fixed income security will be unable to make timely principal and interest payments on the security. Certain Clients invest in securities rated below investment grade (which are commonly referred to as “high yield” securities or “junk” securities). These investments are regarded as predominately speculative with respect to the issuer’s continuing ability to meet principal and interest payments. The downgrade of a security held by a Client Account may decrease its value. Securities are subject to varying degrees of credit risk, which are often reflected in ratings assigned by commercial rating companies such as Moody’s Investor Service, Standard & Poor’s Corporation, Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. and Fitch Investors Service.

Currency Risk

If a Client Account invests directly in non-U.S. currencies or in securities of issuers that trade in, and receive revenues in, non-U.S. currencies, or in derivatives that provide exposure to non-U.S. currencies, it will be subject to the risk that those currencies will decline in value relative to the U.S. dollar, or, in the case of hedging positions, that the U.S. dollar will decline in value relative to the currency being hedged. Currency rates in foreign countries may fluctuate significantly over short periods of time for a number of reasons, including changes in interest rates, intervention (or the failure to intervene) by U.S. or foreign governments, central banks or supranational entities such as the International Monetary Fund, or by the imposition of currency controls or other political developments in the United States or abroad. As a result, a Client’s investments in foreign currency-denominated securities may reduce the returns of the Client Account.

Derivatives Risk

Derivatives, such as futures and options, are subject to the risk that changes in the value of a derivative may not correlate perfectly with the underlying asset, rate or index. Derivatives also expose the Client to the credit risk of the derivative counterparty. Derivative contracts may expire worthless and the use of derivatives may result in losses to the Client.

Frequency of Trading

Some of the strategies and techniques to be employed by Highland require frequent trades to take place and, as a consequence, portfolio turnover and brokerage commissions will be greater than for other investment vehicles of similar size that do not employ frequent trading techniques.

Hedging

Highland may (but is not required to) utilize financial instruments both for investment purposes and for risk management purposes in order to (i) protect against possible changes in the market value of a Client Account resulting from fluctuations in the markets and changes in interest rates; (ii) protect the unrealized gains in the value of a Client Account; (iii) facilitate the sale of any such investments; (iv) enhance or preserve returns, spreads or gains on any investment in a Client Account; (v) hedge against a directional trade; (vi) hedge the interest rate, credit or currency exchange rate on any of financial instruments; (vii) protect against any increase in the price of any financial instruments Highland anticipates purchasing at a later date; or (viii) act for any other reason that the Highland deems appropriate. For a variety of reasons, Highland may not seek to establish a perfect correlation between such hedging instruments and the portfolio holdings being hedged. Such imperfect correlation may prevent a Client from achieving the intended hedge or expose the Client to risk of loss. The successful utilization of hedging and risk management transactions requires skills complementary to those needed in the selection of portfolio holdings. Moreover, it should be noted that the Client Account will be exposed to certain risks that cannot be hedged.

Illiquid Securities

Highland may cause a Client to invest in a security that is illiquid. This could present a problem in realizing the prices quoted (selling a bond at or near its true value) and in effectively trading the position(s). The primary measure of liquidity is the size of the spread between the bid price and the offer price quoted by a dealer. The greater the dealer spread, the greater the liquidity risk. Liquidity risk is less relevant for investments that are intended to be held until maturity. Lack of liquidity means Highland may not be able to sell such investments at prices that reflect Highland's assessment of their value or the amount paid for such investments. Illiquidity may result from the absence of an established market for the investments as well as legal, contractual or other restrictions on their resale by Highland and other factors. Furthermore, the nature of Highland's investments, especially those in financially distressed companies, may require a long holding period prior to profitability.

Inflation Risk

Inflation risk results from the variation in the value of cash flows from a security due to inflation, as measured in terms of purchasing power. For example, if Highland purchases a 5 year bond in which it can realize a coupon rate of 5 percent, but the rate of inflation is 6 percent, then the purchasing power of the cash flow has declined. For securities other than adjustable bonds or floating rate bonds, the investment is exposed to inflation risk because the interest rate the issuer promises to make is fixed for the life of the security. To the extent that interest rates reflect the expected inflation rate, floating rate bonds have a lower level of inflation risk.

Investments in Distressed Assets

Debt obligations and other securities of distressed companies will by their nature relate to companies in unstable financial condition and entail substantial inherent risks. Consequently, many of these companies will likely have significantly leveraged capital structures, making them highly sensitive to declines in revenues and to increases in expenses and interest rates. The leveraged capital structure of such investments will increase the exposure of the portfolio companies to adverse economic factors such as downturns in the economy or deterioration in the condition of the portfolio company or its industry. Distressed investing also involves significant expenses of legal counsel, experts, consultants and other third parties.

Investments in Equity Securities

Investments in public equities are subject to the risk that stock prices will fall over short or long periods of time. In addition, common stock represents a share of ownership in a company, and rank after bonds and preferred stock in their claim on the company's assets in the event of bankruptcy.

Investments in Foreign Securities

A Client may invest a portion of its assets in securities of companies domiciled or operating in one or more foreign countries. Investing in foreign securities involves considerations and possible risks not typically involved in investing in securities of companies domiciled and operating in the U.S., including instability of some foreign governments, the possibility of expropriation, limitations on the use or removal of funds or other assets, foreign currency risk, changes in governmental administration or economic or monetary policy (in the U.S. or abroad) or changed circumstances in dealings between nations. The application of foreign tax laws (e.g., the imposition of withholding taxes on dividend or interest payments) or confiscatory taxation may also affect investment in foreign securities. Higher expenses may result from investment in foreign securities than would from investment in domestic securities because of the costs that must be incurred in connection with conversion between various currencies and foreign brokerage commissions that may be higher than in the U.S. Foreign securities markets also may be less liquid, more volatile and subject to less governmental supervision than in the U.S., including lack of uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards and potential difficulties in enforcing contractual obligations.

Investments in Structured Finance Instruments

Highland may cause Clients to invest in structured finance instruments. A portion of leveraged loans, high yield debt securities, structured finance instruments and synthetic securities (collectively the “Collateral Debt Obligations”) may consist of equipment trust certificates, collateralized mortgage obligations, collateralized bond obligations, collateralized loan obligations or similar instruments. Structured finance instruments present risks similar to those of the other types of Collateral Debt Obligations in which the Client may invest and such risks may be of greater significance in the case of structured finance instruments. Moreover, investing in structured finance instruments entails a variety of unique risks, including prepayment risk. In addition, the performance of a structured finance instrument will be affected by a variety of factors, including its priority in the capital structure of the issuer thereof, the availability of any credit enhancement, the level and timing of payments and recoveries on and the characteristics of the underlying receivables, loans or other assets that are being securitized, remoteness of those assets from the originator or transferor, the adequacy of and ability to realize upon any related collateral and the capability of the servicer of the securitized assets. Each structured finance instrument to be purchased by a Client must be rated by a rating agency.

Investments in Synthetic Securities

Highland may cause Clients to invest in synthetic securities. In addition to credit risks associated with holding non-investment grade loans and high yield debt securities, with respect to synthetic securities, Highland or its Clients will usually have a contractual relationship only with the counterparty of such synthetic securities, and not the obligor on a reference obligation (the “Reference Obligor”). Such agreement generally stipulates that Highland or its Client will have no right to directly enforce compliance by the Reference Obligor with the terms of the reference obligation (defined herein as the debt security or other obligation upon which the synthetic security is based), nor any rights of set-off against the Reference Obligor, nor have any voting rights with respect to the reference obligation. In addition, in the event of insolvency of the counterparty, the Client will be treated as a general creditor of such counterparty, and will not have any claim with respect to the reference obligation. Consequently, the Client will be subject to the credit risk of the counterparty as well as that of the Reference Obligor. As a result, concentrations of synthetic securities in any one counterparty subject the notes to an additional degree of risk with respect to defaults by such counterparty as well as by the Reference Obligor. Highland will not perform independent credit analyses of the counterparties, any such counterparty, or an entity guaranteeing such counterparty, individually or in the aggregate.

Investments in Senior Secured Loans

Senior secured loans have significant credit risks and material losses may occur. As with other debt obligations, claims and collateral may be difficult to enforce in the event of a default. No assurance can be made that full or significant recovery of principal and/or interest will be received or that any collateral recovered will be marketable or sufficient.

Leverage

When deemed appropriate by Highland and subject to applicable regulations, a Client may use leverage in its investment program, including the use of borrowed funds and investments in certain types of options, such as puts, calls and warrants, which may be purchased for a fraction of the price of the underlying securities while giving the purchaser the full benefit of movement in the market of those underlying securities. While such strategies and techniques increase the opportunity to achieve higher returns on the amounts invested, they also increase the risk of loss. To the extent a Client purchases securities with borrowed funds, its net assets will tend to increase or decrease at a greater rate than if borrowed funds are not used. The level of interest rates generally, and the rates at which such funds may be borrowed in particular, could affect the operating results of the Client. If the interest expense on borrowings were to exceed the net return on the portfolio securities purchased with borrowed funds, the Client's use of leverage would result in a lower rate of return than if the Client were not leveraged.

Maturity Risk

In certain situations, Highland may purchase a bond of a given maturity as an alternative to another bond of a different maturity. Ordinarily, under these circumstances, Highland will make an adjustment to account for the differential interest-rate risks in the two bonds. This adjustment, however, makes an assumption about how the interest rates at different maturities will move. To the extent that the yield movements deviate from this assumption, there is a yield-curve or maturity risk. Another situation where yield-curve risk should be considered is in the analysis of bond swap transactions where the potential incremental returns are dependent entirely on the parallel shift assumption for the yield curve.

Market or Interest Rate Risk

The price of most fixed income securities move in the opposite direction of the change in interest rates. For example, as interest rates rise, the price of fixed income securities fall. If a Client holds a fixed income security to maturity, the change in its price before maturity will have little impact on the Client's performance; however, if the Client has to sell the fixed income security before the maturity date, an increase in interest rates will result in a loss. Senior secured bank loans generally pay interest at rates that are determined periodically by reference to a base lending rate plus a premium. These rates often are re-determined either daily, monthly, quarterly or semi-annually. Recently, domestic and international markets have experienced a period of acute stress starting in the real estate and financial sectors and then moving to other sectors of the world economy. This stress has resulted in unusual and extreme volatility in the equity and debt markets and in the prices of individual investments. These market conditions could add to the risk of short-term volatility of investments.

Options

A Client may use a number of option strategies. Put options and call options typically have similar structural characteristics and operational mechanics regardless of the underlying instrument on which they are purchased or sold. A put option gives the purchaser of the option, upon payment of a premium, the right to sell, and the writer the obligation to buy, the underlying security, commodity, index, currency or other instrument at the exercise price. A call option, upon payment of a premium, gives the purchaser of the option the right to buy, and the seller the obligation to sell, the underlying instrument at the exercise price.

With certain exceptions, exchange listed options generally settle by physical delivery of the underlying security or currency, although in the future cash settlement may become available. Index options are cash settled for the net amount, if any, by which the option is "in-the-money" (i.e., where the value of the underlying instrument exceeds, in the case of a call option, or is less than, in the case of a put option, the exercise price of the option) at the time the option is exercised. Frequently, rather than taking or making delivery of the underlying instrument through the process of exercising the option, listed options are closed by entering into offsetting purchase or sale transactions that do not result in ownership of the new option. The Client's ability to close out its position as a purchaser or seller of a listed put or call option is dependent, in part, upon the liquidity of the option market.

Over-the-counter ("OTC") options are purchased from or sold to securities dealers, financial institutions or other parties ("Counterparties") through direct bilateral agreement with the Counterparty. In contrast to exchange listed options, which generally have standardized terms and performance mechanics, all the terms of an

OTC option, including such terms as method of settlement, term, exercise price, premium, guarantee, and security, are set by negotiation of the parties. Unless the parties provide for it, there is no central clearing or guaranty function in an OTC option. As a result, if the Counterparty fails to make or take delivery of the security, currency or other instrument underlying an OTC option it has entered into with the Client or fails to make a cash settlement payment due in accordance with the terms of that option, the Client will lose any premium it paid for the option as well as any anticipated benefit of the transaction.

If a put or call option purchased by the Client were permitted to expire without being sold or exercised, its premium would be lost by the Client. The risk involved in writing a put option is that there could be a decrease in the market value of the underlying security caused by rising interest rates or other factors. If this occurred, the option could be exercised and the underlying security would then be sold to the Client at a higher price than its current market value. The risk involved in writing a call option is that there could be an increase in the market value of the underlying security caused by declining interest rates or other factors. If this occurred, the option could be exercised and the underlying security would then be sold by the Client at a lower price than its current market value. Purchasing and writing put and call options and, in particular, writing “uncovered” options are highly specialized activities and entail greater than ordinary investment risks.

Short Sales

A Client may sell securities short. Short selling involves the sale of a security that the Client does not own and must borrow in order to make delivery in the hope of purchasing the same security at a later date at a lower price. In order to make delivery to its purchaser, the Client must borrow securities from a third party lender. The Client subsequently returns the borrowed securities to the lender by delivering to the lender the securities it receives in the transaction or by purchasing securities in the open market. The Client must generally pledge cash with the lender equal to the market price of the borrowed securities. This deposit may be increased or decreased in accordance with changes in the market price of the borrowed securities. During the period in which the securities are borrowed, the lender typically retains his right to receive interest and dividends accruing to the securities. In exchange, in addition to lending the securities, the lender generally pays a fee for the use of the Client's cash. This fee is based on prevailing interest rates, the availability of the particular security for borrowing and other market factors.

Valuation of Portfolio Investments

From time to time, special situations affecting the valuation of the investments (such as limited liquidity, unavailability or unreliability of third-party pricing information and acts or omissions of service providers to the Client) could have an impact on the value of a Client's investment, particularly if prior judgments as to the appropriate valuation of an investment should later prove to be incorrect after a net asset value-related calculation or transaction is completed. Generally, Highland is not required to make retroactive adjustments to prior subscription or withdrawal transactions, management fees or performance allocations based on subsequent valuation data. In addition, Highland may, but is not required to, discount the value of its positions due to limited liquidity, concentration levels or for other reasons. Due to the nature of its investments, Highland may not be able to place a precise value on positions and therefore may need to estimate values.

ITEM 9. DISCIPLINARY INFORMATION

On September 25, 2014, Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”) entered into a settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) resulting in the SEC issuing an order. This order resolves the SEC’s allegations that Highland violated Sections 204(a) and 206(3) of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (“Advisers Act”) and Rule 204-2 thereunder by trading securities between its Clients’ accounts and accounts in which Highland and its principals maintained an ownership interest without adhering to certain requirements set forth by the Advisers Act. The transactions occurred between 2007 and 2009, and many were executed in an effort to generate or maintain liquidity for the advised accounts during September and October 2008. Specifically, the order found that, during the relevant time period, Highland engaged in a number of transactions with its Client advisory accounts without disclosing in writing to those Clients that Highland was acting as principal, or obtaining Client consent to the transactions, before the trades were completed. Highland did ultimately receive Client consent for many of the transactions; however, this consent was received after the transactions had settled, and therefore did not comply with the requirements of Advisers Act Section 206(3). In addition, the order found that, during the relevant time period, Highland failed to keep and maintain true, accurate and current certain books and records as required by the Advisers Act.

The order requires Highland to cease and desist from committing or causing any violations and any future violations of Advisers Act Sections 204(a) and 206(3) and Rule 204-2; censures Highland; and requires Highland to pay a civil monetary penalty of $225,000. Highland was also required to comply with certain undertakings, including retaining an independent consultant to conduct a comprehensive review of Highland’s compliance and control systems relating to principal trades, and the creation and retention of its books and records. As of the date hereof, all such undertakings have been successfully completed.

ITEM 10. OTHER FINANCIAL INDUSTRY ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

Highland and its advisory affiliates manage various strategies and some strategies are managed by more than one adviser. For this reason, certain Clients of Highland (or Clients of Highland's advisory affiliates) may be referred to and enter into advisory agreements with such affiliated adviser. Neither Highland nor its advisory affiliates charge a fee for such referral.

Other Highland affiliates may provide insurance related products or services from time to time to Clients and/or portfolio companies and receive arm's length fees for such services. Except in very limited circumstances approved by the Chief Compliance Officer, access persons are not permitted to trade any security of which we or a Client own any portion of the capital structure or that is on our restricted list without permission. Access persons who violate the personal trading policy are reprimanded in accordance with the sanctions provisions outlined in the Code of Ethics. Personal securities transactions are reviewed by the Chief Compliance Officer or his/her designee for compliance with the personal trading policy and applicable SEC rules and regulations.

Prohibition against Insider Trading

Highland forbids any access person from trading, either personally or on behalf of others, including Clients advised by Highland, on material non-public information or communicating material non-public information to others in violation of the law or duty owed to another party. This conduct is frequently referred to as “insider trading”. The concepts of material non-public information, penalties for insider trading, and processes for identifying insider trading are addressed in detail in the Compliance Manual and Code of Ethics.

Reporting Requirements

In compliance with SEC rules, access persons are required to disclose all of their personal brokerage accounts and holdings within 10 days of initial employment with Highland, within 10 days of opening a new account, and annually thereafter. Access persons are also required annually to affirm all reportable transactions from the prior year.

POTENTIAL CONFLICTS

Highland, its affiliates and their respective officers, directors, trustees, stockholders, members, partners and employees and their respective funds and investment accounts (collectively, the “Related Parties”) engage in a broad range of activities, including activities for their own account and for the accounts of Clients. This section describes various potential conflicts that may arise in respect of the Related Parties, as well as how we address such conflicts of interest. The discussion below does not describe all conflicts that may arise.

Any of the following potential conflicts of interest will be discussed and resolved on a case by case basis. Our determination as to which factors are relevant, and the resolution of such conflicts, will be made using our best judgment, but in our sole discretion. In resolving conflicts, we will take into consideration the interests of the relevant Clients, the circumstances giving rise to the conflict and applicable laws. Certain procedures for resolving specific conflicts of interest are set forth below.

Allocation of Investment Opportunities

Highland, together with its affiliated advisors (the “Related Advisors”), acts as investment adviser to Clients that have similar investment objectives and pursue similar strategies. Certain investments identified by the Related Advisors may be appropriate for multiple Clients. Investment decisions for such Clients are made by the applicable Related Advisors in their best judgment, but in their discretion, taking into account such factors as they believe relevant. Such factors may include investment objectives, regulatory restrictions, current holdings, availability of cash for investment, the size of investments generally, risk-return considerations, tax consequences, and limitations and restrictions on a Client’s Account that are imposed by such Client. In addition, if it is fair and reasonable that certain Clients are fully filled of their appetite before others (e.g., for tax considerations, to avoid de minimis partial allocations, to cover or close out an existing position to mitigate risk or losses, etc.), then these Clients may receive full or disproportionate allocations, with the remaining amounts allocated in accordance with normal procedures among the other participating Clients. One or more of the foregoing considerations in this paragraph may (and are often expected to) result in allocations among accounts other than on a pari passu basis. Accordingly, particular investment may be bought or sold for only one Client or in different amounts and at different times for more than one but less than all Clients, even though it could have been bought or sold for other Clients at the same time. Likewise, a particular investment may be bought for one or more Clients when one or more other Clients are selling the investment. In addition, purchases or sales of the same investment may be made for two or more Clients on the same date. There can be no assurance that a Client will not receive less (or more) of a certain investment than it would otherwise receive if the applicable Related Advisors did not have a conflict of interest among Clients.

In effecting transactions, it is not always possible, or consistent with the investment objectives of the Related Advisors' various Clients, to take or liquidate the same investment positions at the same time or at the same prices. Certain investment restrictions may limit the Related Advisors' ability to act for a Client and may reduce performance. Regulatory and legal restrictions (including restrictions on aggregated positions) may also restrict the investment activities of the Related Advisors and result in reduced performance.

The Related Advisors seek to manage and/or mitigate these potential conflicts of interest described by following procedures with respect to the allocation of investment opportunities their Clients, including the allocation of limited investment opportunities. Our allocation policy is based on a fundamental desire to treat each Client Account fairly over time.

In addition to the investment strategies implemented by the portfolio managers for each of our Clients, such portfolio managers may also give trading desk personnel of the adviser general authorization to enter into a limited amount of short-term trades (purchases expected to be sold within 15 business days) in debt instruments on behalf of such Clients. Over time, it is expected that these trades will not exceed 2% of each such Client's assets. Such investments executed by authorized traders are generally allocated on a weighted rotational basis, based on the AUM of the accounts eligible to participate in such investment opportunities.

Investment Negotiation

In order to ensure compliance with Section 17(d) under the Investment Company Act whenever an investment professional proposes to negotiate a term other than price for an investment (including any amendments), he/she must check to see if the investment (or any other position in the issuer's capital structure) is held (or proposed to be invested) in any retail accounts of our advisory affiliates.

If the investment is held in any retail accounts, that person must contact the Chief Compliance Officer for guidance.

- (i) The transaction is generally permitted if all accounts are in the same part of the capital structure and participate in the investment pro rata
- (ii) Alternatively, impose "Chinese Wall" between retail/institutional investment decision-making

One person can negotiate, provided final investment decision still made separately.

May also consult outside counsel and/or the retail board for guidance.

Capital Structure Conflicts

Conflicts will arise in cases when Clients of the Related Advisors invest in different parts of an issuer's capital structure, including circumstances in which one or more Clients own private securities or obligations of an issuer and other Clients may own public securities of the same issuer. In addition, one or more Clients may invest in securities, or other financial instruments, of an issuer that are senior or junior to securities, or financial instruments, of the same issuer that are held by or acquired for, one or more other Clients. If such issuer encounters financial problems, decisions related to such securities (such as over the terms of any workout or proposed waivers and amendments to debt covenants) will raise conflicts of interests. For example, a Client holding debt securities of the issuer may be better served by a liquidation of the issuer in which it may be paid in full, whereas a Client holding equity securities of the issuer might prefer a reorganization that holds the potential to create value for the equity holders.

In the event of conflicting interests within an issuer's capital structure, the Related Advisors will generally pursue the strategy that reflects what would be expected to be negotiated in an arm's length transaction with due consideration being given to our fiduciary duties to each of our accounts (without regard to the nature of the fees received from such accounts):

- This strategy may be recommended by one or more investment professionals of the Related Advisors
- A single person may represent more than one part of an issuer's capital structure
- The recommended course of action will be presented to our Conflicts Committee for final determination as to how to proceed. We may elect, but are not required, to assign different teams to make recommendations for different parts of the capital structure as the Conflicts Committee determines in its discretion.
- It is acknowledged that the applicable retail portfolio manager will separately and independently make his or her decision on suitability as to the course of action for the applicable retail portfolio and will leave the Conflicts Committee meeting prior to the final determination being made by the Conflicts Committee.

The Related Advisors may elect, but are not required, to assign different teams to make recommendations for different parts of the capital structure as the Conflicts Committee determines in its discretion.

In the event any Related Parties serve on the Board of the subject company, they may recuse themselves from voting on transactions involving a capital structure conflict.

- Related Party board members may still make recommendations to the Conflicts Committee

- If any such persons are also on the Conflicts Committee, they may recuse themselves from the Committee's determination.

The Related Advisors may use external counsel for guidance and assistance.

The foregoing procedures are not applicable to the advisors to retail accounts, which advisors generally make their own independent determination as to the course of action that is most appropriate for the applicable retail accounts.

Position Conflicts

Another type of conflict may arise if we cause one Client account of a Related Advisor to buy a security and another Client account to sell or short the same security. Currently, such opposing positions are generally not permitted within the same account without prior trade approval by the Chief Compliance Officer. However, a portfolio manager may enter into opposing positions for different Clients to the extent each such Client has a different investment objective and each such position is consistent with the investment objective of the applicable Client. In addition, transactions in investments by one or more affiliated Client accounts may have the effect of diluting or otherwise disadvantaging the values, prices or investment strategies of other Client accounts.

Generally, a Related Advisor does not purchase, sell or hold securities on behalf of Clients contrary to the current recommendations made to other affiliated Client accounts. However, because certain Client accounts may have investment objectives, strategies or legal, contractual, tax or other requirements that differ (such as the need to take tax losses, realize profits, raise cash, diversification, etc.), a Related Advisor may purchase, sell or continue to hold securities for certain Client accounts contrary to other recommendations. In addition, a Related Advisor may be permitted to sell securities or instruments short for certain Client accounts and may not be permitted to do so for other affiliated Client accounts.

Principal Trading

The Related Advisors, through their ownership interest in certain Unregistered Investment Funds, may be deemed a related person of such entity. In situations where we determine that we are a related person by our ownership of greater than 25% of such entity, such fund is considered a "Principal Account."

To the extent a Related Advisor wishes to trade an asset from a Client account to or from a Principal Account (a "Principal Cross Trade"), the SEC has stated that the Principal Cross Trade may only occur if the Client account on the other side from the Principal Account consents to the trade after a disclosure by the Related Advisor of all material facts. Our Compliance Manual sets forth procedures for executing both cross trades and principal cross trades.

Cross Trading

In an effort to reduce transaction costs, increase execution efficiency, and capitalize on timing opportunities, we may execute cross trades, or sell a security for one affiliated Client to another affiliated Client, without interposing a broker-dealer. All cross trades are subject to the cross trade procedures set forth in our Compliance Manual. Cross trades present an inherent conflict of interest because we and/or our affiliates represent the interest of the buyer and seller in the same transaction. As a result, Clients involved in a cross trade bear the risk that the price obtained from a cross trade may be less favorable than if the trade had been executed in the open market.

Conflicts Related to Investment Activities

The Related Advisors may buy or sell the same securities for an affiliate's account that they buy or sell for a Client or may pursue the same investment strategies for an affiliate's account as for a Client's. The Related Advisors also may receive greater management or performance-based fees or incentives in connection with managing certain Client accounts than from other Client accounts. In addition, if the Related Advisors allocate a Client's assets among pooled vehicles managed by the Related Advisors, they may have an incentive to allocate assets into vehicles that produce the greatest fees for the Related Advisors. Each of these situations give rise to a potential conflict of interest in the allocation of investment opportunities. In addition, the Related Advisors have an incentive to resolve conflicts of interest in favor of affiliated Clients over non-affiliated Clients. As previously described, the Related Advisors adopted trade allocation policies and procedures that seek to ensure fair and equitable access to investment opportunities for all accounts.

Trade Aggregation

In some circumstances, the Related Advisors may seek to buy or sell the same securities contemporaneously for multiple Client accounts. The Related Advisors may, in appropriate circumstances, aggregate securities trades for a Client with similar trades for other Clients, but are not required to do so. In particular, the Related Advisors may determine not to aggregate transactions that relate to portfolio management decisions that are made independently for different accounts or if the Related Advisors determine that aggregation is not practicable, not required or inconsistent with Client direction. When transactions are aggregated and it is not possible, due to prevailing trading activity or otherwise, to receive the same price or execution on the entire volume of securities purchased or sold, the various prices may be averaged or allocated on another basis deemed to be fair and equitable. In addition, under certain circumstances, the Clients will not be charged the same commission or commission equivalent rates in connection with a bunched or aggregated order. The effect of the aggregation may therefore, on some occasions, either advantage or disadvantage any particular Client.

From time to time, aggregation may not be possible because a security is thinly traded or otherwise not able to be aggregated and allocated among all affiliated Client accounts seeking the investment opportunity or a Client may be limited in, or precluded from, participating in an aggregated trade as a result of that Client's specific brokerage arrangements. Also, an issuer in which Clients wish to invest may have threshold limitations or aggregate ownership interests arising from legal or regulatory requirements or company ownership restrictions, which may have the effect of limiting the potential size of the investment opportunity and thus the ability of the applicable Client to participate in the opportunity.

Company Errors

For the Company's Clients, the Company's responsibility for its trade errors is set forth in the governing documents for the relevant Client. No soft-dollars may be used to satisfy any trade errors. In addition, the Company may not use the securities in one Client's account to settle the trade error in another Client's account.

Conflicts Related to Valuation

The Related Advisors may have a role in determining asset values with respect to Client accounts and may be required to price an asset when a market price is unavailable or unreliable. This may give rise to a conflict of interest because a Related Advisor may be paid an asset-based fee on certain Client accounts. In order to mitigate these conflicts, the Related Advisors determine asset values in accordance with valuation procedures, which generally are set forth in their applicable Compliance Manual.

Conflicts Related to Investments in Affiliated Funds

The Related Advisors purchase for Client accounts interests in other pooled vehicles, including Structured Product Vehicles, Unregistered Investment Funds and Retail Funds, offered by Related Parties. Investment by a Client in such a vehicle means Related Parties receive advisory or other fees from the Client in addition to advisory fees charged for managing the Client's Account. The details of any possible fee offsets, rebates or other reduction arrangements in connection with such investments are provided in the documentation relating to the relevant Client account and/or underlying investment vehicle. In choosing between vehicles managed by Related Parties and those not affiliated with Related Parties, Related Parties may have a financial incentive to choose Related Parties-affiliated vehicles over third parties by reason of additional investment management, advisory or other fees or compensation Related Parties may earn. The potential for fee offsets, rebates or other reduction arrangements may not necessarily eliminate this conflict and Related Parties may nevertheless have a financial incentive to favor investments in Related Parties-affiliated vehicles. If the Related Advisors invest in an affiliated vehicle, a Client should not expect the Related Advisors to have better information with respect to that vehicle than other investors may have (and if the Related Advisors do have better information they may be prohibited from acting upon it in a way that disadvantages other investors).

Additionally, Related Parties may sponsor and manage funds and accounts that compete with the Related Advisors or make investment with funds sponsored or managed by third-party advisers that would reduce capacity otherwise available to the Related Advisors' Clients.

Other Potential Conflicts

Related Parties may provide services other than advice to a Client, including administration, organizing/managing business affairs, executing and reconciling trades, preparing financials and providing audit support, preparing tax documents, sales and investor relations support, and diligence and valuation services, for additional fees. A potential conflict arises in such circumstances because Related Parties are incentivized to favor its Clients that pay such additional fees. However, the individuals who provide advice to Clients do not provide these additional services.

The Related Advisors may cause a Client to purchase, sell or hold securities of issuers in which Related Parties make a market or has an equity, debt or other financial interest or securities of issuers or other investments in which Related Parties, their officers or employees or their affiliated broker-dealers and other Related Parties and their officers or employees have positions or other financial interests. For example, the Related Advisors may purchase on behalf of a Client unregistered securities for which an affiliate acts as placement agent, which may result in additional fees to the affiliate or assist the affiliate in meeting its contractual obligations. The Related Advisors may also cause a Client to borrow money from Related Parties, and the Related Parties may earn interest or fees on such transactions. Conflicts also may arise if the Related Advisors implement a portfolio decision or strategy (including a decision to hold an investment) for one Client ahead of, or contemporaneously with, another Client. Such transactions may have the effect of diluting or otherwise disadvantaging the values, prices or investment strategies of other Client accounts and could result in one Client receiving more favorable trading results or reduced costs at the expense of the other Client.

Related Parties may invest (or recommend that a Client invest) in securities issued by a Client and may hedge derivative positions by buying or selling securities issued by a Client. A potential conflict may arise in such circumstances because a Related Advisor may be incentivized to favor its Clients that issue securities, or such Clients of its affiliates, over other Clients. In addition to Clients, some of the Related Advisors' service providers are issuers of securities. The Related Advisors may determine that it is in the best interests of a Client to purchase securities issued by one of these entities. The Related Advisors have adopted policies and procedures designed to address conflicts of interest arising from the foregoing activities. Furthermore, it is the Related Advisors' general policy not to take into account the fact that an issuer is a Client, service provider or vendor when making investment decisions.

Certain qualified employees and affiliates may invest in Clients either through general partner entities or as limited partners, shareholders or otherwise. The Related Advisors generally reduce or waive all or a portion of the management fee, performance-based fee related to the investments by such persons.

Conflicts Related to Information Possessed by or Provided by the Related Advisors

Certain Related Parties may receive or create information (e.g., proprietary technical models) that is not generally available to the public. The Related Advisors have no obligation to provide such information to Clients or effect transactions for Clients on the basis of such information and in many cases the Related Advisors will be prohibited from trading for the same Clients based on the information. Similarly, some Clients may have access to information regarding Related Parties' transactions or views that is not available to other Clients, and may act on that information through accounts managed by persons other than Related Parties. Such transactions may negatively impact other Clients (e.g., through market movements or decreasing availability or liquidity of securities). Additionally, our personnel or those of our advisory affiliates may from time to time serve on the board of directors of portfolio companies, and in such capacity may recommend investment opportunities to such companies.

Conflicts Related to the Related Advisors' Relationships with Third Parties

The Related Advisors may advise third-parties regarding valuation, risk management, transition management and potential restructuring or disposition activities in connection with proprietary or Client investments, which may create an incentive to purchase securities or other assets from those third parties or engage in related activities to bid down the price of such assets, which may have an adverse effect on a Client.

The Related Advisors may work with pension or other institutional investment consultants and such consultants may also provide services to the Related Advisors. Consultants may provide brokerage execution services to Related Parties and Related Parties may attend conferences sponsored by consultants. The Related Advisors also may be hired to provide investment management or other services to a pension or other institutional investment consultant that works with a Client, which may create conflicts.

Related Parties may in-source or out-source to third parties certain processes or functions, which may give rise to conflicts. There may be conflict when negotiating with third-party service providers if Related Parties bear operational expenses of various Clients to the extent that a given fee structure would tend to place more expense on Clients for which Related Parties have a greater entitlement to reimbursement or less expense on Clients for which Related Parties have lesser (or no) entitlement to reimbursement. Related Parties may provide information about a Client's portfolio positions to unrelated third parties to provide additional market analysis and research to Related Parties and they may use such analysis to provide investment advice to other Clients.

Related Parties may purchase information (such as periodicals, conference participation, papers, surveys) from professional consultant firms, and such firms may have an incentive to give favorable evaluations of Related Parties to their Clients.

In selecting broker-dealers that provide research or other products or services that are paid with soft dollars, conflicts may arise between a Related Advisor and a Client because a Related Advisor may not produce or pay for these benefits but may use brokerage commissions generated by Client transactions. Soft dollar arrangements may also give a Related Advisor an incentive to select a broker-dealer based on a factor other than the Related Advisor's interest in receiving the most favorable execution. Conflicts of interest related to soft dollar relationships with brokerage firms may be particularly influential to the extent that a Related Advisor uses soft dollars to pay expenses it might otherwise be required to pay itself. Furthermore, research or brokerage services obtained using soft dollars or that are bundled with trade execution, clearing, settlement or other services provided by a broker-dealer may be used in such a way that disproportionately benefits one Client over another (e.g., economics of scale or price discounts). For example, research or brokerage services paid for through one Client's commission may not be used in managing that Client's account. Additionally, where a research product or brokerage service has a mixed-use, determining the appropriate allocation of the product or service may create conflicts. Please refer to the section titled Brokerage Practices for information regarding the Related Advisors' use of soft dollars.

Conflicts may arise where a Related Advisor has the responsibility and authority to vote proxies on behalf of its Clients. Please refer to the section titled Voting Client Securities for information regarding the policies and procedures governing the Related Advisors' proxy voting activities.

Related Parties may serve on the boards of directors and/or investment committees of external organizations, including those organizations that are currently or may become Clients of Related Parties, and such service may present conflicts of interest to the extent the employee become aware of material non-public information and may be unable to initiate some transactions for other Clients while in possession of that information.

The Related Advisors may conduct business with institutions such as broker dealers or investment banks that invest, or whose Clients invest, in pooled vehicles sponsored or advised by the Related Advisors, or may provide other consideration to such institutions or recognized agents, and as a result the Related Advisors may have a conflict of interest in placing its brokerage transactions.

Related Parties may receive stock options from companies, the securities of which may be held in accounts of Related Parties' Clients, in exchange providing consulting work, including but not limited to, advisory services and financial services, for those companies.

Other Accounts and Relationships

As part of our regular business, Highland and its Related Parties hold, purchase, sell, trade or take other related actions both for their respective accounts and for the accounts of their respective Clients, on a principal or agency basis, subject to applicable law including Section 206(3) of the Advisers Act, with respect to loans, securities and other investments and financial instruments of all types. The Related Parties also provide investment advisory services, among other services, and engage in private equity, real estate and capital markets-oriented investment activities. The Related Parties will not be restricted in their performance of any such services or in the types of debt, equity, real estate or other investments which they may make. The Related Parties may have economic interests in or other relationships with respect to investments made by Clients. In particular, but subject to Highland's personal trading policy the Related Parties may make and/or hold an investment, including investments in securities, that may compete with, be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an, investment, including investments in securities, made and/or held by Clients or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of such Clients serve on boards of directors or otherwise have ongoing relationships. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in restrictions on transactions by Clients and otherwise create conflicts of interest for Clients. In such instances, the Related Parties may in their discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made with respect to Client investments, subject to the capital structure conflicts procedures discussed above. In connection with any such activities described above, but subject to Highland's personal trading policy the Related Parties may hold, purchase, sell, trade or take other related actions in securities or investments of a type that may be suitable for Clients. Subject to Highland's personal trading policy, the Related Parties will not be required to offer such securities or investments to Clients or provide notice of such activities to Clients. In addition, in managing Client portfolios, each of the Related Advisors may take into account its relationship or the relationships of its affiliates with obligors and their respective affiliates, which may create conflicts of interest. Furthermore, in connection with actions taken in the ordinary course of business of the Related Advisors in accordance with their fiduciary duties to their other Clients, the Related Advisors may take, or be required to take, actions which adversely affect the interests of their Clients.

The Related Parties have invested and may continue to invest in investments that would also be appropriate for Clients. Such investments may be different from those made on behalf of Clients. No Related Advisor nor any Related Party has any duty, in making or maintaining such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to Clients or to offer any such opportunity to Clients, subject to Highland's allocation policy and personal trading policy. The investment policies, fee arrangements and other circumstances applicable to such other parties may vary from those applicable to Clients. Any Related Party may also provide advisory or other services for a customary fee with respect to investments made or held by Clients, and no stockholders nor Clients shall have any right to such fees except to the extent the governing documents of the applicable Client expressly provide otherwise. Any Related Party may also have ongoing relationships with, render services to or engage in transactions with other Clients, who make investments of a similar nature to those of Clients, and with companies whose securities or properties are acquired by Clients and may own equity or debt securities issued by Clients. In connection with the foregoing activities any Related Party may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of the Related Advisors to effect a transaction for Clients, and Client investments may be constrained as a consequence of the Related Advisors' inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its Clients.

Although the professional staff of the Related Advisors will devote as much time to Clients as they deem appropriate to perform their duties, the staff may have conflicts in allocating its time and services among Client accounts.

The directors, officers, employees and agents of the Related Parties may, subject to applicable law, serve as directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories, and receive arm's length fees in connection with such service, for Clients or any Related Party, or for any Client joint ventures or any affiliate thereof, and no Clients nor their stockholders shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of the applicable Client expressly provide otherwise.

The Related Parties serve or may serve as officers, directors or principals of entities that operate in the same or a related line of business as Clients, or of other investment funds managed by Related Advisors. In serving in these multiple capacities, they may have obligations to other Clients or investors in those entities, the fulfillment of which may not be in the best interests of Clients or their stockholders. Clients may compete with other entities managed by Related Advisors for capital and investment opportunities.

There is no limitation or restriction on Related Advisors with regard to acting as investment manager (or in a similar role) to other parties or persons. This and other future activities of Related Parties may give rise to additional conflicts of interest. Such conflicts may be related to obligations that Related Advisor or their affiliates have to other Clients.

Certain Related Parties, including NexBank SSB and Governance Re among others, may provide banking, agency, insurance and other services to Clients and their operating affiliates for customary fees, and no Client, nor its subsidiaries will have a right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents thereof expressly provide otherwise.

Related Advisors may direct Clients to acquire or dispose of investments in cross or principal trades involving Clients of the Advisory Parties in accordance with applicable legal and regulatory requirements as described above. In addition, Clients may make and/or hold an investment, including an investment in securities, in which Related Parties have a debt, equity or participation interest, and the holding and sale of such investments by Clients may enhance the profitability of Related Parties' own investments in such companies. Moreover, Clients and their operating affiliates may invest in assets originated by, or enter into loans, borrowings and/or financings with Related Parties, including but not limited to NexBank, including in primary and secondary transactions with respect to which Related Parties may receive customary fees from the applicable issuer, and no Client nor their subsidiaries shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of such Client expressly provide otherwise. In each such case, Related Parties may have a potentially conflicting division of loyalties and responsibilities regarding Clients and the other parties to such investment. Under certain circumstances, the Related Advisors may determine that it is appropriate to avoid such conflicts by selling an investment at a fair value that has been calculated pursuant to our valuation procedures to another fund managed or advised by the Related Advisors. In addition, the Related Advisors may enter into agency cross-transactions where it or any of its affiliates act as broker for Clients, to the extent permitted under applicable law.

Related Parties may act as an underwriter, arranger or placement agent, or otherwise participate in the origination, structuring, negotiation, syndication or offering of investments purchased by Clients. Such transactions are on an arm's-length basis and may be subject to arm's-length fees. There is no expectation for preferential access to transactions involving investments that are underwritten, originated, arranged or placed by Related Parties and no Client nor their stockholders shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of such Client expressly provide otherwise.

Material Non-Public Information

There are generally no ethical screens or information barriers among the Related Advisors and certain of their affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. If any Related Advisor, any of their personnel or affiliates were to receive material non-public information about an investment or issuer, or have an interest in causing a Client to acquire a particular investment, we may be prevented from causing the Client to purchase or sell such asset due to internal restrictions imposed on us. Notwithstanding the maintenance of certain internal controls relating to the management of material non-public information, it is possible that such controls could fail and result in the Related Advisors, or one of its investment professionals, buying or selling an asset while, at least constructively, in possession of material non-public information. In addition, while the Related Advisors and certain of their affiliates generally operate without information barriers on an integrated basis, such entities could be required by certain regulations, or decide that it is advisable, to establish information barriers. In such event, our ability to operate as an integrated platform could also be impaired, which would limit our access to personnel of our affiliates and potentially impair our ability to manage Client investments.

ITEM 12. BROKERAGE PRACTICES

BROKER-DEALER SELECTION

Highland has an obligation to obtain “best execution” for Client transactions considering the execution price and overall commission costs paid and certain other factors. Our trading desk routes orders to various broker-dealers for execution at their discretion. Where possible, we deal directly with the dealers who make a market in the securities involved, except in those circumstances where we believe better prices and execution are available elsewhere.

Through periodic meetings of the Brokerage Committee, Highland reviews compensation paid to broker-dealers. The meetings include an in-depth review of “best execution reports” which are third party reports that show how Highland’s execution compared to its peers. The reports also include information regarding the most used broker-dealers, lowest and highest cost broker-dealers, and other information used in reviewing broker-dealer selection and compensation.

Factors involved in selecting brokerage firms include:

Broker Specific

- ❖ Size of broker
- ❖ Reputation
- ❖ Quality of service
- ❖ Experience
- ❖ Financial stability and creditworthiness
- ❖ Financial statements
- ❖ Regulatory filings
- ❖ Standing in financial community
- ❖ Ability to handle block trades
- ❖ Acceptable record of delivery and payment on past transactions
- ❖ Quality of research and investment information provided

Transaction Specific

- ❖ Best available execution

- ❖ Market knowledge regarding specific industries and securities
- ❖ Access to sources of supply or markets
- ❖ Nature of the market for the security

THE APPROVAL PROCESS

Highland's trading desk is only allowed to trade with broker-dealers that are approved by our Brokerage Committee unless interim approval is expressly provided by the Compliance Department, in which case such approval shall be ratified by the Brokerage Committee at the next meeting of the Committee. New broker-dealers are added to Highland's approved list of broker-dealers subject to a formal review process which closely analyzes all of the above mentioned broker specific selection items. The Brokerage Committee reviews the requirements and determines what additional procedures or reporting are necessary.

Highland generally has discretion to select brokers for its Clients that are pooled investment vehicles, such as, Retail Funds and Unregistered Investment Funds. For the Retail Funds, the Board of Trustees/Directors of each Retail Fund is ultimately responsible for the oversight of the Retail Fund and has the authority to direct or limit the brokers that may be used for the particular Retail Fund.

SOFT DOLLARS

In those circumstances where more than one broker-dealer is able to satisfy our obligation to obtain best execution, Highland may place a trade order on behalf of Client Accounts with a broker-dealer that charges more than the lowest available commission cost or price. Highland may do this in exchange for certain brokerage and research services provided either directly from the broker-dealer or through a third party ("Soft Dollar Arrangements"), provided that each of the following is met:

- ❖ Highland determines:
  1. The research or brokerage product or service constitutes an eligible brokerage or research service;
  2. The product or service provides lawful and appropriate assistance in the performance of Highland's investment decision making responsibilities; and
  3. In good faith the amount of Client commissions paid is reasonable in light of the value of the products or services provided.
- ❖ The brokerage or research is "provided by" a broker-dealer who participates in effecting the trade that generates the commission. Highland may not incur a direct obligation for research with a third party vendor and then arrange to have a broker-dealer pay for that research in exchange for brokerage commissions.

- ❖ Highland may only generate soft dollars with commissions in agency transactions. Highland may not use dealer markups in principal transactions to generate soft dollars. In addition, a trade for a fixed income security or over-the-counter (“OTC”) security may be done on an agency basis only if the trader determines that it would not result in a broker-dealer unnecessarily being inserted between Highland and the market for that security.
- ❖ No soft dollars are generated on accounts for which:
  1. Investment discretion resides with the Client (i.e. non-discretionary accounts);
  2. Client mandates restrict or prohibit the generation of soft dollar commissions;
  3. The Client has a directed brokerage arrangement.
- ❖ The brokerage trade placed is for “securities” transactions (and not, for example, futures transactions).

Research services furnished by brokers through whom Highland effects securities transactions may be used in servicing all of Highland’s accounts, and not all such services may be used in connection with the accounts which paid commissions to the broker providing such services.

If a Client Account is under the custody of one brokerage firm and another brokerage firm is a selling group member for an underwriting syndicate, such a Client Account may not be able to participate in the purchase of securities in the underwriting because the custodial brokerage firm was not a selling group member. In addition, to the extent that a Client directs brokerage trades to be placed with a particular broker, the allocation of securities transactions may be impacted.

When Highland uses Client brokerage commissions (or markups or markdowns) to obtain research or other products or services, Highland receives a benefit because the firm does not have to produce or pay for research, products, or services. Consequently, Highland may have an incentive to select or recommend a broker-dealer based on our interest in receiving the research or other products or services, rather than Clients’ interest in receiving most favorable execution.

PRODUCTS AND SERVICES ACQUIRED WITH SOFT DOLLARS

All products and services acquired with soft dollars qualify under the Safe Harbor of 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Examples of eligible services and products include independent stock research, economic research, research in specific industry sectors, real time feeds, newswires, strategic analysis, and back office systems.

DIRECTED BROKERAGE

Highland does not require Clients to direct brokerage, but in those situations where a Client has directed Highland to place trades with a particular broker-dealer, Highland may not be free to seek the best price, volume discounts or best execution by placing transactions with other broker-dealers. Additionally, as a result of directing Highland to place trades with a particular broker-dealer, a disparity in commission charges may exist between the commissions charged to Clients who direct us to use a particular broker-dealer and those Clients who do not direct us to use a particular broker-dealer as well as a disparity among the brokers to which different Clients have directed trades.

TRADE AGGREGATION

Orders of Clients may be combined (or “bunched”) when possible to obtain volume discounts resulting in a lower per share commission. Please see the section entitled Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions, and Personal Trading for additional information regarding Highland’s trade aggregation procedures.

ITEM 13. REVIEW OF ACCOUNTS

ACCOUNT REVIEW

Highland has an Investment Committee which, subject to certain size thresholds, is responsible for (i) assessing and approving new issues and new credits and (ii) determining general account suitability for those investments.

In circumstances where the decision to buy is made outside of the Investment Committee (i.e. where limited quantity purchases are allowed or with respect to follow-on investments), allocations will be made by consultation with the Portfolio Managers, typically from a “Gatekeepers” email request sent by or at the direction of the requesting Portfolio Manager. In determining the aggregate amount to be sought, the Investment Committee and/or Portfolio Managers consider, without limitation, the normal investment amount of the account, the general level of cash on hand and available to be drawn, cash generating activities, withdrawals and other factors affecting the desired purchase amount for Clients. The Investment Committee also may reconsider buy decisions relating to existing Client holdings when there are significant changes in relevant factors relating to the investment, including, but not limited to, the market value of the investment, the business of the issuer or borrower, results of operations, balance sheet and creditworthiness of the issuer or in the case of an equity security, the outlook for the issuer. An initial target allocation is determined by the committee at the time of any buy or sell decision based on appropriate factors (e.g., suitability, cash needs/availability, transaction size, etc.) which is then reconciled and adjusted, as appropriate, by the Allocation Committee prior to the commencement of trading on the next trading day. Our fiduciary duty requires that we recommend only those investments that are suitable for a Client, based on the Client's particular investment objectives, needs and circumstances. We are responsible for inquiring and documenting the criteria discussed above and shall develop suitable investment guidelines for each Client.

Traders Book

In certain circumstances, our Authorized Traders, as from time to time amended, determine that an investment is a good short-term opportunity for technical trading reasons. In these cases, an Authorized Trader propose these investment ideas to the Portfolio Managers who will consider the short-term investment based on the facts known to them and presented by the Authorized Trader. If the Portfolio Managers agree to participate in the short-term trade, the Authorized Trader executes the trade for the benefit of those accounts. The trade will then follow our Allocation Policy for immediate term investments.

Equities

Investment decisions with respect to equity investments are generally made independently by each applicable Portfolio Manager and allocated solely within the accounts managed by such Portfolio Manager, provided that in certain circumstances, such as debt to equity conversions, such determination may be presented to the Investment Committee in accordance with the process typically applicable to credit investments.

Investments in all Client Accounts are reviewed periodically and are reviewed collectively and individually by multiple reviewers in order to provide multiple perspectives on the accounts. Reviewers evaluate Client objectives along with, among other factors, applicable portfolio restrictions, available cash, particularized investment suitability, investment performance and diversification. In addition to, and not as a substitute for the foregoing, additional reviews are conducted in accordance with Client requests as set forth in the relevant investment advisory contract.

NATURE AND FREQUENCY OF REPORTING

Client reporting varies based on the type of product/vehicle. The following summarizes the reporting provided to each Client. The reports provided to a Client within a particular investment product/vehicle may differ from our description depending upon strategies and Client needs.

Structured Product Vehicles

Investors in Structured Product Vehicle Clients generally have access to a written monthly report provided by the trustee and the ability to review a marked portfolio on a monthly basis. The monthly trustee report primarily includes compliance reporting and portfolio holdings.

Unregistered Investment Funds – Hedge Funds

Investors in Hedge Fund Clients are generally provided a written monthly account statement with their respective net asset value. They also receive a written monthly reporting package, which includes a one-page summary with a fund overview, market commentary, and Highland's outlook on the market. In addition, the report includes fund specific details around the portfolio statistics, composition, and attribution.

On a quarterly basis, Highland may hold a conference call for a portfolio update with the Portfolio Manager, which will be accompanied by a written presentation to provide an update on the portfolio as well as the credit markets.

In addition to the above mentioned reporting, investors also receive audited written financial statements on an annual basis.

Unregistered Investment Funds – Private Equity Funds

Investors in Private Equity Fund Clients are provided a quarterly written capital statement with their respective investment commitments and capital balances, as well as periodic capital call written notices describing amounts being called on commitments and a detailed description of the use of proceeds.

On a quarterly basis, Highland may hold a conference call for a portfolio update with the Portfolio Manager, which will be accompanied by a written presentation to provide an update on the portfolio holdings.

In addition to the above mentioned reporting, investors also receive annual audited written financial statements.

Separate Accounts

Separate Account Clients typically have reporting that is tailored based on their expressed desired format and frequency. However, in general, the reporting Highland provides Separate Account Clients mirrors that of Hedge Fund Client written reporting. Reports to Separate Account Clients may be customized to include more detailed statistics, holdings, etc., at the request of the Client since there are generally fewer limitations on the type of information Highland can share regarding their investments. In addition to this reporting, Separate Account Clients have the ability to access the portfolio holdings as they deem necessary through the custodian of the account. An audit may or may not be required depending on the Client.

ITEM 14. CLIENT REFERRALS AND OTHER COMPENSATION

As stated in Item 12, we may allocate portfolio transactions to brokers or dealers who provide research and/or related services. For a more detailed discussion of such practices, please refer to Item 12.

Employees of Highland Capital Funds Distributor, Inc. are compensated based on their activities in soliciting investors through FINRA and/or SEC registered intermediaries for Clients advised by our advisory affiliates and may be similarly compensated in respect of our future Clients.. These employees are compensated with a base salary and discretionary bonus. Unaffiliated persons may from time to time serve as solicitors for Highland and may be compensated for referrals. Any agreement with a solicitor will be in compliance with Rule 206(4)-3 of the Advisers Act.

ITEM 15. CUSTODY

Highland does not act as custodian for Client assets. However, under Rule 206(4)-2 under the Advisers Act, Highland is deemed to have custody of certain Client assets. In the case of Retail Funds and Unregistered Investment Funds, such Clients have made arrangements with qualified custodians as disclosed in the relevant offering and other fund documents. In addition, such Clients obtain additional financial statements which statements are provided to investors no later than 120 days following the fiscal year end. With respect to Structured Product Vehicles, the trustee has custody of the Client's assets in accordance with the relevant offering and other fund documents.

In the case of Separate Accounts, Clients may give Highland the power to withdraw funds or securities maintained with a custodian upon request. Without coming to a legal conclusion as to whether Highland would have custody over these assets, Highland operates as if it does have custody in such situations. Accordingly, unless an exception is available, any Separate Account Clients would receive an annual surprise custody audit and receive account statements from their broker-dealer, bank, or qualified custodian and should carefully review those statements. Separate Accounts Clients should carefully review those statements and, to the extent Highland also delivers statements to such Clients, compare the Highland statement to the statements of the qualified custodian. For tax and other purposes, the custodial statement is the official record of a Separate Account Client's account and assets.

Loans held in Client Accounts may be agented by NexBank, SSB. As Agent Bank, NexBank, SSB will receive cash or send cash to such Clients for interest or principal payments or borrowings. Client Accounts (other than Retail Funds) may also have bank accounts or account control agreements in place at NexBank, SSB. In such instances NexBank receives an independent control examination pursuant to Rule 206(4)-2.

ITEM 16. INVESTMENT DISCRETION

Highland advises a wide variety of Client Accounts and manages assets on a discretionary basis. For a description of limitations Clients may impose on our discretionary authority to manage securities, please see the section titled Our Advisory Business.

Highland accepts discretionary authority to manage Clients' assets through an investment management agreement with its Clients.

Additionally, before an investment may be made into an Unregistered Investment Fund, or other similar structure, Highland provides all potential investors in the fund with an offering document, which sets forth in detail the investment strategy and program. By completing the subscription documents to acquire an interest or shares in an Unregistered Investment Fund, investors give us complete authority to manage the capital contributed in accordance with the offering document received.

ITEM 17. VOTING CLIENT SECURITIES

SECURITIES HELD IN CLIENT ACCOUNTS

Highland's proxy voting policy ensures proxies are voted on behalf of each Client Account's securities and in the best economic interests of such Client Account, without regard to the interests of Highland or any other Client of Highland. Portfolio Manager(s) of the applicable Client Account(s) evaluate the subject matter of each proxy and vote on behalf of the Client Account in accordance to the guidelines set forth in our proxy voting policy. In any case where a Client has instructed the Company to vote in a particular manner on the Client's behalf, those instructions will govern in lieu of parameters set forth in the proxy voting policy.

If the Portfolio Manager(s) determines that Highland may have a potential material conflict of interest, whether actual or perceived, in voting a proxy, the Portfolio Manager(s) will contact Highland's Compliance Department prior to the voting deadline. In the event of a conflict, the Company may choose to address such conflict by: (i) voting in accordance with the Proxy Advisor's recommendation; (ii) the CCO determining how to vote the proxy (if the CCO approves deviation from the proxy advisor's recommendation, then the CCO shall document the rationale for the vote); (iii) "echo voting" or "mirror voting" the proxy in the same proportion as the votes of other proxy holders that are not Clients; or (iv) with respect to Clients other than Retail Funds, notifying the affected Client of the material conflict of interest and seeking a waiver of the conflict or obtaining such Client's voting instructions.

OBTAINING A COPY OF THE POLICY

Clients and prospective Clients can obtain a copy of the proxy voting policy or information on how Highland voted proxies by contacting Highland's Chief Compliance Officer at (972) 628-4100.

ITEM 18. FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Highland does not charge or solicit pre-payment of more than $1200 in fees per Client six or more months in advance.

Highland has discretionary authority or custody of Client funds or securities. There is no financial condition that is reasonably likely to impair our ability to meet contractual commitments to Clients.

Under appropriate circumstances and where permitted by applicable law, the terms of an investment advisory contract, including fees, terms of payment and performance fees and termination provisions, are negotiable. In negotiating fees, Acis considers various factors, including assets under management, investment objectives, strategies and restrictions, and the resources required to meet investment objectives.

We have entered into service agreements with Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership (“HCM” or “Highland”), pursuant to which HCM will provide administrative, managerial and/or advisory services to the General Partner on mutually agreed terms. Payments from Acis to HCM pursuant to the service agreements are funded solely by the Management Fee, except for permitted account expenses that are borne by the applicable accounts.

Clients incur brokerage and other transaction costs associated with Acis’ management of Client Accounts. Please see Item 12. Brokerage Practices of this ADV Part 2 for a discussion of Acis’ brokerage practices.

FEE SCHEDULE

The following summary of fees is typically updated in this brochure annually (on or about March 31) and does not reflect subsequent changes unless expressly indicated otherwise. Fees in the below Fee Schedule are annualized.

Product	Management Fee	Performance Fee or Carried Interest	Other Fees
Separate Accounts	From 0.60% to 2.00%	Up to 20% over IRR on some accounts	None
Structured Products	From 0.15% to 0.85%	From 0.00% to 20.00%	None
Unregistered Investment Funds	From 0.7% to 2.00%	From 0.00% to 20.00%	None

Certain investment vehicles managed by Acis invest in other investment vehicles managed by Acis or our affiliates. For example, an Acis managed Separate Account purchase interest in the debt or equity of a CLO of which Highland acts as collateral manager. Both investment vehicles may impose management fees, performance fees or other expenses (including administrative fees). This results in greater expense to a Client than if such Client had invested directly in the underlying investment vehicle. Certain companies in which Clients are invested also use the products or services, or invest in investment vehicles, offered by Acis or its affiliates and pay fees or other compensation accordingly.

SEPARATE ACCOUNTS

For our Separate Accounts, the agreement entered into with Acis will determine the fee structure. Typically, a Separate Account will pay Acis management fees of 0.60% to 2.0% (per annum) based upon the average daily net assets, which may or may not be net of investment leverage. Acis may also collect a performance fee after reaching an internal rate of return ("IRR") for some accounts. Fees may be deducted from the Separate Account's assets in advance at the beginning of each calendar quarter.

STRUCTURED PRODUCT VEHICLES

As compensation for our advisory services, each Structured Product Vehicle pays Acis management fees ranging from 0.15% to 0.85% annually. Management fees are based on the principal balance of the assets held in the portfolio on defined determination dates. Management fees are established during structuring and remain constant for the duration of the life of the Structured Product Vehicle. Management fees also accrue during a payment period.

In addition to management fees, performance fees, and brokerage and transaction costs, investors in Structured Product Vehicles will indirectly bear the fees and expenses paid by the Structured Product Vehicle, including administration, legal, audit and accounting fees, and certain other fees and expenses. Each Structured Product Vehicle's governing documents include more detailed information about the fees and expenses paid by such Structured Product Vehicle.

Unregistered Investment Funds

As compensation for our advisory services, each Unregistered Investment Fund typically pays Highland management fees that range from 0.7% to 2.00% annually. Management fees are based upon outstanding capital accounts or amounts of committed capital and are deducted quarterly in advance or in arrears depending on the specific fund. For accounts that also provide for incentive compensation, Highland also deducts performance fees or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest ranging from 0% to 20% of returns, which may be after the achievement of a hurdle rate, and which is typically contingent on the manager of the applicable Unregistered Investment Fund eclipsing the high-water mark. In some cases, certain investors in an Unregistered Investment Fund enter into side letter agreements with Highland, under which they may pay a different fee than others based on the terms of their agreement with Highland or may otherwise receive certain additional rights. Upon termination of the applicable Unregistered Investment Fund's advisory agreement, any management fees that have been prepaid are generally returned on a pro-rated basis.

In addition to management fees, performance fees, and brokerage and transaction costs, investors in the Unregistered Investment Funds will indirectly bear the fees and expenses paid by the Unregistered Investment Funds, including custody fees, administration, legal, audit and tax preparation fees, and certain other fees and expenses. Each Unregistered Investment Fund's offering documents include more detailed information about the fees and expenses paid by such Unregistered Investment Fund.

OTHER COMPENSATION

Client Accounts may hold significant positions, individually or collectively, directly or indirectly, in the securities issued by a company. Accordingly, Acis or an affiliate may have the right to appoint a board member or officer for such company. Acis or an affiliate may appoint an employee or a third party to such position as it sees fit in the best interest of the company and its Clients. Employee are permitted to retain all compensation received for such positions except to the extent contrary to the governing documents for one or more Client Accounts, in which case the proportion of such compensation related to such Client Account(s) will be paid to those Account(s) (generally in proportion to relative assets of the Client Account as of the date paid).

In addition, to the extent permitted by the offering and/or governing documents of the applicable advised accounts, Acis and/or its affiliates receive other fees for services provided to portfolio companies, provided such fees are on arms-length terms and approved by the Board of Directors or other governing body of the applicable portfolio company. See also Item 10. Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations.

We have established procedures designed to address possible conflicts of interest that such board or officer positions might present, including requiring authorization from the Chief Compliance Officer prior to an officer or employee serving as a board member. As a result of such activities, Acis may acquire confidential information, which may restrict Client Accounts from transacting in certain securities. As a result, we may not initiate a transaction on behalf of Clients which we otherwise might have.

Please see Item. 6 Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management of this ADV Part 2 for additional information regarding performance fees or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest.

ITEM 6. PERFORMANCE-BASED FEES AND SIDE-BY-SIDE MANAGEMENT

As described above, certain Clients pay Acis a performance fee or investment profit allocations in the form of carried interest. To the extent that Acis charges a performance-based fee, the performance-based fee will comply with the requirements of Section 205 and Rule 205-3 under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the “Advisers Act”). In situations where Acis has entered into a performance fee arrangement, it has an economic incentive to make riskier investments and/or pursue riskier strategies than it might otherwise. In addition, because Acis manages both accounts with an asset-based fee and accounts with a performance fee or a combination of an asset-based fee and performance fee, we have an incentive to favor Client accounts for which we receive a performance-based fee. In addition, Acis and its principals also make investments through a number of proprietary accounts, including Acis Capital Management, L.P. In order to mitigate any such conflicts, Acis has also developed allocation of limited offering securities (such as IPOs and registered secondary offerings) procedures intended to result in fair and equitable allocation over time. To mitigate any actual or perceived conflicts of interest, allocation to principal accounts that do not include third party investors may only be made after all other Client Account orders for the security have been filled. A more detailed summary of our allocation guidelines is available to Clients or prospective Clients upon request.

A description of performance-based fees is included in the section titled Fees and Compensation.

ITEM 7. TYPES OF CLIENTS

Our Clients include:

- ❖ Separate Accounts
- ❖ Structured Product Vehicles
- ❖ Unregistered Investment Funds

Investment advice is provided directly to Clients and not individually to investors in a particular Client.

Acis has minimum account requirements for Unregistered Investment Funds, Structured Product Vehicles and Separate Accounts and generally requires a minimum investment of $100,000 to $50 million depending on the structure. Minimum account size may be waived for certain investors at Acis' discretion.

ITEM 8. METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES, AND RISK OF LOSS

The items below are types of investment strategies we currently utilize although we may add or subtract from this list based on various factors including macro-economic conditions.

INVESTMENT STRATEGIES

CLO Strategy

The primary focus is investing and trading in rated and unrated debt instruments relating to collateralized loan obligations (“CLO” or “CLO Securities”) in the primary and secondary markets. CLO securities rates of return are determined primarily by reference to the total rate of return on one or more loans referenced in such instruments. The rate of return on the CLO securities may be determined by applying a multiplier to the rate of total return on the reference loan or loans.

Floating Rate Loan Strategy

This strategy seeks to achieve its objective by investing, under normal market conditions, approximately 80% of its net assets in a portfolio of interests in adjustable rate senior loans, the interest rates of which float or vary periodically based upon a benchmark indicator of prevailing interests rates, to domestic or foreign corporations, partnerships and other entities that operate in a variety of industries and geographic regions. The strategy may invest all or substantially all of its assets in senior loans that are rated below investment grade and unrated senior loans of comparable quality. This strategy may also include investments in (i) high quality, short-term debt securities; (ii) warrants, equity securities and junior debt securities; (iii) senior loans of foreign issuers that are foreign currency denominated; and (iv) senior loans the interest rate of which are fixed and do not float.

Structured Finance Investments

Acis invests in various structured finance instruments, including asset-backed securities; collateralized loan obligations and collateralized debt obligations; and swaps (including total rate of return swaps) whose rates of return are determined primarily by reference to the total rate of return on one or more loans referenced in such instruments. The rate of return on the structured finance instrument may be determined by applying a multiplier to the rate of total return on the reference loan or loans. Application of a multiplier is comparable to the use of financial leverage, a speculative technique. Leverage magnifies the potential for gain and the risk of loss, because of a relatively small decline in the value of a reference loan could result in a relatively large loss for the value of a structured finance instrument.

METHOD OF ANALYSIS

For all Client Accounts, we utilize both fundamental and technical analysis methods. Our investment philosophy is rooted in a value-oriented, long-term approach, which combines bottom-up research with top-down technical market analysis. Our analysts follow a rigorous and time-tested bottom-up credit analysis for each credit we manage. We have also devised and applied an institutionalized process of credit evaluation and approval, via our Investment Committee, and have built a dedicated experienced restructuring team that has been integrated into Acis' investment process.

Acis' self-discipline is largely enforced by the ongoing monitoring of individual credit names by the responsible analyst and his or her supervisor.

Other sources of information include obtaining and reviewing due diligence packages prepared by debt issuers and underwriters of institutional private placements and meetings with management of issuers.

MATERIAL RISKS OF SIGNIFICANT STRATEGIES AND METHODS OF ANALYSIS:

In this section we summarize some of the material risks of Acis' investment strategies and methods of analysis. More complete information about the specific risks associated with each strategy or Client Account is available in the applicable offering documents. All methods of investments in securities and loans involve risk of loss including risk that a Client will lose the entire value of their investment.

Allocation of Investments

There is a risk that the allocations methodology employed by Acis will not result in optimal allocation and may disadvantage one Client Account while benefiting another Client Account. Since the process involves human input, there is the risk that human error may cause harm to a Client Account. Poor or mistaken allocation decisions could result in the loss of money for investors.

Credit Risk

Clients engage in transactions in securities and financial instruments that involve counterparties. Under certain conditions, a counterparty to a transaction could default or the market for certain securities and/or financial instruments may become illiquid. There is a risk that the issuer of a fixed income security will be unable to make timely principal and interest payments on the security. Certain Clients invest in securities rated below investment grade (which are commonly referred to as "high yield" securities or "junk" securities). These investments are regarded as predominately speculative with respect to the issuer's continuing ability to meet principal and interest payments. The downgrade of a security held by a Client

Account may decrease its value. Securities are subject to varying degrees of credit risk, which are often reflected in ratings assigned by commercial rating companies such as Moody's Investor Service, Standard & Poor's Corporation, Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. and Fitch Investors Service.

Currency Risk

If a Client Account invests directly in non-U.S. currencies or in securities of issuers that trade in, and receive revenues in, non-U.S. currencies, or in derivatives that provide exposure to non-U.S. currencies, it will be subject to the risk that those currencies will decline in value relative to the U.S. dollar, or, in the case of hedging positions, that the U.S. dollar will decline in value relative to the currency being hedged. Currency rates in foreign countries may fluctuate significantly over short periods of time for a number of reasons, including changes in interest rates, intervention (or the failure to intervene) by U.S. or foreign governments, central banks or supranational entities such as the International Monetary Fund, or by the imposition of currency controls or other political developments in the United States or abroad. As a result, a Client's investments in foreign currency-denominated securities may reduce the returns of the Client Account.

Derivatives Risk

Derivatives, such as futures and options, are subject to the risk that changes in the value of a derivative may not correlate perfectly with the underlying asset, rate or index. Derivatives also expose the Client to the credit risk of the derivative counterparty. Derivative contracts may expire worthless and the use of derivatives may result in losses to the Client.

Frequency of Trading

Some of the strategies and techniques to be employed by Acis require frequent trades to take place and, as a consequence, portfolio turnover and brokerage commissions will be greater than for other investment vehicles of similar size that do not employ frequent trading techniques.

Hedging

Acis may (but is not required to) utilize financial instruments both for investment purposes and for risk management purposes in order to (i) protect against possible changes in the market value of a Client Account resulting from fluctuations in the markets and changes in interest rates; (ii) protect the unrealized gains in the value of a Client Account; (iii) facilitate the sale of any such investments; (iv) enhance or preserve returns, spreads or gains on any investment in a Client Account; (v) hedge against a directional trade; (vi) hedge the interest rate, credit or currency exchange rate on any of financial instruments; (vii) protect against any increase in the price of any financial instruments Acis anticipates purchasing at a later date; or (viii) act for any other reason that Acis deems appropriate. For a variety of reasons, Acis may not seek to establish a perfect correlation between such hedging instruments and the portfolio holdings being hedged. Such imperfect correlation may prevent a Client from achieving the intended hedge or expose the Client to risk of loss. The successful utilization of hedging and risk management transactions requires skills complementary to those needed in the selection of portfolio holdings. Moreover, it should be noted that the Client Account will be exposed to certain risks that cannot be hedged.

Illiquid Securities

Acis may cause a Client to invest in a security that is illiquid. This could present a problem in realizing the prices quoted (selling a bond at or near its true value) and in effectively trading the position(s). The primary measure of liquidity is the size of the spread between the bid price and the offer price quoted by a dealer. The greater the dealer spread, the greater the liquidity risk. Liquidity risk is less relevant for investments that are intended to be held until maturity. Lack of liquidity means Acis may not be able to sell such investments at prices that reflect Acis' assessment of their value or the amount paid for such investments. Illiquidity may result from the absence of an established market for the investments as well as legal, contractual or other restrictions on their resale by Acis and other factors. Furthermore, the nature of Acis' investments, especially those in financially distressed companies, may require a long holding period prior to profitability.

Inflation Risk

Inflation risk results from the variation in the value of cash flows from a security due to inflation, as measured in terms of purchasing power. For example, if Acis purchases a 5 year bond in which it can realize a coupon rate of 5 percent, but the rate of inflation is 6 percent, then the purchasing power of the cash flow has declined. For securities other than adjustable bonds or floating rate bonds, the investment is exposed to inflation risk because the interest rate the issuer promises to make is fixed for the life of the security. To the extent that interest rates reflect the expected inflation rate, floating rate bonds have a lower level of inflation risk.

Investments in Distressed Assets

Debt obligations and other securities of distressed companies will by their nature relate to companies in unstable financial condition and entail substantial inherent risks. Consequently, many of these companies will likely have significantly leveraged capital structures, making them highly sensitive to declines in revenues and to increases in expenses and interest rates. The leveraged capital structure of such investments will increase the exposure of the portfolio companies to adverse economic factors such as downturns in the economy or deterioration in the condition of the portfolio company or its industry. Distressed investing also involves significant expenses of legal counsel, experts, consultants and other third parties.

Investments in Equity Securities

Investments in public equities are subject to the risk that stock prices will fall over short or long periods of time. In addition, common stock represents a share of ownership in a company, and rank after bonds and preferred stock in their claim on the company's assets in the event of bankruptcy.

Investments in Foreign Securities

A Client may invest a portion of its assets in securities of companies domiciled or operating in one or more foreign countries. Investing in foreign securities involves considerations and possible risks not typically involved in investing in securities of companies domiciled and operating in the U.S., including instability of some foreign governments, the possibility of expropriation, limitations on the use or removal of funds or other assets, foreign currency risk, changes in governmental administration or economic or monetary policy (in the U.S. or abroad) or changed circumstances in dealings between nations. The application of foreign tax laws (e.g., the imposition of withholding taxes on dividend or interest payments) or confiscatory taxation may also affect investment in foreign securities. Higher expenses may result from investment in foreign securities than would from investment in domestic securities because of the costs that must be incurred in connection with conversion between various currencies and foreign brokerage commissions that may be higher than in the U.S. Foreign securities markets also may be less liquid, more volatile and subject to less governmental supervision than in the U.S., including lack of uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards and potential difficulties in enforcing contractual obligations.

Investments in Structured Finance Instruments

Acis may cause Clients to invest in structured finance instruments. A portion of leveraged loans, high yield debt securities, structured finance instruments and synthetic securities (collectively the "Collateral Debt Obligations") may consist of equipment trust certificates, collateralized mortgage obligations, collateralized bond obligations, collateralized loan obligations or similar instruments. Structured finance instruments present risks similar to those of the other types of Collateral Debt Obligations in which the Client may invest and such risks may be of greater significance in the case of structured finance instruments. Moreover, investing in structured finance instruments entails a variety of unique risks, including prepayment risk. In addition, the performance of a structured finance instrument will be affected by a variety of factors, including its priority in the capital structure of the issuer thereof, the availability of any credit enhancement, the level and timing of payments and recoveries on and the characteristics of the underlying receivables, loans or other assets that are being securitized, remoteness of those assets from the originator or transferor, the adequacy of and ability to realize upon any related collateral and the capability of the servicer of the securitized assets. Each structured finance instrument to be purchased by a Client must be rated by a rating agency.

Investments in Synthetic Securities

Acis may cause Clients to invest in synthetic securities. In addition to credit risks associated with holding non-investment grade loans and high yield debt securities, with respect to synthetic securities, Acis or its Clients will usually have a contractual relationship only with the counterparty of such synthetic securities, and not the obligor on a reference obligation (the "Reference Obligor"). Such agreement generally stipulates that Acis or its Client will have no right to directly enforce compliance by the Reference Obligor with the terms of the reference obligation (defined herein as the debt security or other obligation upon which the synthetic security is based), nor any rights of set-off against the Reference Obligor, nor have any voting rights with respect to the reference obligation. In addition, in the event of insolvency of the counterparty, the Client will be treated as a general creditor of such counterparty, and will not have any claim with respect to the reference obligation. Consequently, the Client will be subject to the credit risk of the counterparty as well as that of the Reference Obligor. As a result, concentrations of synthetic securities in any one counterparty subject the notes to an additional degree of risk with respect to defaults by such counterparty as well as by the Reference Obligor. Acis will not perform independent credit analyses of the counterparties, any such counterparty, or an entity guaranteeing such counterparty, individually or in the aggregate.

Investments in Senior Secured Loans

Senior secured loans have significant credit risks and material losses may occur. As with other debt obligations, claims and collateral may be difficult to enforce in the event of a default. No assurance can be made that full or significant recovery of principal and/or interest will be received or that any collateral recovered will be marketable or sufficient.

Leverage

When deemed appropriate by Acis and subject to applicable regulations, a Client may use leverage in its investment program, including the use of borrowed funds and investments in certain types of options, such as puts, calls and warrants, which may be purchased for a fraction of the price of the underlying securities while giving the purchaser the full benefit of movement in the market of those underlying securities.

While such strategies and techniques increase the opportunity to achieve higher returns on the amounts invested, they also increase the risk of loss. To the extent a Client purchases securities with borrowed funds, its net assets will tend to increase or decrease at a greater rate than if borrowed funds are not used. The level of interest rates generally, and the rates at which such funds may be borrowed in particular, could affect the operating results of the Client. If the interest expense on borrowings were to exceed the net return on the portfolio securities purchased with borrowed funds, the Client's use of leverage would result in a lower rate of return than if the Client were not leveraged.

Maturity Risk

In certain situations, Acis may purchase a bond of a given maturity as an alternative to another bond of a different maturity. Ordinarily, under these circumstances, Acis will make an adjustment to account for the differential interest-rate risks in the two bonds. This adjustment, however, makes an assumption about how the interest rates at different maturities will move. To the extent that the yield movements deviate from this assumption, there is a yield-curve or maturity risk. Another situation where yield-curve risk should be considered is in the analysis of bond swap transactions where the potential incremental returns are dependent entirely on the parallel shift assumption for the yield curve.

Market or Interest Rate Risk

The price of most fixed income securities move in the opposite direction of the change in interest rates. For example, as interest rates rise, the prices of fixed income securities fall. If a Client holds a fixed income security to maturity, the change in its price before maturity will have little impact on the Client's performance; however, if the Client has to sell the fixed income security before the maturity date, an increase in interest rates will result in a loss. Senior secured bank loans generally pay interest at rates that are determined periodically by reference to a base lending rate plus a premium. These rates often are re-determined daily, monthly, quarterly or semi-annually. Recently, domestic and international markets have experienced a period of acute stress starting in the real estate and financial sectors and then moving to other sectors of the world economy. This stress has resulted in unusual and extreme volatility in the equity and debt markets and in the prices of individual investments. These market conditions could add to the risk of short-term volatility of investments.

Options

A Client may use a number of option strategies. Put options and call options typically have similar structural characteristics and operational mechanics regardless of the underlying instrument on which they are purchased or sold. A put option gives the purchaser of the option, upon payment of a premium, the right to sell, and the writer the obligation to buy, the underlying security, commodity, index, currency or other instrument at the exercise price. A call option, upon payment of a premium, gives the purchaser of the option the right to buy, and the seller the obligation to sell, the underlying instrument at the exercise price.

With certain exceptions, exchange listed options generally settle by physical delivery of the underlying security or currency, although in the future cash settlement may become available. Index options are cash settled for the net amount, if any, by which the option is “in-the-money” (i.e., where the value of the underlying instrument exceeds, in the case of a call option, or is less than, in the case of a put option, the exercise price of the option) at the time the option is exercised. Frequently, rather than taking or making delivery of the underlying instrument through the process of exercising the option, listed options are closed by entering into offsetting purchase or sale transactions that do not result in ownership of the new option. The Client’s ability to close out its position as a purchaser or seller of a listed put or call option is dependent, in part, upon the liquidity of the option market.

Over-the-counter (“OTC”) options are purchased from or sold to securities dealers, financial institutions or other parties (“Counterparties”) through direct bilateral agreement with the Counterparty. In contrast to exchange listed options, which generally have standardized terms and performance mechanics, all the terms of an OTC option, including such terms as method of settlement, term, exercise price, premium, guarantee, and security, are set by negotiation of the parties. Unless the parties provide for it, there is no central clearing or guaranty function in an OTC option. As a result, if the Counterparty fails to make or take delivery of the security, currency or other instrument underlying an OTC option it has entered into with the Client or fails to make a cash settlement payment due in accordance with the terms of that option, the Client will lose any premium it paid for the option as well as any anticipated benefit of the transaction.

If a put or call option purchased by the Client were permitted to expire without being sold or exercised, its premium would be lost by the Client. The risk involved in writing a put option is that there could be a decrease in the market value of the underlying security caused by rising interest rates or other factors. If this occurred, the option could be exercised and the underlying security would then be sold to the Client at a higher price than its current market value. The risk involved in writing a call option is that there could be an increase in the market value of the underlying security caused by declining interest rates or other factors. If this occurred, the option could be exercised and the underlying security would then be sold by the Client at a lower price than its current market value. Purchasing and writing put and call options and, in particular, writing “uncovered” options are highly specialized activities and entail greater than ordinary investment risks.

Valuation of Portfolio Investments

From time to time, special situations affecting the valuation of the investments (such as limited liquidity, unavailability or unreliability of third-party pricing information and acts or omissions of service providers to the Client) could have an impact on the value of a Client's investment, particularly if prior judgments as to the appropriate valuation of an investment should later prove to be incorrect after a net asset value-related calculation or transaction is completed. Generally, Acis is not required to make retroactive adjustments to prior subscription or withdrawal transactions, management fees or performance allocations based on subsequent valuation data. In addition, Acis may, but is not required to, discount the value of its positions due to limited liquidity, concentration levels or for other reasons. Due to the nature of its investments, Acis may not be able to place a precise value on positions and therefore may need to estimate values.

Highland Capital Management Services, Inc. is an affiliate of Acis and parent company of Governance Re Ltd., a captive insurance agency issuing directors & officers’ liability insurance and employment practice liability insurance to Acis, its affiliates, and their respective portfolio companies. NexVantage Title Services is a title insurance company affiliated with NexBank and Highland, which may provide title insurance with respect to real property investments owned by Client Accounts or their portfolio companies. A conflict of interest exists due to the fact that these entities receive premiums from portfolio companies of Client Accounts. As a result, Acis is incentivized to choose these affiliates to provide these services over a third party even though such party’s services may be better suited for the company.

INDEPENDENT BUSINESS ENTITIES

Employees, including the owners, of Acis also own personal interests in a variety of independent business entities. A conflict of interest exists due to the potential for the owners’ personal relationships and financial interests to conflict with our Client’s interests.

BUSINESS ACTIVITIES WITH PORTFOLIO COMPANIES

Acis or its affiliates provide on a periodic basis certain services to portfolio companies including, but not limited to, forensic accounting, interim management consulting services and merger and acquisition advisory services. Acis or our affiliates may also furnish operational consulting services to certain portfolio companies of Acis’ Clients. The time spent with respect to such activities depends upon a number of factors including the size of the investment, the relationship with the portfolio company and the financial and strategic position of such company. Acis or its affiliated advisors (including employees) may be directly or indirectly compensated for such services provided such compensation is received as a result of an arm’s length contract between the company and such person. Employees of Acis may be granted equity or options in the portfolio companies for which they provide certain services.

Additional information regarding potential conflicts of interest arising from Acis' relationship and activities with its affiliates is provided in the section titled Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading.

ITEM 11. CODE OF ETHICS, PARTICIPATION OR INTEREST IN CLIENT TRANSACTIONS AND PERSONAL TRADING

Acis maintains a policy of strict compliance with the highest standards of ethical business conduct and the provisions of applicable federal securities laws, including rules and regulations promulgated by the SEC, and has adopted policies and procedures described in its Code of Ethics. Payments to government officials or employees are prohibited except for political contributions approved by our Chief Compliance Officer. We seek to outperform our competition fairly and honestly and seek competitive advantages through superior performance not illegal or unethical dealings. Access persons are strictly prohibited from (i) participating in online blogging and communication with the media, unless approved by the Chief Compliance Officer or the Compliance Department, and (ii) spreading of false rumors pertaining to any publicly traded company.

CONFIDENTIALITY

Employees must maintain the confidentiality of Acis’ proprietary and confidential information, and must not disclose that information unless the necessary approval is obtained. Acis has a particular duty and responsibility, as investment adviser, to safeguard Client information. Information concerning the identity and transactions of investors is

GIFT AND ENTERTAINMENT POLICY

Access persons are permitted, on occasion, to accept gifts and invitations to attend entertainment events. When doing so, however, employees should always act in our best interests and that of our Clients and should avoid any activity that might create an actual or perceived conflict of interest or impropriety in the course of our business relationship. Under no circumstances may (i) gifts of cash or cash equivalents be accepted or (ii) may any gifts be received in consideration or recognition of any services provided to or transactions entered into by, Client Accounts.

PERSONAL TRADING

Personal Trading Policy

Access persons are allowed to trade reportable securities during designated time periods, however all transactions in reportable securities other than ETFs must be pre-approved by the Chief Compliance Officer or his/her designee. Except in very limited circumstances approved by the Chief Compliance Officer, access persons are not permitted to trade any security of which we or a Client own any portion of the capital structure or that is on our restricted list without permission. Access persons who violate the personal trading policy are reprimanded in accordance with the sanctions provisions outlined in the Code of Ethics. Personal securities transactions are reviewed by the Chief Compliance Officer or his/her designee for compliance with the personal trading policy and applicable SEC rules and regulations.

Prohibition against Insider Trading

Acis forbids any access person from trading, either personally or on behalf of others, including Clients advised by Acis, on material non-public information or communicating material non-public information to others in violation of the law or duty owed to another party. This conduct is frequently referred to as "insider trading". The concepts of material non-public information, penalties for insider trading, and processes for identifying insider trading are addressed in detail in the Compliance Manual and Code of Ethics.

Reporting Requirements

In compliance with SEC rules, access persons are required to disclose all of their personal brokerage accounts and holdings within 10 days of initial employment with Acis, within 10 days of opening a new account, and annually thereafter. Additionally, no later than the last day of the month after quarter-end, all access persons must report all transactions in reportable securities over which the access person had any direct or indirect beneficial ownership. Access persons are also required annually to affirm all reportable transactions from the prior year.

POTENTIAL CONFLICTS

Acis and its affiliates engage in a broad range of activities, including activities for their own account and for the accounts of Clients. This section describes various potential conflicts that may arise in respect of its business, as well as how Acis addresses such conflicts of interest. The discussion below does not describe all conflicts that may arise.

Any of the following potential conflicts of interest will be discussed and resolved on a case by case basis. Acis' determination as to which factors are relevant, and the resolution of such conflicts, will be made using Acis' best judgment, but in its sole discretion. In resolving conflicts, Acis will take into consideration the interests of the relevant Clients, the circumstances giving rise to the conflict and applicable laws. Certain procedures for resolving specific conflicts of interest are set forth below.

Allocation of Investment Opportunities

Acis, together with its affiliates, may act as investment adviser to Clients that have similar investment objectives and pursue similar strategies. Certain investments identified by Acis may be appropriate for multiple Clients. Investment decisions for such Clients are made by Acis and the applicable affiliates in their best judgment, but in their discretion, taking into account such factors as Acis believes relevant. Such factors may include investment objectives, regulatory restrictions, current holdings, availability of cash for investment, the size of investments generally, risk-return considerations, tax consequences, and limitations and restrictions on a Client's account that are imposed by such Client. In addition, if it is fair and reasonable that certain Clients are fully filled of their appetite before others (e.g., for tax considerations, to avoid de minimis partial allocations, to cover or close out an existing position to mitigate risk or losses, etc.), then these Clients may receive full or disproportionate allocations, with the remaining amounts allocated in accordance with normal procedures among the other participating Clients. One or more of the foregoing considerations in this paragraph may (and are often expected to) result in allocations among accounts other than on a pari passu basis. Accordingly, particular investment may be bought or sold for only one Client or in different amounts and at different times for more than one but less than all Clients, even though it could have been bought or sold for other Clients at the same time. Likewise, a particular investment may be bought for one or more Clients when one or more other Clients are selling the investment. In addition, purchases or sales of the same investment may be made for two or more Clients on the same date. There can be no assurance that a Client will not receive less (or more) of a certain investment than it would otherwise receive if Acis, together with its affiliates, did not have a conflict of interest among Clients.

In effecting transactions, it is not always possible, or consistent with the investment objectives of Acis' and its affiliates' various Clients, to take or liquidate the same investment positions at the same time or at the same prices. Certain investment restrictions may limit Acis' and its affiliates' ability to act for a Client and may reduce performance. Regulatory and legal restrictions (including restrictions on aggregation of positions) may also restrict the investment activities of Acis and result in reduced performance.

Acis seeks to manage and/or mitigate these potential conflicts of interest described by following procedures with respect to the allocation of investment opportunities among its and its affiliates' Clients, including the allocation of limited investment opportunities. Our allocation policy is based on a fundamental desire to treat each Client Account fairly over time. Please refer to the Investment Discretion – Allocation Conflicts section for a more detailed explanation of Acis' allocation process.

In addition to the investment strategies implemented by the portfolio managers for each of our Clients, such portfolio managers may also give trading desk personnel of the adviser general authorization to enter into a limited amount of short-term trades (purchases expected to be sold within 15 business days) in debt instruments on behalf of such Clients. Over time, it is expected that these trades will not exceed 2% of each such Client's assets. Such investments executed by authorized traders are generally allocated on a weighted rotational basis, based on the AUM of the accounts eligible to participate in such investment opportunities.

Investment Negotiation

In order to ensure compliance with Section 17(d) under the Investment Company Act whenever an investment professional proposes to negotiate a term other than price for an investment (including any amendments), he/she must check to see if the investment (or any other position in the issuer's capital structure) is held (or proposed to be invested) in any retail accounts of our advisory affiliates.

If the investment is held in any retail accounts, that person must contact the Chief Compliance Officer for guidance.

- (i) The transaction is generally permitted if all accounts are in the same part of the capital structure and participate in the investment pro rata
- (ii) Alternatively, impose "Chinese Wall" between retail/institutional investment decision-making

One person can negotiate, provided final investment decision still made separately.

May also consult outside counsel and/or the retail board for guidance.

Capital Structure Conflicts

Conflicts will arise in cases when Clients of Acis and its affiliates invest in different parts of an issuer's capital structure, including circumstances in which one or more Clients own private securities or obligations of an issuer and other Clients may own public securities of the same issuer. In addition, one or more Clients may invest in securities, or other financial instruments, of an issuer that are senior or junior to securities, or financial instruments, of the same issuer that are held by or acquired for, one or more other Clients. If such issuer encounters financial problems, decisions related to such securities (such as over the terms of any workout or proposed waivers and amendments to debt covenants) will raise conflicts of interests. For example, a Client holding debt securities of the issuer may be better served by a liquidation of the issuer in which it may be paid in full, whereas a Client holding equity securities of the issuer might prefer a reorganization that holds the potential to create value for the equity holders.

In the event of conflicting interests within an issuer's capital structure, Acis will generally pursue the strategy that Acis, together with its affiliated advisers, reflects what would be expected to be negotiated in an arm's length transaction with due consideration being given to our fiduciary duties to each of our accounts (without regard to the nature of the fees received from such accounts):

- This strategy may be recommended by one or more Acis or affiliated investment professionals
- A single person may represent more than one part of an issuer's capital structure
- The recommended course of action will be presented to our Conflicts Committee for final determination as to how to proceed. We may elect, but are not required, to assign different teams to make recommendations for different parts of the capital structure as the Conflicts Committee determines in its discretion.
- It is acknowledged that the applicable retail portfolio manager will separately and independently make his or her decision on suitability as to the course of action for the applicable retail portfolio and will leave the Conflicts Committee meeting prior to the final determination being made by the Conflicts Committee.

Acis and its affiliated advisers may elect, but is not required, to assign different teams to make recommendations for different parts of the capital structure as the Conflicts Committee determines in its discretion.

In the event any Acis or affiliated personnel serve on the Board of the subject company, they may recuse themselves from voting on transactions involving a capital structure conflict.

- Acis or affiliated personnel board members may still make recommendations to the Conflicts Committee
- If any such persons are also on the Conflicts Committee, they may recuse themselves from the Committee's determination

Acis may use external counsel for guidance and assistance.

Position Conflicts

Another type of conflict may arise if we cause one Client account of Acis or its affiliates to buy a security and another Client Account to sell or short the same security. Currently, such opposing positions are generally not permitted within the same account without prior trade approval by the Chief Compliance Officer. However, a portfolio manager may enter into opposing positions for different Clients to the extent each such Client has a different investment objective and each such position is consistent with the investment objective of the applicable Client. In addition, transactions in investments by one or more affiliated Client accounts may have the effect of diluting or otherwise disadvantaging the values, prices or investment strategies of other Client accounts.

Generally, Acis does not purchase, sell or hold securities on behalf of Clients contrary to the current recommendations made to other affiliated Client accounts. However, because certain Client accounts may have investment objectives, strategies or legal, contractual, tax or other requirements that differ (such as the need to take tax losses, realize profits, raise cash, diversification, etc.), Acis may purchase, sell or continue to hold securities for certain Client accounts contrary to other recommendations. In addition, Acis may be permitted to sell securities or instruments short for certain Client accounts and may not be permitted to do so for other affiliated Client accounts.

Principal Trading

In situations where we determine that we are a related person by our ownership of greater than 25% of the equity voting securities of such entity, such fund is considered a "Principal Account."

To the extent Acis wishes to trade an asset from a Client Account to or from a Principal Account (a "Principal Cross Trade"), the SEC has stated that a Principal Cross Trade may only occur if the Client Account on the other side from the Principal Account consents to the trade after a disclosure by Acis of all material facts. Acis' Compliance

Manual sets forth procedures for executing both cross trades and principal cross trades.

Cross Trading

In an effort to reduce transaction costs, increase execution efficiency, and capitalize on timing opportunities, Acis may execute cross trades, or sell a security for one affiliated Client to another affiliated Client, without interposing a broker-dealer. All cross trades are subject to the cross trade procedures set forth in Acis' compliance manual. Cross trades, however, may present an inherent conflict of interest because Acis and/or its affiliates represent the interest of the buyer and seller in the same transaction. As a result, Clients involved in a cross trade bear the risk that the price obtained from a cross trade may be less favorable than if the trade had been executed in the open market.

Conflicts Related to Investment Activities

Acis and/or its affiliates may buy or sell the same securities for an affiliate's account that it buys or sells for a Client or may pursue the same investment strategies for an affiliate's account as for a Client's. Acis and/or its affiliates also may receive greater management or performance-based fees or incentives in connection with managing certain Client Accounts than from other Client Accounts. In addition, if Acis allocates a Client's assets among pooled vehicles managed by Acis, it may have an incentive to allocate assets into vehicles that produce the greatest fees for Acis. Each of these situations give rise to a potential conflict of interest in the allocation of investment opportunities. In addition, Acis has an incentive to resolve conflicts of interest in favor of affiliated Clients over non-affiliated Clients. As previously described, Acis has adopted trade allocation policies and procedures that seek to ensure fair and equitable access to investment opportunities for all accounts.

Trade Aggregation

In some circumstances, Acis and/or its affiliates may seek to buy or sell the same securities contemporaneously for multiple Client Accounts. Acis and/or its affiliates may, in appropriate circumstances aggregate securities trades for a Client with similar trades for other Clients, but is not required to do so. In particular, Acis and/or its affiliates may determine not to aggregate transactions that relate to portfolio management decisions that are made independently for different accounts or if Acis and/or its affiliates determine that aggregation is not practicable, not required or inconsistent with Client direction. When transactions are aggregated and it is not possible, due to prevailing trading activity or otherwise, to receive the same price or execution on the entire volume of securities purchased or sold, the various prices may be averaged or allocated on another basis deemed to be fair and equitable. In addition, under certain circumstances, the Clients will not be charged the same commission or commission equivalent rates in connection with a bunched or aggregated order. The effect of the aggregation may therefore, on some occasions, either advantage or disadvantage any particular Client.

From time to time, aggregation may not be possible because a security is thinly traded or otherwise not able to be aggregated and allocated among all affiliated Client account seeking the investment opportunity or a Client may be limited in, or precluded from, participating in an aggregated trade as a result of that Client's specific brokerage arrangements. Also, an issuer in which Clients wish to invest may have threshold limitations or aggregate ownership interests arising from legal or regulatory requirements or company ownership restrictions, which may have the effect of limiting the potential size of the investment opportunity and thus the ability of the applicable Client to participate in the opportunity.

Company Errors

For the Company's Clients, the Company's responsibility for its trade errors is set forth in the governing documents for the relevant Client. No soft-dollars may be used to satisfy any trade errors. In addition, the Company may not use the securities in one Client's account to settle the trade error in another Client's account.

Conflicts Related to Valuation

Acis or an affiliate may have a role in determining asset values with respect to Client Accounts and may be required to price an asset when a market price is unavailable or unreliable. This may give rise to a conflict of interest because Acis may be paid an asset-based fee on certain Client Accounts. In order to mitigate these conflicts, Acis and its affiliates determine asset values in accordance with valuation procedures, which generally are set forth in Acis' Compliance Manual.

Conflicts Related to Investments in Affiliated Funds

Acis and/or its affiliates purchase for Client Accounts interests in other pooled vehicles, including structured product vehicles, unregistered investment funds and retail funds, offered by Acis or its affiliates, unless prohibited under applicable law or the relevant account investment guidelines. Investment by a Client in such a vehicle means Acis or its affiliates receive advisory or other fees from the Client in addition to advisory fees charged for managing the Client's Account. The details of any possible fee offsets, rebates or other reduction arrangements in connection with such investments are provided in the documentation relating to the relevant Client Account and/or underlying investment vehicle. In choosing between vehicles managed by Acis and those not affiliated with Acis, Acis may have a financial incentive to choose Acis-affiliated vehicles over third parties by reason of additional investment management, advisory or other fees or compensation Acis or its affiliates may earn.

The potential for fee offsets, rebates or other reduction arrangements may not necessarily eliminate this conflict and Acis may nevertheless have a financial incentive to favor investments in Acis-affiliated vehicles. If Acis invests in an affiliated vehicle, a Client should not expect Acis to have better information with respect to that vehicle than other investors may have (and if Acis does have better information it may be prohibited from acting upon it in a way that disadvantages other investors).

Additionally, Acis' affiliates may sponsor and manage funds and accounts that compete with Acis or make investments with funds sponsored or managed by third-party advisers that would reduce capacity otherwise available to Acis' Clients.

Other Potential Conflicts

Acis and its affiliates may provide services other than advice to a Client, including administration, organizing/managing business affairs, executing and reconciling trades, preparing financials and providing audit support, preparing tax documents, sales and investor relations support, and diligence and valuation services, for additional fees. A potential conflict arises in such circumstances because Acis and its affiliates are incentivized to favor its Clients that pay such additional fees. However, the individuals who provide advice to Clients do not provide these additional services.

Acis and its affiliates may cause a Client to purchase, sell or hold securities of issuers in which Acis or its affiliate makes a market or has an equity, debt or other financial interest or securities of issuers or other investments in which Acis or its affiliates, its officers or employees or its affiliated broker-dealers and other related persons and their officers or employees have positions or other financial interests. For example, Acis may purchase on behalf of a Client unregistered securities for which an affiliate acts as placement agent, which may result in additional fees to the affiliate or assist the affiliate in meeting its contractual obligations. Acis may also cause a Client to borrow money from Acis' affiliates, and the affiliates may earn interest or fees on such transactions. Conflicts also may arise if Acis implements a portfolio decision or strategy (including a decision to hold an investment) for one Client ahead of, or contemporaneously with, another Client. Such transactions may have the effect of diluting or otherwise disadvantaging the values, prices or investment strategies of other Client Accounts and could result in one Client receiving more favorable trading results or reduced costs at the expense of the other Client.

Acis or its affiliates may invest (or recommend that a Client invest) in securities issued by a Client and may hedge derivative positions by buying or selling securities issued by a Client. A potential conflict may arise in such circumstances because Acis may be incentivized to favor its Clients that issue securities, or such Clients of its affiliates, over the Client on whose behalf Acis is making the investment. In addition to Clients, some of Acis' service providers are issuers of securities. Acis may determine that it is in the best interests of a Client to purchase securities issued by one of these entities. Acis has adopted policies and procedures designed to address conflicts of interest arising from the foregoing activities. Furthermore, it is Acis' general policy not to take into account the fact that an issuer is a Client, service provider or vendor when making investment decisions.

Certain qualified employees and affiliates invest in Clients either through general partner entities or as limited partners, shareholders or otherwise. Acis generally reduces or waives all or a portion of the management fee, performance-based fee, or other costs and expenses related to the investments by such persons.

Conflicts Related to Information Possessed by or Provided by Acis

Certain persons within Acis or its affiliates may receive or create information (e.g., proprietary technical models) that is not generally available to the public. Acis or its affiliates has no obligation to provide such information to Clients or effect transactions for Clients on the basis of such information and in many cases Acis or its affiliates will be prohibited from trading for the same Clients based on the information. Similarly, some Clients may have access to information regarding Acis' or its affiliates' transactions or views that is not available to other Clients, and may act on that information through accounts managed by persons other than Acis or its affiliates. Such transactions may negatively impact other Clients (e.g., through market movements or decreasing availability or liquidity of securities). Additionally, our personnel or those of our advisory affiliates may from time to time serve on the board of directors of portfolio companies, and in such capacity may recommend investment opportunities to such companies.

Conflicts Related to Acis' Relationships with Third Parties

Acis or its affiliates may advise third-parties regarding valuation, risk management, transition management and potential restructuring or disposition activities in connection with proprietary or Client investments, which may create an incentive to purchase securities or other assets from those third parties or engage in related activities to bid down the price of such assets, which may have an adverse effect on a Client.

Acis' or its affiliates' Client may work with pension or other institutional investment consultants and such consultants may also provide services to Acis or its affiliates. Consultants may provide brokerage execution services to employees of Acis and its affiliates and such employees may attend conferences sponsored by consultants. Acis or its affiliates also may be hired to provide investment management or other services to a pension or other institutional investment consultant that works with a Client, which may create conflicts.

Acis or its affiliates may in-source or out-source to third parties certain processes or functions, which may give rise to conflicts. There may be conflict when negotiating with third-party service providers if Acis or its affiliates bears operational expenses of various Clients to the extent that a given fee structure would tend to place more expense on Clients for which Acis or its affiliates has a greater entitlement to reimbursement or less expense on Clients for which Acis has lesser (or no) entitlement to reimbursement. Acis or its affiliates may provide information about a Client's portfolio positions to unrelated third parties to provide additional market analysis and research to Acis or its affiliates and they may use such analysis to provide investment advice to other Clients.

Acis or its affiliates may purchase information (such as periodicals, conference participation, papers, surveys) from professional consultant firms, and such firms may believe they have an incentive to give favorable evaluations of Acis to their Clients.

In selecting broker-dealers that provide research or other products or services that are paid with soft dollars, conflicts may arise between Acis and a Client because Acis may not produce or pay for these benefits but may use brokerage commissions generated by Client transactions. Soft dollar arrangements may also give Acis an incentive to select a broker-dealer based on a factor other than Acis' interest in receiving the most favorable execution. Conflicts of interest related to soft dollar relationships with brokerage firms may be particularly influential to the extent that Acis uses soft dollars to pay expenses it might otherwise be required to pay itself. Furthermore, research or brokerage services obtained using soft dollars or that are bundled with trade execution, clearing, settlement or other services provided by a broker-dealer may be used in such a way that disproportionately benefits one Client over another (e.g., economics of scale or price discounts). For example, research or brokerage services paid for through one Client's commission may not be used in managing that Client's account. Additionally, where a research product or brokerage service has a mixed-use, determining the appropriate allocation of the product or service may create conflicts. Please refer to the section titled Brokerage Practices for information regarding Acis' use of soft dollars.

Conflicts may arise where Acis has the responsibility and authority to vote proxies on behalf of its Clients. Please refer to the section titled Voting Client Securities for information regarding the policies and procedures governing Acis' proxy voting activities.

Employees of Acis and its affiliates may serve on the boards of directors and/or investment committees of external organizations, including those organizations that are currently or may become Clients of Acis, and such service may present conflicts of interest to the extent the employee becomes aware of material non-public information and may be unable to initiate some transactions for other Clients while in possession of that information.

Acis and its affiliates may conduct business with institutions such as broker dealers or investment banks that invest, or whose Clients invest, in pooled vehicles sponsored or advised by Acis or its affiliates, or may provide other consideration to such institutions or recognized agents, and as a result Acis may have a conflict of interest in placing its brokerage transactions.

Employees or affiliates of Acis or a related person may receive stock options from companies, the securities of which may be held in accounts of Acis' Clients, in exchange for providing consulting services, including but not limited to, Advisory services and financial services, for the company.

Other Accounts and Relationships

As part of our regular business, Acis and its affiliates holds purchase, sell, trade or take other related actions both for their respective accounts and for the accounts of their respective Clients, on a principal or agency basis, subject to applicable law including Section 206(3) of the Advisers Act, with respect to loans, securities and other investments and financial instruments of all types. Acis also provides investment advisory services, among other services, and engages in private equity, real estate and capital markets-oriented investment activities. Acis will not be restricted in its performance of any such services or in the types of debt, equity, real estate or other investments which it may make. Acis may have economic interests in or other relationships with respect to investments made by Clients. In particular, but subject to Acis' personal trading policy, Acis may make and/or hold an investment, including investments in securities, that may compete with, be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an, investment, including investments in securities, made and/or held by Clients or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of such Clients serve on boards of directors or otherwise have ongoing relationships. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in restrictions on transactions by Clients and otherwise create conflicts of interest for Clients. In such instances, Acis may in its discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made with respect to Client investments, subject to the capital structure conflicts procedures discussed above. In connection with any such activities described above, but subject to Acis' personal trading policy, Acis and its affiliates may hold, purchase, sell, trade or take other related actions in securities or investments of a type that may be suitable for Clients. Subject to Acis' personal trading policy, Acis will not be required to offer such securities or investments to Clients or provide notice of such activities to Clients. In addition, in managing Client portfolios, Acis may take into account its relationship or the relationships of its affiliates with obligors and their respective affiliates, which may create conflicts of interest. Furthermore, in connection with actions taken in the ordinary course of business of Acis in accordance with its fiduciary duties to its other Clients, Acis may take, or be required to take, actions which adversely affect the interests of their Clients.

Acis has invested and may continue to invest in investments that would also be appropriate for Clients. Such investments may be different from those made on behalf of Clients. Acis does not have any duty, in making or maintaining such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to Clients or to offer any such opportunity to Clients, subject to Acis' allocation policy and personal trading policy. The investment policies, fee arrangements and other circumstances applicable to such other parties may vary from those applicable to Clients. Acis may also provide advisory or other services for a customary fee with respect to investments made or held by Clients, and no stockholders nor Clients shall have any right to such fees except to the extent the governing documents of the applicable Client expressly provide otherwise. Acis may also have ongoing relationships with, render services to or engage in transactions with other Clients, who make investments of a similar nature to those of Clients, and with companies whose securities or properties are acquired by Clients and may own equity or debt securities issued by Clients. In connection with the foregoing activities Acis may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of Acis to effect a transaction for Clients, and Client investments may be constrained as a consequence of Acis' inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its Clients.

Although the professional staff of Acis will devote as much time to Clients as they deem appropriate to perform its duties, the staff may have conflicts in allocating its time and services among Client accounts.

The directors, officers, employees and agents of Acis and its affiliates may, subject to applicable law, serve as directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories, and receive arm's length fees in connection with such service, for Clients or Acis, or for any Client joint ventures or any affiliate thereof, and no Clients nor their stockholders shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of the applicable Client expressly provide otherwise.

Acis and its affiliates serve or may serve as officers, directors or principals of entities that operate in the same or a related line of business as Clients, or of other investment funds managed by Acis. In serving in these multiple capacities, they may have obligations to other Clients or investors in those entities, the fulfillment of which may not be in the best interests of Clients or their stockholders. Clients may compete with other entities managed by Acis for capital and investment opportunities.

There is no limitation or restriction on Acis with regard to acting as investment manager (or in a similar role) to other parties or persons. This and other future activities of Acis may give rise to additional conflicts of interest. Such conflicts may be related to obligations that Acis or its affiliates have to other Clients.

Certain Acis affiliates, including NexBank SSB and Governance Re among others, may provide banking, agency, insurance and other services to Clients and their operating affiliates for customary fees, and no Client, nor its subsidiaries will have a right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents thereof expressly provide otherwise.

Acis may direct Clients to acquire or dispose of investments in cross or principal trades involving Clients of Acis in accordance with applicable legal and regulatory requirements as described above. In addition, Clients may make and/or hold an investment, including an investment in securities, in which Acis and its affiliates have a debt, equity or participation interest, and the holding and sale of such investments by Clients may enhance the profitability of Acis' own investments in such companies. Moreover, Clients and their operating affiliates may invest in assets originated by, or enter into loans, borrowings and/or financings with Acis, including but not limited to NexBank, including in primary and secondary transactions with respect to which Acis may receive customary fees from the applicable issuer, and no Client nor their subsidiaries shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of such Client expressly provide otherwise. In each such case, Acis may have a potentially conflicting division of loyalties and responsibilities regarding Clients and the other parties to such investment. Under certain circumstances, Acis may determine that it is appropriate to avoid such conflicts by selling an investment at a fair value that has been calculated pursuant to our valuation procedures to another fund managed or advised by Acis. In addition, Acis may enter into agency cross-transactions where it or any of its affiliates act as broker for Clients, to the extent permitted under applicable law.

Acis may act as an underwriter, arranger or placement agent, or otherwise participate in the origination, structuring, negotiation, syndication or offering of investments purchased by Clients. Such transactions are on an arm's-length basis and may be subject to arm's-length fees. There is no expectation for preferential access to transactions involving investments that are underwritten, originated, arranged or placed by Acis and no Client nor their stockholders shall have the right to any such fees except to the extent the governing documents of such Client expressly provide otherwise.

Material Non-Public Information

There are generally no ethical screens or information barriers among Acis and certain of its affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. If Acis, any of its personnel or affiliates were to receive material non-public information about an investment or issuer, or have an interest in causing a Client to acquire a particular investment, we may be prevented from causing the Client to purchase or sell such asset due to internal restrictions imposed on us. Notwithstanding the maintenance of certain internal controls relating to the management of material non-public information, it is possible that such controls could fail and result in Acis, or one of its investment professionals, buying or selling an asset while, at least constructively, in possession of material non-public information. In addition, while the Acis and certain of its affiliates generally operate without information barriers on an integrated basis, such entities could be required by certain regulations, or decide that it is advisable, to establish information barriers. In such event, our ability to operate as an integrated platform could also be impaired, which would limit our access to personnel of our affiliates and potentially impair our ability to manage Client investments.

ITEM 12. BROKERAGE PRACTICES
BROKER-DEALER SELECTION

Acis has an obligation to obtain “best execution” for Client transactions considering the execution price and overall commission costs paid and certain other factors. Our trading desk routes orders to various broker-dealers for execution at their discretion. Where possible, we deal directly with the dealers who make a market in the securities involved, except in those circumstances where we believe better prices and execution are available elsewhere.

Through periodic meetings of the Brokerage Committee, Acis reviews compensation paid to broker-dealers. The meetings include an in-depth review of “best execution reports” which are third party reports that show how Acis’ execution compared to its peers. The reports also include information regarding the most used broker-dealers, lowest and highest cost broker-dealers, and other information broker-dealer selection and compensation.

Factors involved in selecting brokerage firms include:

Broker Specific

- ❖ Size of broker
- ❖ Reputation
- ❖ Quality of service
- ❖ Experience
- ❖ Financial stability and creditworthiness
- ❖ Financial statements
- ❖ Regulatory filings
- ❖ Standing in financial community
- ❖ Ability to handle block trades
- ❖ Acceptable record of delivery and payment on past transactions
- ❖ Quality of research and investment information provided

Transaction Specific

- ❖ Best available execution
- ❖ Market knowledge regarding specific industries and securities
- ❖ Access to sources of supply or markets
- ❖ Nature of the market for the security

THE APPROVAL PROCESS

Acis’ trading desk is only allowed to trade with broker-dealers that are approved by our Brokerage Committee unless interim approval is expressly provided by the Compliance Department, in which case such approval shall be ratified by the Brokerage Committee at the next meeting of the Committee. New broker-dealers are added to Acis’ approved list of broker-dealers subject to a formal review process which closely analyses all of the above mentioned broker specific selection items. The Brokerage Committee will review the requirements and determine what additional procedures or reporting are necessary.

SOFT DOLLARS

In those circumstances where more than one broker-dealer is able to satisfy our obligation to obtain best execution, Acis may place a trade order on behalf of Client Accounts with a broker-dealer that charges more than the lowest available commission cost or price. Acis may do this in exchange for certain brokerage and research services provided either directly from the broker-dealer or through a third party ("Soft Dollar Arrangements"), provided that each of the following is met:

- ❖ Acis determines:
  1. The research or brokerage product or service constitutes an eligible brokerage or research service;
  2. The product or service provides lawful and appropriate assistance in the performance of Acis' investment decision making responsibilities; and
  3. In good faith the amount of Client commissions paid is reasonable in light of the value of the products or services provided.
- ❖ The brokerage or research is "provided by" a broker-dealer who participates in effecting the trade that generates the commission. Acis may not incur a direct obligation for research with a third party vendor and then arrange to have a broker-dealer pay for that research in exchange for brokerage commissions.
- ❖ Acis may only generate soft dollars with commissions in agency transactions. Acis may not use dealer markups in principal transactions to generate soft dollars. In addition, a trade for a fixed income security or over-the-counter ("OTC") security may be done on an agency basis only if the trader determines that it would not result in a broker-dealer unnecessarily being inserted between Acis and the market for that security.
- ❖ No soft dollars are generated on accounts for which:
  1. Investment discretion resides with the Client (i.e. non-discretionary accounts);
  2. Client mandates restrict or prohibit the generation of soft dollar commissions;
  3. The Client has a directed brokerage arrangement.
- ❖ The brokerage trade placed is for "securities" transactions (and not, for example, futures transactions).

Research services furnished by brokers through whom Acis effects securities transactions may be used in servicing all of Acis' accounts, and not all such services may be used in connection with the accounts which paid commissions to the broker providing such services.

If a Client Account is under the custody of one brokerage firm and another brokerage firm is a selling group member for an underwriting syndicate, such a Client Account may not be able to participate in the purchase of securities in the underwriting because the custodial brokerage firm was not a selling group member. In addition, to the extent that a Client directs brokerage trades to be placed with a particular broker, the allocation of securities transactions may be impacted.

When Acis uses Client brokerage commissions (or markups or markdowns) to obtain research or other products or services, Acis receives a benefit because the firm does not have to produce or pay for research, products, or services. Consequently, Acis may have an incentive to select or recommend a broker-dealer based on our interest in receiving the research or other products or services, rather than Clients' interest in receiving most favorable execution.

PRODUCTS AND SERVICES ACQUIRED WITH SOFT DOLLARS

All products and services acquired with soft dollars qualify under the Safe Harbor of 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Examples of eligible services and products include independent stock research, economic research, research in specific industry sectors, real time feeds, newswires, strategic analysis, and back office systems.

DIRECTED BROKERAGE

Acis does not require Clients to direct brokerage, but in those situations where a Client has directed Acis to place trades with a particular broker-dealer, Acis may not be free to seek the best price, volume discounts or best execution by placing transactions with other broker-dealers. Additionally, as a result of directing Acis to place trades with a particular broker-dealer, a disparity in commission charges may exist between the commissions charged to Clients who direct us to use a particular broker-dealer and those Clients who do not direct us to use a particular broker-dealer as well as a disparity among the brokers to which different Clients have directed trades.

TRADE AGGREGATION

Orders of Clients may be combined (or "bunched") when possible to obtain volume discounts resulting in a lower per share commission. Please see the sections entitled Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions, and Personal Trading for additional information regarding Acis' trade aggregation procedures.

ITEM 13. REVIEW OF ACCOUNTS

ACCOUNT REVIEW

Acis has an Investment Committee which, subject to certain size thresholds, is responsible for (i) assessing and approving new issues and new credits and (ii) determining general account suitability for those investments.

In circumstances where the decision to buy is made outside of the Investment Committee (i.e. where limited quantity purchases are allowed or with respect to follow-on investments), allocations will be made by consultation with the Portfolio Managers, typically from a “Gatekeepers” email request sent by or at the direction of the requesting Portfolio Manager. In determining the aggregate amount to be sought, the Investment Committee and or Portfolio Managers consider, without limitation, the normal investment amount of the account, the general level of cash on hand and available to be drawn, cash generating activities, withdrawals and other factors affecting the desired purchase amount for Clients. The Investment Committee also may reconsider buy decisions relating to existing Client holdings when there are significant changes in relevant factors relating to the investment, including, but not limited to, the market value of the investment, the business of the issuer or borrower, results of operations, balance sheet and creditworthiness of the issuer or in the case of an equity security, the outlook for the issuer. An initial target allocation is determined by the committee at the time of any buy or sell decision based on appropriate factors (e.g., suitability, cash needs/availability, transaction size, etc.) which is then reconciled and adjusted, as appropriate, by the Allocation Committee prior to the commencement of trading on the next trading day. Our fiduciary duty requires that we recommend only those investments that are suitable for a Client, based on the Client's particular investment objectives, needs and circumstances. We are responsible for inquiring and documenting the criteria discussed above and shall develop suitable investment guidelines for each Client.

Traders Book

In certain circumstances our Authorized Traders, as from time to time amended, determine that an investment is a good short-term opportunity for technical trading reasons. In these cases, an Authorized Trader proposes these investment ideas to the Portfolio Managers who will consider the short-term investment based on the facts known to them and presented by the Authorized Trader. If the Portfolio Managers agree to participate in the short-term trade, the Authorized Trader executes the trade for the benefit of those accounts. The trade will then follow our Allocation Policy for immediate term investments.

Equities

Investment decisions with respect to equity investments are generally made independently by each applicable Portfolio Manager and allocated solely within the accounts managed by such Portfolio Manager, provided that in certain circumstances, such as debt to equity conversions, such determination may be presented to the Investment Committee in accordance with the process typically applicable to credit investments.

Investments in all Client Accounts are reviewed periodically and are reviewed collectively and individually by multiple reviewers in order to provide multiple perspectives on the accounts. Reviewers evaluate Client objectives along with, among other factors, applicable portfolio restrictions, available cash, particularized investment suitability, investment performance and diversification. In addition to, and not as a substitute for the foregoing, additional reviews are conducted in accordance with Client requests as set forth in the relevant investment advisory contract.

NATURE AND FREQUENCY OF REPORTING

Client reporting varies based on the type of product/vehicle. The following summarizes the reporting provided to each Client. The reports provided to a Client within a particular investment product/vehicle may differ from our description depending upon strategies and Client needs.

Separate Accounts

Separate Account Clients typically have reporting that is tailored based on their expressed desired format and frequency. However, in general, the reporting Acis provides Separate Account Clients mirrors that of Hedge Fund Client written reporting. Reports to Separate Account Clients may be customized to include more detailed statistics, holdings, etc., at the request of the Client since there are generally fewer limitations on the type of information Acis can share regarding their investment. In addition to this reporting, Separate Account Clients have the ability to access the portfolio holdings as they deem necessary through the custodian of the account. An audit may or may not be required depending on the Client.

Structured Product Vehicles

Investors in Structured Product Vehicle Clients would generally have access to a written monthly report provided by the trustee and the ability to review a marked portfolio on a monthly basis. The monthly trustee report typically includes compliance reporting and portfolio holdings.

Unregistered Investment Funds – Hedge Funds

Investors in Hedge Fund Clients are generally provided a written monthly account statement with their respective net asset value. They also receive a written monthly reporting package, which includes a one-page summary with a fund overview, market commentary, and Acis' outlook on the market. In addition, the report includes fund specific details around the portfolio statistics, composition, and attribution.

ITEM 14. CLIENT REFERRALS AND OTHER COMPENSATION

As stated in Item 12, we may allocate portfolio transactions to brokers or dealers who provide research and/or related services. For a more detailed discussion of such practices, please refer to Item 12.

Employees of Highland Capital Funds Distributor, Inc. are compensated based on their activities in soliciting investors through FINRA and/or SEC registered intermediaries for Clients advised by our advisory affiliates and may be similarly compensated in respect of our future Clients. These employees are compensated with a base salary and discretionary bonus. Unaffiliated persons may from time to time serve as solicitors for Acis and may be compensated for referrals. Any agreement with a solicitor will be in compliance with Rule 206(4)-3 of the Advisers Act.

ITEM 15. CUSTODY

Acis does not act as custodian for Client assets. However, under Rule 206(4)-2 under the Advisers Act, Acis is deemed to have custody of certain Client assets. In the case of Unregistered Investment Funds, such Clients have made arrangements with qualified custodians as disclosed in the relevant offering and other fund documents. With respect to Structured Product Vehicles, the Trustee has custody of the Client's assets in accordance with the relevant offering and other fund documents. In addition, such Clients obtain additional financial statements which statements are provided to investors no later than 120 days following the fiscal year end.

In the case of Separate Accounts, Clients may give Acis the power to withdraw funds or securities maintained with a custodian upon request. Without coming to a legal conclusion as to whether Acis would have custody over these assets, Acis operates as if it does have custody in such situations. Accordingly, unless an exception is available, any such Separate Account Clients would receive an annual surprise custody audit and receive account statements from their broker-dealer, bank, or qualified custodian and should carefully review those statements. Separate Accounts Clients should carefully review those statements and, to the extent Acis also delivers statements to such Clients, compare the Acis statement to the statements of the qualified custodian. For tax and other purposes, the custodial statement is the official record of a Separate Account Client's account and assets.

Loans held in Client Accounts may be agented by NexBank, SSB. As Agent Bank, NexBank, SSB will receive cash or send cash to such Clients for interest or principal payments or borrowings. Client Accounts may also have bank accounts or account control agreements in place at NexBank, SSB. In such instances NexBank receives an independent control examination pursuant to Rule 206(4)-2.

ITEM 16. INVESTMENT DISCRETION

Acis advises a wide variety of Client Accounts and manages assets on a discretionary basis. For a description of limitations Clients may impose on our discretionary authority to manage securities, please see Item 4. Advisory Business.

Acis accepts discretionary authority to manage Clients' assets through an investment management agreement with its Clients.

Additionally, before an investment may be made into an Unregistered Investment Fund, a Separate Account or other similar structure, Acis provides all potential investors in the fund with an offering document, which sets forth in detail the investment strategy and program. By completing the subscription documents to acquire an interest or shares in an Unregistered Investment Fund, investors give us complete authority to manage the capital contributed in accordance with the offering document received.

ITEM 17. VOTING CLIENT SECURITIES

SECURITIES HELD IN CLIENT ACCOUNTS

Acis' proxy voting policy ensures proxies are voted on behalf of each Client Account's securities and in the best economic interests of such Client Account, without regard to the interests of Acis or any other Client of Acis. Portfolio manager(s) of the applicable Client Account(s) evaluate the subject matter of each proxy and vote on behalf of the Client Account in accordance to the guidelines set forth in our proxy voting policy. In any case where a Client has instructed the Company to vote in a particular manner on the Client's behalf, those instructions will govern in lieu of parameters set forth in the proxy voting policy.

If the portfolio manager(s) determines that Acis may have a potential material conflict of interest, whether actual or perceived, in voting a proxy, the portfolio manager(s) will contact Acis' Compliance Department prior to the voting deadline. In the event of a conflict, the Company may choose to address such conflict by: (i) voting in accordance with the Proxy Advisor's recommendation; (ii) the CCO determining how to vote the proxy (if the CCO approves deviation from the proxy advisor's recommendation, then the CCO shall document the rationale for the vote); (iii) "echo voting" or "mirror voting" the proxy in the same proportion as the votes of other proxy holders that are not Clients; or (iv) with respect to Clients other than Retail Funds, notifying the affected Client of the material conflict of interest and seeking a waiver of the conflict or obtaining such Client's voting instructions

OBTAINING A COPY OF THE POLICY

Clients and prospective Clients can obtain a copy of the proxy voting policy or information on how Acis voted proxies by contacting Acis' Chief Compliance Officer at (972) 628-4100.

ITEM 18. FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Acis does not charge or solicit pre-payment of more than $1,200 in fees per Client six or more months in advance.

Acis has non-discretionary authority or custody of Client funds or securities.

On April 13, 2018, the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) entered an Order for Relief placing Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP”) in involuntary Chapter 7 bankruptcy. On May 11, 2018, the bankruptcy was converted into a Chapter 11 reorganization, and Robin Phelan, an attorney based in Dallas, Texas, was appointed by the Court as the trustee to oversee the bankruptcy (the “Trustee”). Mr. Phelan, in his capacity as Trustee, exercises discretionary control over all Acis investment decisions and transactions. Accordingly, the Trustee is a control person of both Acis and Acis GP. The bankruptcy proceeding is on-going. Highland Capital Management, L.P. continues to provide non-discretionary investment advice and back office services to Acis pursuant to subadvisory and shared service agreements with Acis.

In re Acis Capital Management, L.P.- Case No. 18-30264

In re Acis Capital Management, G.P.- Case No. 18-30265

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas

EXHIBIT A TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. Claimant: Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”) maintains its business at 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201. Highland files its proof of claim (the “Claim”) pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 105(a), 501, and 502(f) and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 3002 and 3003. Prior to the Involuntary Petition Date (defined below), Highland provided sub-advisory and shared services to the Debtors (defined below). Highland has provided portfolio management and advisory services to the Debtors pursuant to that certain Third Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement by and between the Debtors and Highland dated March 17, 2017 (“Sub-Advisory Agreement”) (Exhibit 1). Specifically, Highland has acted as an investment manager and has identified, evaluated, and recommended investments to investment vehicles advised or sub-advised by the Debtors. Highland has also provided the Debtors with back and middle office services pursuant to that certain Fourth Amended and Restated Shared Services Agreement by and between the Debtors and Highland dated March 17, 2017 (“Shared Services Agreement”) (Exhibit 2). Highland has provided the Debtors with all of the employees and staff necessary to manage the portfolios. Highland continued to provide the same sub-advisory and shared services to the Debtors throughout the Gap Period (defined below). To date, Highland continues to provide such services.

2. Debtors: Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management, G.P. (the “Debtors”). The Debtors’ cases have been consolidated under case number 18-30264 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas. Highland provides the service at the following address: 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201.

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas

3. Indebtedness: Because the Debtors were put into bankruptcy involuntarily, the amount included in the proof of claim accounts for pre-petition claims as well as Gap Claims (defined below).

a. Pre-Petition: Joshua Terry, the petitioning creditor, filed the involuntary petition on January 30, 2018 (the “Petition Date”). As of the Petition Date, the outstanding indebtedness owing from the Debtors to Highland was as set forth below by account number:

Invoice	Type	Balance
A1-A7; BVK <sup>1</sup>	Sub-Advisory	$1,605,362.41
A1-A7; BVK	Shared Services	$1,017,213.62
	Totals	$2,622,576.03

b. Gap Period: When a debtor files bankruptcy, the order for relief is typically entered on the date the petition is filed. However, an involuntary bankruptcy case diverges from the simultaneous entry of an order for relief in that an order for relief is entered at a later date than when a petition is filed. This creates a period of time, referred to as the “gap period”, where the debtor may accrue post-petition but pre-order for relief debt. Pursuant to Section 502(f) of the Bankruptcy Code:

In an involuntary case, a claim arising in the ordinary course of the debtor’s business or financial affairs after the commencement of the case but before the earlier of the appointment of a trustee and order for relief shall be determined as of the date such claim arises, and shall be allowed under subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this section...the same as if such claim had arisen before the date of the filing of the petition.

11 U.S.C. 502(f).

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas

Claims arising during the gap period are entitled to priority treatment under section 507(a)(3). The Court entered the Order for Relief on April 13, 2018 (“Order for Relief Date”). Highland continued to provide services to the Debtors from January 30, 2018 to April 13, 2018 (“Gap Period”). The outstanding balance owed from the Debtors to Highland for the sub-advisory and shared services during the Gap Period is set forth below (and shall be referred to as the “Gap Claim”):

Account No.	Type	Balance
A1-A7; BVK	Sub-Advisory	$1,170,147.06
A1-A7; BVK	Shared Services	$879,417.29
	Totals	$2,049,564.35

c. Reservation of Rights as to Administrative Claim: Highland has provided uninterrupted sub-advisory and shared services since the Order for Relief Date. Highland reserves its rights to seek allowance of its administrative claims.

d. Indemnity Claims: Highland has contingent claims for indemnification pursuant to Section 6.03 of the Shared Services Agreement and Section 4(c) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement. According to Section 6.03 of the Shared Services Agreement and Section 4(c) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement, “the Management Company [Debtors] hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless Covered Person [Highland and its representatives] from...any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs...suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions...of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated, or unliquidated...arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company.” Highland reserves such contractual indemnification right.

4. Reservation of Rights; Other Rights: The Claims described in this Attachment are legal, binding, enforceable, allowed, and not subject to any offset, defense, claim, counterclaim or any other diminution of any type, kind or nature, whatsoever; provided, however, the Chapter 11 Trustee alleges that he may offset Highland's Claims and recover from Highland through his current adversary proceeding against Highland (Adversary Proceeding 18-03212). Highland disputes such contention, and believes all Claims sought herein are recoverable despite the Chapter 11 Trustee's allegations. No portion of the Claims or any funds previously paid to Highland are subject to impairment, avoidance, subordination, or disallowance pursuant to the Bankruptcy Code (including, without limitation, Bankruptcy Code § 502) or applicable non-bankruptcy law. Highland expressly reserves the right in the future to assert any and all claims that it may have, including, without limitation, imposition of a constructive trust, equitable lien, security interest, subrogation, marshaling, or other legal or equitable remedies to which it may be entitled. The filing of this proof of claim is not to be construed as an election of remedies. Highland further reserves the rights (a) to amend, modify or supplement this proof of claim, including any exhibit, schedule or annex, or to file an amended proof of claim for the purpose of modifying or liquidating the amount of any interest, fees, costs and expenses accrued or incurred subsequent to the Petition Date or any contingent or unliquidated claims or rights of Highland set forth herein; (b) file additional proofs of claim; and (c) against third parties.

7. Miscellaneous: This proof of claim is filed under compulsion of the bar date established in this bankruptcy case solely out of an abundance of caution to protect Highland from forfeiture of its claim within this bankruptcy proceeding. The amounts set forth in this proof of claim shall not be construed as an admission by Highland as to the amounts due and owing outside of this bankruptcy proceeding. The filing of this proof of claim is not: (a) a waiver or release of and/or Highland's rights or remedies against any person, entity or property; (b) a consent by Highland to entry of final judgment by this Court in any core proceeding commenced in this bankruptcy case, consistent with the United States Supreme Court's holding in Stern v. Marshall, 131 S. Ct. 2594 (2011); (c) a waiver of the right to move to withdraw the reference or otherwise challenge the jurisdiction of this Court; (d) a waiver of the right to a jury trial; (e) an election of a remedy which waives or otherwise affects any other remedy; or (f) a waiver of the right to assert a different or enhanced classification of priority for its Claim in respect of the other claims asserted in this bankruptcy case.

THIRD AMENDED AND RESTATED
SUB-ADVISORY AGREEMENT

This Third Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement (as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated from time to time in accordance with the terms hereof, this “Agreement”), dated as of March 17, 2017, is entered into by and between Acis Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership, as the management company hereunder (in such capacity, the “Management Company”), and Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership (“Highland”), as the sub-advisor hereunder (in such capacity, the “Sub-Advisor” and together with the Management Company, the “Parties”).

RECITALS

WHEREAS, the Parties entered into that certain Second Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement dated July 29, 2016 to be effective January 1, 2016 (the “Existing Agreement”);

WHEREAS, the Management Company from time to time has entered and will enter into portfolio management agreements, investment management agreements and/or similar agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a “Management Agreement”) and related indentures, credit agreements, collateral administration agreements, service agreements or other agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a “Related Agreement”), in each case as set forth on Appendix A hereto, as amended from time to time, pursuant to which the Management Company has agreed to provide portfolio and/or investment management services to certain funds and accounts and to certain collateralized loan obligation issuers and to borrowers in certain short-term or long-term warehouse or repurchase facilities in connection therewith (any such transaction, a “Transaction”, any fund, account, issuer, warehouse borrower or repurchase agreement seller in respect of any such Transaction, an “Account”, and the assets collateralizing each such Transaction and/or comprising the portfolio of such Account, a “Portfolio”);

WHEREAS, the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor desire to enter into this Agreement in order to permit the Sub-Advisor to provide certain limited services to assist the Management Company in performing certain obligations under the Management Agreements and Related Agreements;

WHEREAS, the Parties now desire to amend and restate the Existing Agreement.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals, and the receipt of good and valuable consideration, the receipt and sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties, intending to be legally bound, hereby agree that the Existing Agreement is hereby amended, restated and replaced in its entirety as follows.

1. Appointment; Limited Scope of Services.

(a) Highland is hereby appointed as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company for the purpose of assisting the Management Company in managing the Portfolios of each Account

pursuant to the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, in each case that have been included in the scope of this Agreement pursuant to the provisions of Section 8, subject to the terms set forth herein and subject to the supervision of the Management Company, and Highland hereby accepts such appointment.

(b) Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor shall, during the term and subject to the provisions of this Agreement:

(i) make recommendations to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio with respect to such Account among various types of securities, the nature and timing of the changes therein and the manner of implementing such changes, including recommendations as to the specific loans and other assets to be purchased, retained or sold by any such Account;

(ii) place orders with respect to, and arrange for, any investment by or on behalf of such Account (including executing and delivering all documents relating to such Account's investments on behalf of such Account or the Management Company, as applicable), upon receiving a proper instruction from the Management Company;

(iii) identify, evaluate, recommend to the Management Company, in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account, and, if applicable, negotiate the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of the Management Company for such Account;

(iv) assist the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account in performing due diligence on prospective Portfolio investments by such Account;

(v) provide information to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments and, if requested by the Management Company, provide information to assist in monitoring and servicing other investments by such Account

(vi) assist and advise the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis; and

(vii) assist the Management Company in performing any of its other obligations or duties as portfolio manager for such Account.

The foregoing responsibilities and obligations are collectively referred to herein as the "Services."

Notwithstanding the foregoing, all investment decisions will ultimately be the responsibility of, and will be made by and at the sole discretion of, the Management Company. Furthermore, the parties acknowledge and agree that the Sub-Advisor shall be required to provide only the services expressly described in this Section 1(b), and shall have no responsibility hereunder to provide any other services to the Management Company or any Transaction, including, but not limited to, administrative, management or similar services.

(c) The Sub-Advisor agrees during the term hereof to furnish the Services on the terms and conditions set forth herein and subject to the limitations contained herein. The Sub-Advisor agrees that, in performing the Services, it will comply with all applicable obligations of the Management Company set forth in the Management Agreements and the Related Agreements. In addition, with respect to any obligation that would be part of the Services but for the fact that the relevant Management Agreement or Related Agreement does not permit such obligation to be delegated by the Management Company to the Sub-Advisor, the Sub-Advisor, upon request in writing by the Management Company, shall work in good faith with the Management Company and shall use commercially reasonable efforts to assist the Management Company in satisfying all such obligations.

2. Compensation.

(a) As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement in respect of any Transaction, the Sub-Advisor will be entitled to receive the Sub-Advisory Fee payable thereto. The “Sub-Advisory Fee” shall be payable in accordance with Appendix A attached hereto, as such appendix may be amended by the Parties from time to time.

(b) Each party shall bear its own expenses; provided that the Management Company shall reimburse the Sub-Advisor for any and all costs and expenses that are properly Company Expenses or that may be borne by the Management Company under the Management Company LLC Agreement.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, if on any date the Management Company determines that it would not have sufficient funds available to it to make a payment of Indebtedness, it shall have the right to defer any and all amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement, including any fees and expenses; provided that the Management Company shall promptly pay all such amounts on the first date thereafter that sufficient amounts exist to make payment thereof.

(d) From time to time, the Management Company may enter into sub-advisory agreements with certain management companies on similar terms to this Agreement. Promptly following the receipt of any fees pursuant to such sub-advisory agreements, the Management Company shall pay 100% of such fees to the Sub-Advisor.

3. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each of the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor represents and warrants, as to itself only, that:

(i) it has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(ii) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(iii) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any government, governmental instrumentality or court or other person or entity is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(iv) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (A) its constituting and organizational documents; (B) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound; (C) any statute applicable to it; or (D) any law, decree, order, rule or regulation applicable to it of any court or regulatory, administrative or governmental agency, body of authority or arbitration having or asserting jurisdiction over it or its properties, which, in the case of clauses (B) through (D) above, would have a material adverse effect upon the performance of its duties hereunder.

(b) The Sub-Advisor represents and warrants to the Management Company that it is a registered investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended (the "Advisers Act").

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that it has received Part 2 of Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Form ADV filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Sub-Advisor will provide to the Management Company an updated copy of Part 2 of its Form ADV promptly upon any amendment to such Form ADV being filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

4. Standard of Care; Liability; Indemnification.

(a) Sub-Advisor Standard of Care. Subject to the terms and provisions of this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements, as applicable, the Sub-Advisor will perform its obligations hereunder and under the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements in good faith with reasonable care using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Sub-Advisor uses with respect to comparable assets that it manages for others and, without limiting the foregoing, in a manner which the Sub-Advisor reasonably believes to be consistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing relating to assets of the nature and character of the Portfolios, in each case except as expressly provided otherwise under this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the

Related Agreements. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor will follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder, under the Management Agreements and/or under the Related Agreements.

(b) Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, none of the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates, and any of their respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents (but shall not include the Management Company, its subsidiaries or member(s) and any managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents of the Management Company or its subsidiaries or member(s) (in their capacity as such)) (each a “Covered Person”) will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, any shareholder, partner or member thereof, any Account (or any other adviser, agent or representative thereof), or to any holder of notes, securities or other indebtedness issued by any Account (collectively, the “Management Company Related Parties”), for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the provision of the Services hereunder, for any losses that may be sustained in the purchase, holding or sale of any security or debt obligation by any Account, or as a result of any activities of the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company or any other adviser to or agent of the Account or any other sub-advisor appointed by the Management Company to provide portfolio management services to any other delegatee of the Management Company or any other person or entity, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a “Disabling Conduct”) on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of the Sub-Advisor, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of the Sub-Advisor with reasonable care, or (iii) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to any Management Company Related Party, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to such Management Company Related Party for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to any Management Company Related Party solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to any such Management Company Related Party, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to any Management Company Related Party in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care

(c) Indemnification. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated (“Claims”), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the Services, the activities of the Management Company Related Parties, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company Related Parties, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, any Management Agreement and/or the Related Documents, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys’ fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a “Proceeding”), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as “Damages”), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys’ fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person’s successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 4(c) shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 4(c) to the fullest extent permitted by law

(d) Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 4(c) are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the Transactions has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained

(e) Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 4(c) shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person

(f) Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to any Management Company Related Party in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

(g) Rights Under Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Management Company will ensure that the Sub-Advisor is provided substantially similar indemnification and exculpation rights as are afforded to the Management Company in its role as portfolio manager under any future Management Agreement or Related Agreement encompassed within the Services hereunder, and it is expressly acknowledged by the Parties that the Sub-Advisor may not consent to including a Management Agreement and the related Transaction and Related Agreements within the scope of this Agreement pursuant to Section 8 if such indemnification and exculpation rights are not reasonably acceptable to it.

5. Limitations on Employment of the Sub-Advisor; Conflicts of Interest.

(a) The services of the Sub-Advisor to the Management Company are not exclusive, and the Sub-Advisor may engage in any other business or render similar or different services to others including, without limitation, the direct or indirect sponsorship or management of other Transactions, investment-based accounts or commingled pools of capital, however structured, having investment objectives similar to those of the Management Company or the Accounts. Moreover, nothing in this Agreement shall limit or restrict the right of any manager, partner, officer or employee of the Sub-Advisor to engage in any other business or to devote his or her time and attention in part to any other business, whether of a similar or dissimilar nature to the Management Company or any Account, or to receive any fees or compensation in connection therewith.

(b) So long as this Agreement or any extension, renewal or amendment of this Agreement remains in effect, the Sub-Advisor shall be the only portfolio management sub-advisor for the Management Company. The Sub-Advisor assumes no responsibility under this Agreement other than to render the services called for hereunder. It is understood that directors, officers, employees, members and managers of the Management Company are or may become interested in the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates as directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members, managers or otherwise, and that the Sub-Advisor and directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members and managers of the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates are or may become similarly interested in the Management Company as members or otherwise.

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that various potential and actual conflicts of interest may exist with respect to the Sub-Advisor as described in the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV Part 2A and as described in Appendix B hereto, and the Management Company expressly acknowledges and agrees to the provisions contained in such Appendix B, as amended from time to time with mutual consent of the Parties.

6. Termination; Survival.

(a) This Agreement may be terminated, in its entirety or with respect to any Management Agreement, at any time without payment of penalty, by the Management Company upon 30 days' prior written notice to the Sub-Advisor.

(b) This Agreement shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated (and, if required thereunder, a successor portfolio manager has been appointed and accepted) or discharged; or (ii) the Management Company is no longer acting as portfolio manager, investment manager or in a similar capacity (whether due to removal, resignation or assignment) under such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements. Upon the termination of this Agreement with respect to any Management Agreement the Management Company shall provide prompt notice thereof to the Sub-Advisor, and Appendix A hereto shall be deemed to be amended by deleting such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements related thereto.

(c) All accrued and unpaid financial and indemnification obligations with respect to any conduct or events occurring prior to the effective date of the termination of this Agreement shall survive the termination of this Agreement.

7. Cooperation with Management Company. The Sub-Advisor shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Sub-Advisor. Specifically, the Sub-Advisor agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Sub-Advisor's obligations under this Agreement.

8. Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Sub-Advisor's duty to provide Services in connection with any Management Agreement shall not commence until (a) Appendix A to this Agreement has been amended by mutual agreement of the Parties to include such Management Agreement and the related Account, fund and/or account and Related Agreements and (b) the Sub-Advisor acknowledges receipt of such Management Agreement and each Related Agreement. The Sub-Advisor shall not be bound to comply with any amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or any Related Agreement until it has received a copy thereof from the Management Company. No amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or Related Agreement that, when applied to the obligations and rights of the Management Company under such Management Agreement or Related Agreement, affects (i) the obligations or rights of the Sub-Advisor hereunder; (ii) the amount of priority of any fees or other amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor hereunder; or (iii) any definitions relating to the matters covered in clause (i) or (ii) above, will apply to the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement unless in each such case the Sub-Advisor has consented thereto in writing (such consent not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its reasonable judgment that such amendment, modification, supplement or waiver could have a material adverse effect on the Sub-Advisor).

9. Amendments; Assignments.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 9, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 9, the Sub-Advisor may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(c) The Sub-Advisor may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 9(a) other than clause (ii) thereof (so long as such assignment does not constitute an assignment within the meaning of Section 202(a)(1) of the Advisers Act), (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an affiliate; provided that such affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Sub-Advisor in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided, further, that the Sub-Advisor shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Sub-Advisor will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

10. Advisory Restrictions. This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any Management Agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that (i) the Services are limited in scope; and (ii) this Agreement complies in all respects with all applicable (A) contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each Management Agreement and each Related Agreement and (B) laws, rules and regulations (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the Services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically without action by any person or entity be limited, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

11. Records; Confidentiality.

(a) The Sub-Advisor shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided, that the Sub-Advisor shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

(b) The Sub-Advisor shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Sub-Advisor hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued in connection with a Transaction or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolios, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager, (iv) as required by (A) applicable law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Sub-Advisor on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Sub-Advisor may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any Transaction, or (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolios as may be used by the Sub-Advisor in the ordinary course of its business. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Sub-Advisor may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company and each Account, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolios, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolios, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolios and the Transactions as is customarily disclosed by Sub-Advisors to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company, the Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

12. Notice. Any notice or demand to any party to this Agreement to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail, facsimile or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows (or to such other address, email address or facsimile number as shall have been notified to the other parties hereto):

14. WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY WITH RESPECT TO ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

15. Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the parties hereto shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the parties.

16. No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any party hereunder may be waived only upon the written consent of the parties hereto. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other party under this Agreement. Any failure by any party to this Agreement to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

17. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the parties, no party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other party.

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Sub-Advisor a Sub-Advisory Fee for the Services for the Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

APPENDIX B

Purchase and Sale Transactions; Brokerage

The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates may acquire or sell obligations or securities, for its own account or for the accounts of its customers, without either requiring or precluding the acquisition or sale of such obligations or securities for the account of any Account. Such investments may be the same or different from those made by or on behalf of the Management Company or the Accounts.

Additional Activities of the Sub-Advisor

Nothing herein shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its clients, its partners, its members, funds or other investment accounts managed by it or any of its affiliates, or their employees and their affiliates (collectively, the “Related Entities”), from engaging in other businesses, or from rendering services of any kind to the Management Company, its affiliates, any Account or any other Person or entity regardless of whether such business is in competition with the Management Company, its affiliates, such Account or otherwise. Without limiting the generality of the Sub-Advisor and its Related Entities may:

(a) serve as managers or directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories for the Management Company or any affiliate thereof, or for any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof, to the extent permitted by their respective organizational documents and underlying instruments, as from time to time amended, or by any resolutions duly adopted by the Management Company, any Account, their respective affiliates or any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets (or any affiliate thereof) pursuant to their respective organizational documents;

(b) receive fees for services of whatever nature rendered to the obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof;

(c) be retained to provide services unrelated to this Agreement to the Management Company, any Account or their respective affiliates and be paid therefor, on an arm’s-length basis;

(d) be a secured or unsecured creditor of, or hold a debt obligation of or equity interest in, the Management Company, any Account or any affiliate thereof or any obligor or issuer of any Portfolio Asset or any affiliate thereof;

(e) sell any Portfolio Asset to, or purchase or acquire any Portfolio Asset from, any Account while acting in the capacity of principal or agent; provided, however, that any such sale or purchase effected by the Sub-Advisor shall be subject to applicable law and any applicable provisions of this Agreement, the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, as applicable;

(f) underwrite, arrange, structure, originate, syndicate, act as a distributor of or make a market in any Portfolio Asset;

(g) serve as a member of any “creditors’ board”, “creditors’ committee” or similar creditor group with respect to any Portfolio Asset; or

(h) act as portfolio manager, portfolio manager, investment manager and/or investment adviser or sub-advisor in collateralized bond obligation vehicles, collateralized loan obligation vehicles and other similar warehousing, financing or other investment vehicles.

As a result, such individuals may possess information relating to obligors and issuers of Portfolio Assets that is (a) not known to or (b) known but restricted as to its use by the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for monitoring the Portfolio Assets and performing the Services under this Agreement. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in securities laws restrictions on transactions in such securities by the Management Company and/or any Account and otherwise create conflicts of interest for the Management Company and/or any Account. The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that, in all such instances, the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may in their discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made by the Management Company with respect to the investments of any Account and they have no duty, in making or managing such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that there are generally no ethical screens or information barriers between the Sub-Advisor and certain of its affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate Persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess applicable material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. The officers or affiliates of the Sub-Advisor may possess information relating to obligors or issuers of Portfolio Assets that is not known to the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for providing the Services under this Agreement. As a result, the Sub-Advisor may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of the Sub-Advisor to effect a transaction for the Management Company and/or any Account, and the Management Company and/or such Account’s investments may be constrained as a consequence of the Sub-Advisor’s inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its clients, including the Management Company and/or such Account.

Unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its sole discretion that such Transaction complies with the conflicts of interest provisions set forth in the applicable Management Agreement and Related Agreements, the Sub-Advisor will not direct any Account to acquire or sell loans or securities entered into or issued by (i) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates or any of its officers, directors or employees are directors or officers, (ii) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor or any of its respective affiliates act as principal or (iii) Persons about which the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates have material non-public information which the Sub-Advisor deems would prohibit it from advising as to the trading of such securities in accordance with applicable law.

It is understood that the Sub-Advisor and any of its affiliates may engage in any other business and furnish investment management and advisory services to others, including Persons which may have investment policies similar to those followed by the Management Company with respect to the Portfolio Assets and which may own securities or obligations of the same class, or which are of the same type, as the Portfolio Assets or other securities or obligations of the obligors or issuers of the Portfolio Assets. The Sub-Advisor and its affiliates will be free, in their sole discretion, to make recommendations to others, or effect transactions on behalf of themselves or for others, which may be the same as or different from those effected with respect to the Collateral. Nothing in this Agreement, in the Management Agreements or in the Related Agreements shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, acting either as principal or agent on behalf of others, from buying or selling, or from recommending to or directing any other account to buy or sell, at any time, securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same obligor or issuer, as those directed by the Sub-Advisor to be purchased or sold on behalf of an Account. It is understood that, to the extent permitted by applicable law, the Sub-Advisor, its Related Entities, or any of their owners, directors, managers, officers, stockholders, members, partners, partnership committee members, employees, agents or affiliates or the other Covered Persons or any member of their families or a Person or entity advised by the Sub-Advisor may have an interest in a particular transaction or in securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same issuer, as those that may be owned or acquired by an Account. The Management Company agrees that, in the course of providing the Services, the Sub-Advisor may consider its relationships with other clients (including obligors and issuers) and its affiliates.

The Management Company agrees that neither the Sub-Advisor nor any of its affiliates is under any obligation to offer any investment opportunity of which they become aware to the Management Company or any Account or to account to the Management Company or any Account for (or share with the Management Company or any Account or inform the Management Company or any Account of) any such transaction or any benefit received by them from any such transaction. The Management Company understands that the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may have, for their own accounts or for the accounts of others, portfolios with substantially the same portfolio criteria as are applicable to the Accounts. Furthermore, the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may make an investment on behalf of any client or on their own behalf without offering the investment opportunity or making any investment on behalf of the Management Company or any Account and, accordingly, investment opportunities may not be allocated among all such clients. The Management Company acknowledges that affirmative obligations may arise in the future, whereby the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates are obligated to offer certain investments to clients before or without the Sub-Advisor offering those investments to the Management Company or any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may make and/or hold investments in an obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities that may be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an investment in such obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities made and/or held by the Management Company or any Account, or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates serve on boards of directors, or otherwise have ongoing relationships or otherwise have interests different from or adverse to those of the Management Company and the Accounts.

Defined Terms

whether or not for the benefit of the related secured parties, securing the obligations of such Account.

“Portfolio Asset” shall mean any loan, eligible investment or other asset contained in the Portfolio.

The name, location and such other matters as the Parties desire to reflect with respect to each Shared Employee shall be identified on the books and records of each of the Management Company and the Staff and Services Provider, which may be amended in writing from time to time by the Parties to add or remove any Shared Employee to reflect the employment (or lack thereof) of such employee. Except as may otherwise separately be agreed in writing between the applicable Shared Employee and the Management Company and/or the Staff and Services Provider, in each of their discretion, each Shared Employee is an at-will employee and no guaranteed employment or other employment arrangement is agreed or implied by this Agreement with respect to any Shared Employee, and for avoidance of doubt this Agreement shall not amend, limit, constrain or modify in any way the employment arrangements as between any Shared Employee and the Staff and Services Provider or as between any Shared Employee and the Management Company, it being understood that the Management Company may enter into a short-form employment agreement with any Shared Employee memorializing such Shared Employee's status as an employee of the Management Company. If at any time any Shared Employee (or any other person employed by the Staff and Services provider who also provides services to the Management Company) shall be terminated from employment with the Staff and Services Provider or otherwise resigns or is removed from employment with the Staff and Services Provider, then such person may only serve as a separate direct employee of the Management Company upon the approval of the Management Company. The Staff and Services Provider may also employ the services of persons other than the Specified Persons as it deems fit in its sole discretion

(b) Notwithstanding that the Shared Employees shall be employed by both the Staff and Services Provider and the Management Company, the Parties acknowledge and agree that any and all salary and benefits of each Shared Employee shall be paid exclusively by the Staff and Services Provider and shall not be paid or borne by the Management Company and no additional amounts in connection therewith shall be due from the Management Company to the Staff and Services Provider.

(c) To the extent that a Shared Employee participates in the rendering of services to the Management Company's clients, the Shared Employee shall be subject to the oversight and control of the Management Company and such services shall be provided by the Shared Employee exclusively in his or her capacity as a "supervised person" of, or "person associated with", the Management Company (as such terms are defined in Sections 202(a)(25) and 202(a)(17), respectively, of the Advisers Act).

(d) Each Party may continue to oversee, supervise and manage the services of each Shared Employee in order to (1) ensure compliance with the Party's compliance policies and procedures, (2) ensure compliance with regulations applicable to the Party and (3) protect the interests of the Party and its clients; provided that Staff and Services Provider shall (A) cooperate with the Management Company's supervisory efforts and (B) make periodic reports to the Management Company regarding the adherence of Shared Employees to Applicable Law, including but not limited to the 1940 Act, the Advisers Act and the United States Commodity Exchange Act of 1936, as amended, in performing the services hereunder.

(e) Where a Shared Employee provides services hereunder through both Parties, the Parties shall cooperate to ensure that all such services are performed consistently with Applicable Law and relevant compliance controls and procedures designed to prevent, among other things, breaches in information security or the communication of confidential, proprietary or material non-public information.

(f) The Staff and Services Provider shall ensure that each Shared Employee has any registrations, qualifications and/or licenses necessary to provide the services hereunder.

(g) The Parties will cooperate to ensure that information about the Shared Employees is adequately and appropriately disclosed to clients, investors (and potential investors), investment banks operating as initial purchaser or placement agent with respect to any CLO or Account, and regulators, as applicable. To facilitate such disclosure, the Staff and Services Provider agrees to provide, or cause to be provided, to the Management Company such information as is deemed by the Management Company to be necessary or appropriate with respect to the Staff and Services Provider and the Shared Employees (including, but not limited to, biographical information about each Shared Employee).

(h) The Parties shall cooperate to ensure that, when so required, each has adopted a Code of Ethics meeting the requirements of the Advisers Act ("Code of Ethics") that is consistent with applicable law and which is substantially similar to the other Party's Code of Ethics.

(i) The Staff and Services Provider shall make reasonably available for use by the Management Company, including through Shared Employees providing services pursuant to this Agreement, any relevant intellectual property and systems necessary for the provision of the services hereunder.

(j) The Staff and Services Provider shall require that each Shared Employee:

(i) certify that he or she is subject to, and has been provided with, a copy of each Party's Code of Ethics and will make such reports, and seek prior clearance for such actions and activities, as may be required under the Codes of Ethics;

(ii) be subject to the supervision and oversight of each Party's officers and directors, including without limitation its Chief Compliance Officer ("CCO"), which CCO may be the same Person, with respect to the services provided to that Party or its clients;

(iii) provide services hereunder and take actions hereunder only as approved by the Management Company;

(iv) provide any information requested by a Party, as necessary to comply with applicable disclosure or regulatory obligations;

(v) to the extent authorized to transact on behalf of the Management Company or a CLO or Account, take reasonable steps to ensure that any such transaction is consistent with any policies and procedures that may be established by the Parties and all Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations; and

(vi) act, at all times, in a manner consistent with the fiduciary duties and standard of care owed by the Management Company to its members and direct or indirect investors or to a CLO or Account as well as clients of Staff and Services Provider by seeking to ensure that, among other things, information about any investment advisory or trading activity applicable to a particular client or group of clients is not used to benefit the Shared Employee, any Party or any other client or group of clients in contravention of such fiduciary duties or standard of care.

(k) Unless specifically authorized to do so, or appointed as an officer or authorized person of the Management Company with such authority, no Shared Employee may contract on behalf or in the name of the Management Company, acting as principal.

Section 2.04 Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations. The Management Company will promptly inform the Staff and Services Provider in writing of any Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations to which it agrees from time to time and the Staff and Services Provider shall take such Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations into account when providing assistance and advice in accordance with Section 2.2 above and any other assistance or advice provided in accordance with this Agreement.

Section 2.05 Compliance with Management Company Policies and Procedures. The Management Company will from time to time provide the Staff and Services Provider and the Shared Employees with any policy and procedure documentation which it establishes internally and to which it is bound to adhere in conducting its business pursuant to regulation, contract or otherwise. Subject to any other limitations in this Agreement, the Staff and Services Provider will use reasonable efforts to ensure any services it and the Shared Employees provide pursuant to this Agreement complies with or takes account of such internal policies and procedures.

Section 2.06 Authority. The Staff and Services Provider's scope of assistance and advice hereunder is limited to the services specifically provided for in this Agreement. The Staff and Services Provider shall not assume or be deemed to assume any rights or obligations of the Management Company under any other document or agreement to which the Management Company is a party. Notwithstanding any other express or implied provision to the contrary in this Agreement, the activities of the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement shall be subject to the overall policies of the Management Company, as notified to the Staff and Services Provider from time to time. The Staff and Services Provider shall not have any duties or obligations to the Management Company unless those duties and obligations are specifically provided for in this Agreement (or in any amendment, modification or novation hereto or hereof to which the Staff and Services Provider is a party).

Section 2.07 Third Parties.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider may employ third parties, including its affiliates, to render advice, provide assistance and to perform any of its duties under this Agreement; provided that notwithstanding the employment of third parties for any such purpose, the Staff and Services Provider shall not be relieved of any of its obligations or liabilities under this Agreement.

(b) In providing services hereunder, the Staff and Services Provider may rely in good faith upon and will incur no liability for relying upon advice of nationally recognized counsel (which may be counsel for the Management Company, a CLO or Account or any Affiliate of the foregoing), accountants or other advisers as the Staff and Services Provider determines, in its sole discretion, is reasonably appropriate in connection with the services provided by the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement.

Section 2.08 Management Company to Cooperate with the Staff and Services Provider.

In furtherance of the Staff and Services Provider's obligations under this Agreement the Management Company shall cooperate with, provide to, and fully inform the Staff and Services Provider of, any and all documents and information the Staff and Services Provider reasonably requires to perform its obligations under this Agreement.

Section 2.09 Power of Attorney. If the Management Company considers it necessary for the provision by the Staff and Services Provider of the assistance and advice under this Agreement (after consultation with the Staff and Services Provider), it may appoint the Staff and Services Provider as its true and lawful agent and attorney, with full power and authority in its name to sign, execute, certify, swear to, acknowledge, deliver, file, receive and record any and all documents that the Staff and Services Provider reasonably deems appropriate or necessary in connection with the execution and settlement of acquisitions of assets as directed by the Management Company and the Staff and Services Provider's powers and duties hereunder (which for the avoidance of doubt shall in no way involve the discretion and/or authority of the Management Company with respect to investments). Any such power shall be revocable in the sole discretion of the Management Company.

ARTICLE III

As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, the Staff and Services Provider will be entitled to receive the Staff and Services Fee payable thereto. The "Staff and Services Fee" shall be payable in accordance with Appendix A attached hereto, as such appendix may be amended by the Parties from time to time.

From time to time, the Management Company may enter into shared services agreements with certain management companies on similar terms to this Agreement. #### ARTICLE IV

REPRESENTATIONS AND COVENANTS

Section 4.01 Representations. Each of the Parties hereto represents and warrants that:

(a) It has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(b) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(c) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any Governmental Authority is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(d) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (i) its constituting and organizational documents; or (ii) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound.

ARTICLE V

COVENANTS

Section 5.01 Compliance; Advisory Restrictions.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Staff and Services Provider. Specifically, the Staff and Services Provider agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Staff and Services Provider's obligations under this Agreement.

(b) This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any portfolio management agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that this Agreement and all services performed hereunder comply in all respects with all (a) applicable contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each portfolio management agreement, investment management agreement or similar agreement and each document contemplated thereby; and (b) Applicable Laws (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically be limited without action by any person or entity, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

Section 5.02 Records; Confidentiality.

The Staff and Services Provider shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided that the Staff and Services Provider shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

The Staff and Services Provider shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Staff and Services Provider hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties, except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued by a CLO or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolio, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any CLO or Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity, (iv) as required by (A) Applicable Law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Staff and Services Provider or any of its Affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Staff and Services Provider on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Staff and Services Provider may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any CLO or Account, (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolio as may be used by the Staff and Services Provider in the ordinary course of its business or (xx) such

This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Staff and Services Provider, the Management Vehicles, the CLOs or Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

ARTICLE VI

EXCULPATION AND INDEMNIFICATION

Section 6.01 Standard of Care. Except as otherwise expressly provided herein, each Covered Person shall discharge its duties under this Agreement with the care, skill, prudence and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, each Covered Person shall follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder. No Covered Person shall deal with the income or assets of the Management Company in such Covered Person's own interest or for its own account. Each Covered Person in its respective sole and absolute discretion may separately engage or invest in any other business ventures, including those that may be in competition with the Management Company, and the Management Company will not have any rights in or to such ventures or the income or profits derived therefrom

Section 6.02 Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, or any shareholder, partner or member thereof, for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the conduct of the business of the Management Company or its General Partner, or any investment made or held by the Management Company or its General Partner, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a "Disabling Conduct") on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any act or omission of any Investor, (iii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of such Covered Person, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of such Covered Person with reasonable care, or (iv) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to the Management Company or any Member, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to the Management Company or to any such Member for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to the Management Company or any Member solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to the Management Company or the Members, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to the Management Company or any Member in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care.

Section 6.03 Indemnification by the Management Company. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated ("Claims"), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company or its General Partner, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company or its General Partner, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a "Proceeding"), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as "Damages"), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys' fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 6.03 shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 6.03 to the fullest extent permitted by law.

Section 6.04 Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 6.03 are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the CLOs or Accounts has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained.

Section 6.05 Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 6.03 shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person.

Section 6.06 Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to the Management Company or any Member in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

ARTICLE VII

TERMINATION

Section 7.01 Termination. Either Party may terminate this Agreement at any time upon at least thirty (30) days' written notice to the other.

ARTICLE VIII

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 8.01 Amendments. This Agreement may not be amended or modified except by an instrument in writing signed by each Party.

Section 8.02 Assignment and Delegation.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 8.02, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with Applicable Law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 8.02, the Staff and Services Provider may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with Applicable Law.

(c) The Staff and Services Provider may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 8.02(a) other than clause (ii) thereof, (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an Affiliate; provided that such Affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Staff and Services Provider in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided further that the Staff and Services Provider shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Staff and Services Provider will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

Section 8.03 Non-Recourse; Non-Petition.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider agrees that the payment of all amounts to which it is entitled pursuant to this Agreement shall be payable by the Management Company only to the extent of assets held in the Portfolio.

(b) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, the liability of the Management Company to the Staff and Services Provider hereunder is limited in recourse to the Portfolio, and if the proceeds of the Portfolio following the liquidation thereof are insufficient to meet the obligations of the Management Company hereunder in full, the Management Company shall have no further liability in respect of any such outstanding obligations, and such obligations and all claims of the Staff and Services Provider or any other Person against the Management Company hereunder shall thereupon extinguish and not thereafter revive. The Staff and Services Provider accepts that the obligations of the Management Company hereunder are the corporate obligations of the Management Company and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Management Company and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Management Company hereunder.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, any Staff and Services Provider agrees not to institute against, or join any other Person in instituting against, the Management Company any bankruptcy, reorganization, arrangement, insolvency, moratorium or liquidation proceedings, or other proceedings under United States federal or state bankruptcy laws, or similar laws until at least one year and one day (or, if longer, the then applicable preference period plus one day) after the payment in full all amounts payable in respect of any Indebtedness incurred to finance any portion of the Portfolio; provided that nothing in this provision shall preclude, or be deemed to stop, the Staff and Services Provider from taking any action prior to the expiration of the aforementioned one year and one day period (or, if longer, the applicable preference period then in effect plus one day) in (i) any case or proceeding voluntarily filed or commenced by the Management Company, or (ii) any involuntary insolvency proceeding filed or commenced against the Management Company by a Person other than the Staff and Services Provider.

(d) The Management Company hereby acknowledges and agrees that the Staff and Services Provider's obligations hereunder shall be solely the corporate obligations of the Staff and Services Provider, and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Staff and Services Provider and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider hereunder.

(e) The provisions of this Section 8.03 shall survive termination of this Agreement for any reason whatsoever.

Section 8.04 Governing Law.

(a) This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The Parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

(b) The Parties irrevocably agree for the benefit of each other that the courts of the State of Texas and the United States District Court located in the Northern District of Texas in Dallas are to have exclusive jurisdiction to settle any disputes (whether contractual or non-contractual) which may arise out of or in connection with this Agreement and that accordingly any action arising out of or in connection therewith (together referred to as "Proceedings") may be brought in such courts. The Parties irrevocably submit to the jurisdiction of such courts and waive any objection which they may have now or hereafter to the laying of the venue of any Proceedings in any such court and any claim that any Proceedings have been brought in an inconvenient forum and further irrevocably agree that a judgment in any Proceedings brought in such courts shall be conclusive and binding upon the Parties and may be enforced in the courts of any other jurisdiction.

Section 8.05 WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY IN RESPECT OF ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

Section 8.06 Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the Parties shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the Parties.

Section 8.07 No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any Party may be waived only upon the written consent of the Parties. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other Party. Section 8.08 Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written or electronic form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any Party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. Section 8.09 Third Party Beneficiaries. This Agreement is for the sole benefit of the Parties hereto and their permitted assigns and nothing herein express or implied shall give or be construed to give to any Person, other than the Parties hereto and such permitted assigns, any legal or equitable rights hereunder. For avoidance of doubt, this Agreement is not for the benefit or and is not enforceable by any Shared Employee, CLO or Account or any investor (directly or indirectly) in the Management Company.

Section 8.10 No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the Parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the Parties, no Party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other Party.

Section 8.11 Independent Contractor. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the Staff and Services Provider shall be deemed to be an independent contractor and, except as expressly provided or authorized herein, shall have no authority to act for or represent the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity in any manner or otherwise be deemed an agent of the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity.

Section 8.12 Written Disclosure Statement. The Management Company acknowledges receipt of Part 2 of the Staff and Services Provider's Form ADV, as required by Rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act, on or before the date of execution of this Agreement.

Section 8.13 Headings. The descriptive headings contained in this Agreement are for convenience of reference only and shall not affect in any way the meaning or interpretation of this Agreement.

Section 8.14 Entire Agreement. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the Parties with respect to such subject matter.

Section 8.15 Notices. Any notice or demand to any Party to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows:

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Staff and Services Provider a Staff and Services Fee for the services for the CLOs or Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such CLOs or Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such CLOs or Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

EXHIBIT A TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. Claimant: Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”) maintains its business at 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201. Highland files its proof of claim (the “Claim”) pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 105(a), 501, and 502(f) and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 3002 and 3003. Prior to the Involuntary Petition Date (defined below), Highland provided sub-advisory and shared services to the Debtors (defined below). Highland has provided portfolio management and advisory services to the Debtors pursuant to that certain Third Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement by and between the Debtors and Highland dated March 17, 2017 (“Sub-Advisory Agreement”) (Exhibit 1). Specifically, Highland has acted as an investment manager and has identified, evaluated, and recommended investments to investment vehicles advised or sub-advised by the Debtors. Highland has also provided the Debtors with back and middle office services pursuant to that certain Fourth Amended and Restated Shared Services Agreement by and between the Debtors and Highland dated March 17, 2017 (“Shared Services Agreement”) (Exhibit 2). Highland has provided the Debtors with all of the employees and staff necessary to manage the portfolios. Highland continued to provide the same sub-advisory and shared services to the Debtors throughout the Gap Period (defined below). To date, Highland continues to provide such services.

2. Debtors: Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management, G.P. (the “Debtors”). The Debtors’ cases have been consolidated under case number 18-30264 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas. Highland provides the service at the following address: 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201.

3. Indebtedness: Because the Debtors were put into bankruptcy involuntarily, the amount included in the proof of claim accounts for pre-petition claims as well as Gap Claims (defined below).

a. Pre-Petition: Joshua Terry, the petitioning creditor, filed the involuntary petition on January 30, 2018 (the “Petition Date”). As of the Petition Date, the outstanding indebtedness owing from the Debtors to Highland was as set forth below by account number:

Invoice	Type	Balance
A1-A7; BVK <sup>1</sup>	Sub-Advisory	$1,605,362.41
A1-A7; BVK	Shared Services	$1,017,213.62
	Totals	$2,622,576.03

b. Gap Period: When a debtor files bankruptcy, the order for relief is typically entered on the date the petition is filed. However, an involuntary bankruptcy case diverges from the simultaneous entry of an order for relief in that an order for relief is entered at a later date than when a petition is filed. This creates a period of time, referred to as the “gap period”, where the debtor may accrue post-petition but pre-order for relief debt. Pursuant to Section 502(f) of the Bankruptcy Code:

In an involuntary case, a claim arising in the ordinary course of the debtor’s business or financial affairs after the commencement of the case but before the earlier of the appointment of a trustee and order for relief shall be determined as of the date such claim arises, and shall be allowed under subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this section...the same as if such claim had arisen before the date of the filing of the petition.

11 U.S.C. 502(f).

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas

Claims arising during the gap period are entitled to priority treatment under section 507(a)(3). The Court entered the Order for Relief on April 13, 2018 (“Order for Relief Date”). Highland continued to provide services to the Debtors from January 30, 2018 to April 13, 2018 (“Gap Period”). The outstanding balance owed from the Debtors to Highland for the sub-advisory and shared services during the Gap Period is set forth below (and shall be referred to as the “Gap Claim”):

Account No.	Type	Balance
A1-A7; BVK	Sub-Advisory	$1,170,147.06
A1-A7; BVK	Shared Services	$879,417.29
	Totals	$2,049,564.35

c. Reservation of Rights as to Administrative Claim: Highland has provided uninterrupted sub-advisory and shared services since the Order for Relief Date. Highland reserves its rights to seek allowance of its administrative claims.

d. Indemnity Claims: Highland has contingent claims for indemnification pursuant to Section 6.03 of the Shared Services Agreement and Section 4(c) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement. According to Section 6.03 of the Shared Services Agreement and Section 4(c) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement, “the Management Company [Debtors] hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless Covered Person [Highland and its representatives] from...any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs...suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions...of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated, or unliquidated...arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company.” Highland reserves such contractual indemnification right.

4. Reservation of Rights; Other Rights: The Claims described in this Attachment are legal, binding, enforceable, allowed, and not subject to any offset, defense, claim, counterclaim or any other diminution of any type, kind or nature, whatsoever; provided, however, the Chapter 11 Trustee alleges that he may offset Highland's Claims and recover from Highland through his current adversary proceeding against Highland (Adversary Proceeding 18-03212). Highland disputes such contention, and believes all Claims sought herein are recoverable despite the Chapter 11 Trustee's allegations. No portion of the Claims or any funds previously paid to Highland are subject to impairment, avoidance, subordination, or disallowance pursuant to the Bankruptcy Code (including, without limitation, Bankruptcy Code § 502) or applicable non-bankruptcy law. Highland expressly reserves the right in the future to assert any and all claims that it may have, including, without limitation, imposition of a constructive trust, equitable lien, security interest, subrogation, marshaling, or other legal or equitable remedies to which it may be entitled. The filing of this proof of claim is not to be construed as an election of remedies. Highland further reserves the rights (a) to amend, modify or supplement this proof of claim, including any exhibit, schedule or annex, or to file an amended proof of claim for the purpose of modifying or liquidating the amount of any interest, fees, costs and expenses accrued or incurred subsequent to the Petition Date or any contingent or unliquidated claims or rights of Highland set forth herein; (b) file additional proofs of claim; and (c) against third parties.

7. Miscellaneous: This proof of claim is filed under compulsion of the bar date established in this bankruptcy case solely out of an abundance of caution to protect Highland from forfeiture of its claim within this bankruptcy proceeding. The amounts set forth in this proof of claim shall not be construed as an admission by Highland as to the amounts due and owing outside of this bankruptcy proceeding. The filing of this proof of claim is not: (a) a waiver or release of and/or Highland's rights or remedies against any person, entity or property; (b) a consent by Highland to entry of final judgment by this Court in any core proceeding commenced in this bankruptcy case, consistent with the United States Supreme Court's holding in Stern v. Marshall, 131 S. Ct. 2594 (2011); (c) a waiver of the right to move to withdraw the reference or otherwise challenge the jurisdiction of this Court; (d) a waiver of the right to a jury trial; (e) an election of a remedy which waives or otherwise affects any other remedy; or (f) a waiver of the right to assert a different or enhanced classification of priority for its Claim in respect of the other claims asserted in this bankruptcy case.

(i) make recommendations to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio with respect to such Account among various types of securities, the nature and timing of the changes therein and the manner of implementing such changes, including recommendations as to the specific loans and other assets to be purchased, retained or sold by any such Account;

(ii) place orders with respect to, and arrange for, any investment by or on behalf of such Account (including executing and delivering all documents relating to such Account's investments on behalf of such Account or the Management Company, as applicable), upon receiving a proper instruction from the Management Company;

(iii) identify, evaluate, recommend to the Management Company, in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account, and, if applicable, negotiate the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of the Management Company for such Account;

(iv) assist the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account in performing due diligence on prospective Portfolio investments by such Account;

(v) provide information to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments and, if requested by the Management Company, provide information to assist in monitoring and servicing other investments by such Account

(vi) assist and advise the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager for such Account with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis; and

(vii) assist the Management Company in performing any of its other obligations or duties as portfolio manager for such Account.

The foregoing responsibilities and obligations are collectively referred to herein as the "Services."

Notwithstanding the foregoing, all investment decisions will ultimately be the responsibility of, and will be made by and at the sole discretion of, the Management Company. Furthermore, the parties acknowledge and agree that the Sub-Advisor shall be required to provide only the services expressly described in this Section 1(b), and shall have no responsibility hereunder to provide any other services to the Management Company or any Transaction, including, but not limited to, administrative, management or similar services.

(c) The Sub-Advisor agrees during the term hereof to furnish the Services on the terms and conditions set forth herein and subject to the limitations contained herein. The Sub-Advisor agrees that, in performing the Services, it will comply with all applicable obligations of the Management Company set forth in the Management Agreements and the Related Agreements. In addition, with respect to any obligation that would be part of the Services but for the fact that the relevant Management Agreement or Related Agreement does not permit such obligation to be delegated by the Management Company to the Sub-Advisor, the Sub-Advisor, upon request in writing by the Management Company, shall work in good faith with the Management Company and shall use commercially reasonable efforts to assist the Management Company in satisfying all such obligations.

2. Compensation.

(a) As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement in respect of any Transaction, the Sub-Advisor will be entitled to receive the Sub-Advisory Fee payable thereto. The “Sub-Advisory Fee” shall be payable in accordance with Appendix A attached hereto, as such appendix may be amended by the Parties from time to time.

(b) Each party shall bear its own expenses; provided that the Management Company shall reimburse the Sub-Advisor for any and all costs and expenses that are properly Company Expenses or that may be borne by the Management Company under the Management Company LLC Agreement.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, if on any date the Management Company determines that it would not have sufficient funds available to it to make a payment of Indebtedness, it shall have the right to defer any and all amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement, including any fees and expenses; provided that the Management Company shall promptly pay all such amounts on the first date thereafter that sufficient amounts exist to make payment thereof.

(d) From time to time, the Management Company may enter into sub-advisory agreements with certain management companies on similar terms to this Agreement. Promptly following the receipt of any fees pursuant to such sub-advisory agreements, the Management Company shall pay 100% of such fees to the Sub-Advisor.

3. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each of the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor represents and warrants, as to itself only, that:

(i) it has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(ii) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(iii) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any government, governmental instrumentality or court or other person or entity is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(iv) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (A) its constituting and organizational documents; (B) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound; (C) any statute applicable to it; or (D) any law, decree, order, rule or regulation applicable to it of any court or regulatory, administrative or governmental agency, body of authority or arbitration having or asserting jurisdiction over it or its properties, which, in the case of clauses (B) through (D) above, would have a material adverse effect upon the performance of its duties hereunder.

(b) The Sub-Advisor represents and warrants to the Management Company that it is a registered investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended (the "Advisers Act").

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that it has received Part 2 of Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Form ADV filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Sub-Advisor will provide to the Management Company an updated copy of Part 2 of its Form ADV promptly upon any amendment to such Form ADV being filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

4. Standard of Care; Liability; Indemnification.

(a) Sub-Advisor Standard of Care. Subject to the terms and provisions of this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements, as applicable, the Sub-Advisor will perform its obligations hereunder and under the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements in good faith with reasonable care using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Sub-Advisor uses with respect to comparable assets that it manages for others and, without limiting the foregoing, in a manner which the Sub-Advisor reasonably believes to be consistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing relating to assets of the nature and character of the Portfolios, in each case except as expressly provided otherwise under this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the

Related Agreements. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor will follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder, under the Management Agreements and/or under the Related Agreements.

(b) Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, none of the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates, and any of their respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents (but shall not include the Management Company, its subsidiaries or member(s) and any managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents of the Management Company or its subsidiaries or member(s) (in their capacity as such)) (each a “Covered Person”) will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, any shareholder, partner or member thereof, any Account (or any other adviser, agent or representative thereof), or to any holder of notes, securities or other indebtedness issued by any Account (collectively, the “Management Company Related Parties”), for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the provision of the Services hereunder, for any losses that may be sustained in the purchase, holding or sale of any security or debt obligation by any Account, or as a result of any activities of the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company or any other adviser to or agent of the Account or any other sub-advisor appointed by the Management Company to provide portfolio management services to any other delegatee of the Management Company or any other person or entity, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a “Disabling Conduct”) on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of the Sub-Advisor, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of the Sub-Advisor with reasonable care, or (iii) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to any Management Company Related Party, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to such Management Company Related Party for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to any Management Company Related Party solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to any such Management Company Related Party, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to any Management Company Related Party in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care

(c) Indemnification. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated (“Claims”), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the Services, the activities of the Management Company Related Parties, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company Related Parties, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, any Management Agreement and/or the Related Documents, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys’ fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a “Proceeding”), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as “Damages”), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys’ fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person’s successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 4(c) shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 4(c) to the fullest extent permitted by law

(d) Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 4(c) are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the Transactions has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained

(e) Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 4(c) shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person

(f) Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to any Management Company Related Party in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

(g) Rights Under Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Management Company will ensure that the Sub-Advisor is provided substantially similar indemnification and exculpation rights as are afforded to the Management Company in its role as portfolio manager under any future Management Agreement or Related Agreement encompassed within the Services hereunder, and it is expressly acknowledged by the Parties that the Sub-Advisor may not consent to including a Management Agreement and the related Transaction and Related Agreements within the scope of this Agreement pursuant to Section 8 if such indemnification and exculpation rights are not reasonably acceptable to it.

5. Limitations on Employment of the Sub-Advisor; Conflicts of Interest.

(a) The services of the Sub-Advisor to the Management Company are not exclusive, and the Sub-Advisor may engage in any other business or render similar or different services to others including, without limitation, the direct or indirect sponsorship or management of other Transactions, investment-based accounts or commingled pools of capital, however structured, having investment objectives similar to those of the Management Company or the Accounts. Moreover, nothing in this Agreement shall limit or restrict the right of any manager, partner, officer or employee of the Sub-Advisor to engage in any other business or to devote his or her time and attention in part to any other business, whether of a similar or dissimilar nature to the Management Company or any Account, or to receive any fees or compensation in connection therewith.

(b) So long as this Agreement or any extension, renewal or amendment of this Agreement remains in effect, the Sub-Advisor shall be the only portfolio management sub-advisor for the Management Company. The Sub-Advisor assumes no responsibility under this Agreement other than to render the services called for hereunder. It is understood that directors, officers, employees, members and managers of the Management Company are or may become interested in the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates as directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members, managers or otherwise, and that the Sub-Advisor and directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members and managers of the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates are or may become similarly interested in the Management Company as members or otherwise.

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that various potential and actual conflicts of interest may exist with respect to the Sub-Advisor as described in the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV Part 2A and as described in Appendix B hereto, and the Management Company expressly acknowledges and agrees to the provisions contained in such Appendix B, as amended from time to time with mutual consent of the Parties.

6. Termination; Survival.

(a) This Agreement may be terminated, in its entirety or with respect to any Management Agreement, at any time without payment of penalty, by the Management Company upon 30 days' prior written notice to the Sub-Advisor.

(b) This Agreement shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated (and, if required thereunder, a successor portfolio manager has been appointed and accepted) or discharged; or (ii) the Management Company is no longer acting as portfolio manager, investment manager or in a similar capacity (whether due to removal, resignation or assignment) under such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements. Upon the termination of this Agreement with respect to any Management Agreement the Management Company shall provide prompt notice thereof to the Sub-Advisor, and Appendix A hereto shall be deemed to be amended by deleting such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements related thereto.

(c) All accrued and unpaid financial and indemnification obligations with respect to any conduct or events occurring prior to the effective date of the termination of this Agreement shall survive the termination of this Agreement.

7. Cooperation with Management Company. The Sub-Advisor shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Sub-Advisor. Specifically, the Sub-Advisor agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Sub-Advisor's obligations under this Agreement.

8. Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Sub-Advisor's duty to provide Services in connection with any Management Agreement shall not commence until (a) Appendix A to this Agreement has been amended by mutual agreement of the Parties to include such Management Agreement and the related Account, fund and/or account and Related Agreements and (b) the Sub-Advisor acknowledges receipt of such Management Agreement and each Related Agreement. The Sub-Advisor shall not be bound to comply with any amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or any Related Agreement until it has received a copy thereof from the Management Company. No amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or Related Agreement that, when applied to the obligations and rights of the Management Company under such Management Agreement or Related Agreement, affects (i) the obligations or rights of the Sub-Advisor hereunder; (ii) the amount of priority of any fees or other amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor hereunder; or (iii) any definitions relating to the matters covered in clause (i) or (ii) above, will apply to the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement unless in each such case the Sub-Advisor has consented thereto in writing (such consent not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its reasonable judgment that such amendment, modification, supplement or waiver could have a material adverse effect on the Sub-Advisor).

9. Amendments; Assignments.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 9, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 9, the Sub-Advisor may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(c) The Sub-Advisor may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 9(a) other than clause (ii) thereof (so long as such assignment does not constitute an assignment within the meaning of Section 202(a)(1) of the Advisers Act), (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an affiliate; provided that such affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Sub-Advisor in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided, further, that the Sub-Advisor shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Sub-Advisor will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

10. Advisory Restrictions. This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any Management Agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that (i) the Services are limited in scope; and (ii) this Agreement complies in all respects with all applicable (A) contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each Management Agreement and each Related Agreement and (B) laws, rules and regulations (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the Services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically without action by any person or entity be limited, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

11. Records; Confidentiality.

(a) The Sub-Advisor shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided, that the Sub-Advisor shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

(b) The Sub-Advisor shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Sub-Advisor hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued in connection with a Transaction or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolios, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager, (iv) as required by (A) applicable law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Sub-Advisor on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Sub-Advisor may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any Transaction, or (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolios as may be used by the Sub-Advisor in the ordinary course of its business. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Sub-Advisor may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company and each Account, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolios, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolios, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolios and the Transactions as is customarily disclosed by Sub-Advisors to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company, the Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

12. Notice. Any notice or demand to any party to this Agreement to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail, facsimile or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows (or to such other address, email address or facsimile number as shall have been notified to the other parties hereto):

(a) If to the Management Company:

Acis Capital Management, L.P.

Suite 700
Dallas, TX 75201

(b) If to the Sub-Advisor:

300 Crescent Court
Suite 700

13. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

14. WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY WITH RESPECT TO ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

15. Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the parties hereto shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the parties.

16. No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any party hereunder may be waived only upon the written consent of the parties hereto. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other party under this Agreement. Any failure by any party to this Agreement to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

17. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

18. Third Party Beneficiaries. Nothing in this Agreement will be construed to give any person or entity other than the parties to this Agreement, the Accounts and any person or entity with indemnification rights hereunder any legal or equitable right, remedy, or claim under or with respect to this Agreement or any provision of this Agreement. Except as provided in the foregoing sentence, this Agreement and all of its provisions and conditions are for the sole and exclusive benefit of the parties to this Agreement and their successors and assigns.

19. No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the parties, no party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other party.

20. Entire Agreement. This Agreement, together with each Management Agreement and Related Agreement, constitutes the entire agreement of the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the parties with respect to such subject matter.

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Sub-Advisor a Sub-Advisory Fee for the Services for the Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

APPENDIX B

Purchase and Sale Transactions; Brokerage

The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates may acquire or sell obligations or securities, for its own account or for the accounts of its customers, without either requiring or precluding the acquisition or sale of such obligations or securities for the account of any Account. Such investments may be the same or different from those made by or on behalf of the Management Company or the Accounts.

Additional Activities of the Sub-Advisor

Nothing herein shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its clients, its partners, its members, funds or other investment accounts managed by it or any of its affiliates, or their employees and their affiliates (collectively, the “Related Entities”), from engaging in other businesses, or from rendering services of any kind to the Management Company, its affiliates, any Account or any other Person or entity regardless of whether such business is in competition with the Management Company, its affiliates, such Account or otherwise. Without limiting the generality of the Sub-Advisor and its Related Entities may:

(a) serve as managers or directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories for the Management Company or any affiliate thereof, or for any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof, to the extent permitted by their respective organizational documents and underlying instruments, as from time to time amended, or by any resolutions duly adopted by the Management Company, any Account, their respective affiliates or any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets (or any affiliate thereof) pursuant to their respective organizational documents;

(b) receive fees for services of whatever nature rendered to the obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof;

(c) be retained to provide services unrelated to this Agreement to the Management Company, any Account or their respective affiliates and be paid therefor, on an arm’s-length basis;

(d) be a secured or unsecured creditor of, or hold a debt obligation of or equity interest in, the Management Company, any Account or any affiliate thereof or any obligor or issuer of any Portfolio Asset or any affiliate thereof;

(e) sell any Portfolio Asset to, or purchase or acquire any Portfolio Asset from, any Account while acting in the capacity of principal or agent; provided, however, that any such sale or purchase effected by the Sub-Advisor shall be subject to applicable law and any applicable provisions of this Agreement, the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, as applicable;

(f) underwrite, arrange, structure, originate, syndicate, act as a distributor of or make a market in any Portfolio Asset;

(g) serve as a member of any “creditors’ board”, “creditors’ committee” or similar creditor group with respect to any Portfolio Asset; or

(h) act as portfolio manager, portfolio manager, investment manager and/or investment adviser or sub-advisor in collateralized bond obligation vehicles, collateralized loan obligation vehicles and other similar warehousing, financing or other investment vehicles.

As a result, such individuals may possess information relating to obligors and issuers of Portfolio Assets that is (a) not known to or (b) known but restricted as to its use by the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for monitoring the Portfolio Assets and performing the Services under this Agreement. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in securities laws restrictions on transactions in such securities by the Management Company and/or any Account and otherwise create conflicts of interest for the Management Company and/or any Account. The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that, in all such instances, the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may in their discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made by the Management Company with respect to the investments of any Account and they have no duty, in making or managing such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that there are generally no ethical screens or information barriers between the Sub-Advisor and certain of its affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate Persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess applicable material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. The officers or affiliates of the Sub-Advisor may possess information relating to obligors or issuers of Portfolio Assets that is not known to the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for providing the Services under this Agreement. As a result, the Sub-Advisor may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of the Sub-Advisor to effect a transaction for the Management Company and/or any Account, and the Management Company and/or such Account’s investments may be constrained as a consequence of the Sub-Advisor’s inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its clients, including the Management Company and/or such Account.

Unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its sole discretion that such Transaction complies with the conflicts of interest provisions set forth in the applicable Management Agreement and Related Agreements, the Sub-Advisor will not direct any Account to acquire or sell loans or securities entered into or issued by (i) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates or any of its officers, directors or employees are directors or officers, (ii) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor or any of its respective affiliates act as principal or (iii) Persons about which the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates have material non-public information which the Sub-Advisor deems would prohibit it from advising as to the trading of such securities in accordance with applicable law.

It is understood that the Sub-Advisor and any of its affiliates may engage in any other business and furnish investment management and advisory services to others, including Persons which may have investment policies similar to those followed by the Management Company with respect to the Portfolio Assets and which may own securities or obligations of the same class, or which are of the same type, as the Portfolio Assets or other securities or obligations of the obligors or issuers of the Portfolio Assets. The Sub-Advisor and its affiliates will be free, in their sole discretion, to make recommendations to others, or effect transactions on behalf of themselves or for others, which may be the same as or different from those effected with respect to the Collateral. Nothing in this Agreement, in the Management Agreements or in the Related Agreements shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, acting either as principal or agent on behalf of others, from buying or selling, or from recommending to or directing any other account to buy or sell, at any time, securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same obligor or issuer, as those directed by the Sub-Advisor to be purchased or sold on behalf of an Account. It is understood that, to the extent permitted by applicable law, the Sub-Advisor, its Related Entities, or any of their owners, directors, managers, officers, stockholders, members, partners, partnership committee members, employees, agents or affiliates or the other Covered Persons or any member of their families or a Person or entity advised by the Sub-Advisor may have an interest in a particular transaction or in securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same issuer, as those that may be owned or acquired by an Account. The Management Company agrees that, in the course of providing the Services, the Sub-Advisor may consider its relationships with other clients (including obligors and issuers) and its affiliates.

The Management Company agrees that neither the Sub-Advisor nor any of its affiliates is under any obligation to offer any investment opportunity of which they become aware to the Management Company or any Account or to account to the Management Company or any Account for (or share with the Management Company or any Account or inform the Management Company or any Account of) any such transaction or any benefit received by them from any such transaction. The Management Company understands that the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may have, for their own accounts or for the accounts of others, portfolios with substantially the same portfolio criteria as are applicable to the Accounts. Furthermore, the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may make an investment on behalf of any client or on their own behalf without offering the investment opportunity or making any investment on behalf of the Management Company or any Account and, accordingly, investment opportunities may not be allocated among all such clients. The Management Company acknowledges that affirmative obligations may arise in the future, whereby the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates are obligated to offer certain investments to clients before or without the Sub-Advisor offering those investments to the Management Company or any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may make and/or hold investments in an obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities that may be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an investment in such obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities made and/or held by the Management Company or any Account, or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates serve on boards of directors, or otherwise have ongoing relationships or otherwise have interests different from or adverse to those of the Management Company and the Accounts.

(e) Where a Shared Employee provides services hereunder through both Parties, the Parties shall cooperate to ensure that all such services are performed consistently with Applicable Law and relevant compliance controls and procedures designed to prevent, among other things, breaches in information security or the communication of confidential, proprietary or material non-public information.

(ii) be subject to the supervision and oversight of each Party's officers and directors, including without limitation its Chief Compliance Officer ("CCO"), which CCO may be the same Person, with respect to the services provided to that Party or its clients;

(iii) provide services hereunder and take actions hereunder only as approved by the Management Company;

(iv) provide any information requested by a Party, as necessary to comply with applicable disclosure or regulatory obligations;

(v) to the extent authorized to transact on behalf of the Management Company or a CLO or Account, take reasonable steps to ensure that any such transaction is consistent with any policies and procedures that may be established by the Parties and all Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations; and

Section 2.04 Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations. The Management Company will promptly inform the Staff and Services Provider in writing of any Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations to which it agrees from time to time and the Staff and Services Provider shall take such Applicable Asset Criteria and Concentrations into account when providing assistance and advice in accordance with Section 2.2 above and any other assistance or advice provided in accordance with this Agreement.

Section 2.05 Compliance with Management Company Policies and Procedures. The Management Company will from time to time provide the Staff and Services Provider and the Shared Employees with any policy and procedure documentation which it establishes internally and to which it is bound to adhere in conducting its business pursuant to regulation, contract or otherwise. Section 2.06 Authority. The Staff and Services Provider's scope of assistance and advice hereunder is limited to the services specifically provided for in this Agreement. The Staff and Services Provider shall not assume or be deemed to assume any rights or obligations of the Management Company under any other document or agreement to which the Management Company is a party. Notwithstanding any other express or implied provision to the contrary in this Agreement, the activities of the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement shall be subject to the overall policies of the Management Company, as notified to the Staff and Services Provider from time to time. The Staff and Services Provider shall not have any duties or obligations to the Management Company unless those duties and obligations are specifically provided for in this Agreement (or in any amendment, modification or novation hereto or hereof to which the Staff and Services Provider is a party).

Section 2.07 Third Parties.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider may employ third parties, including its affiliates, to render advice, provide assistance and to perform any of its duties under this Agreement; provided that notwithstanding the employment of third parties for any such purpose, the Staff and Services Provider shall not be relieved of any of its obligations or liabilities under this Agreement.

(b) In providing services hereunder, the Staff and Services Provider may rely in good faith upon and will incur no liability for relying upon advice of nationally recognized counsel (which may be counsel for the Management Company, a CLO or Account or any Affiliate of the foregoing), accountants or other advisers as the Staff and Services Provider determines, in its sole discretion, is reasonably appropriate in connection with the services provided by the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement.

Section 2.08 Management Company to Cooperate with the Staff and Services Provider.

In furtherance of the Staff and Services Provider's obligations under this Agreement the Management Company shall cooperate with, provide to, and fully inform the Staff and Services Provider of, any and all documents and information the Staff and Services Provider reasonably requires to perform its obligations under this Agreement.

Section 2.09 Power of Attorney. If the Management Company considers it necessary for the provision by the Staff and Services Provider of the assistance and advice under this Agreement (after consultation with the Staff and Services Provider), it may appoint the Staff and Services Provider as its true and lawful agent and attorney, with full power and authority in its name to sign, execute, certify, swear to, acknowledge, deliver, file, receive and record any and all documents that the Staff and Services Provider reasonably deems appropriate or necessary in connection with the execution and settlement of acquisitions of assets as directed by the Management Company and the Staff and Services Provider's powers and duties hereunder (which for the avoidance of doubt shall in no way involve the discretion and/or authority of the Management Company with respect to investments). Any such power shall be revocable in the sole discretion of the Management Company.

ARTICLE III

CONSIDERATION AND EXPENSES

Section 3.01 Consideration. As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, the Staff and Services Provider will be entitled to receive the Staff and Services Fee payable thereto. The "Staff and Services Fee" shall be payable in accordance with Appendix A attached hereto, as such appendix may be amended by the Parties from time to time.

From time to time, the Management Company may enter into shared services agreements with certain management companies on similar terms to this Agreement. Promptly following the receipt of any fees pursuant to such shared services agreements, the Management Company shall pay 100% of such fees to the Staff and Services Provider.

Section 3.03 Costs and Expenses. Each party shall bear its own expenses; provided that the Management Company shall reimburse the Staff and Services Provider for any and all costs and expenses that may be borne properly by the Management Company.

Section 3.04 Deferral. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, if on any date the Management Company determines that it would not have sufficient funds available to it to make a payment of Indebtedness, it shall have the right to defer any all and amounts payable to the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement, including any fees and expenses; provided that the Management Company shall promptly pay all such amounts on the first date thereafter that sufficient amounts exist to make payment thereof.

ARTICLE IV

REPRESENTATIONS AND COVENANTS

Section 4.01 Representations. Each of the Parties hereto represents and warrants that:

(a) It has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(b) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(c) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any Governmental Authority is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(d) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (i) its constituting and organizational documents; or (ii) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound.

ARTICLE V

COVENANTS

Section 5.01 Compliance; Advisory Restrictions.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Staff and Services Provider. Specifically, the Staff and Services Provider agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Staff and Services Provider's obligations under this Agreement.

(b) This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any portfolio management agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that this Agreement and all services performed hereunder comply in all respects with all (a) applicable contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each portfolio management agreement, investment management agreement or similar agreement and each document contemplated thereby; and (b) Applicable Laws (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically be limited without action by any person or entity, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

Section 5.02 Records; Confidentiality.

The Staff and Services Provider shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided that the Staff and Services Provider shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

The Staff and Services Provider shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Staff and Services Provider hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties, except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued by a CLO or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolio, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any CLO or Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity, (iv) as required by (A) Applicable Law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Staff and Services Provider or any of its Affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Staff and Services Provider on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Staff and Services Provider may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any CLO or Account, (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolio as may be used by the Staff and Services Provider in the ordinary course of its business or (xx) such information as is routinely disclosed to the trustee, custodian or collateral administrator of any CLO or Account in connection with such trustee's, custodian's or collateral administrator's performance of its obligations under the transaction documents related to such CLO or Account. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Staff and Services Provider may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as staff and services provider to the Management Company, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolio, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolio, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolio and the CLOs or Accounts as is customarily disclosed by staff and services providers to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Staff and Services Provider, the Management Vehicles, the CLOs or Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

ARTICLE VI

EXCULPATION AND INDEMNIFICATION

Section 6.01 Standard of Care. Except as otherwise expressly provided herein, each Covered Person shall discharge its duties under this Agreement with the care, skill, prudence and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, each Covered Person shall follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder. No Covered Person shall deal with the income or assets of the Management Company in such Covered Person's own interest or for its own account. Each Covered Person in its respective sole and absolute discretion may separately engage or invest in any other business ventures, including those that may be in competition with the Management Company, and the Management Company will not have any rights in or to such ventures or the income or profits derived therefrom

Section 6.02 Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, or any shareholder, partner or member thereof, for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the conduct of the business of the Management Company or its General Partner, or any investment made or held by the Management Company or its General Partner, unless such act or omission was made in bad faith or is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a "Disabling Conduct") on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any act or omission of any Investor, (iii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of such Covered Person, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of such Covered Person with reasonable care, or (iv) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to the Management Company or any Member, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to the Management Company or to any such Member for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to the Management Company or any Member solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to the Management Company or the Members, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to the Management Company or any Member in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care.

Section 6.03 Indemnification by the Management Company. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated ("Claims"), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company or its General Partner, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company or its General Partner, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a "Proceeding"), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as "Damages"), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons.

Expenses (including attorneys' fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder may be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 6.03 shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 6.03 to the fullest extent permitted by law.

Section 6.04 Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 6.03 are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the CLOs or Accounts has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained.

Section 6.05 Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 6.03 shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person.

Section 6.06 Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to the Management Company or any Member in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

ARTICLE VII

TERMINATION

Section 7.01 Termination. Either Party may terminate this Agreement at any time upon at least thirty (30) days' written notice to the other.

ARTICLE VIII

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 8.01 Amendments. This Agreement may not be amended or modified except by an instrument in writing signed by each Party.

Section 8.02 Assignment and Delegation.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 8.02, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with Applicable Law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 8.02, the Staff and Services Provider may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with Applicable Law.

(c) The Staff and Services Provider may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 8.02(a) other than clause (ii) thereof, (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an Affiliate; provided that such Affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Staff and Services Provider in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided further that the Staff and Services Provider shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Staff and Services Provider will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

Section 8.03 Non-Recourse; Non-Petition.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider agrees that the payment of all amounts to which it is entitled pursuant to this Agreement shall be payable by the Management Company only to the extent of assets held in the Portfolio.

(b) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, the liability of the Management Company to the Staff and Services Provider hereunder is limited in recourse to the Portfolio, and if the proceeds of the Portfolio following the liquidation thereof are insufficient to meet the obligations of the Management Company hereunder in full, the Management Company shall have no further liability in respect of any such outstanding obligations, and such obligations and all claims of the Staff and Services Provider or any other Person against the Management Company hereunder shall thereupon extinguish and not thereafter revive. The Staff and Services Provider accepts that the obligations of the Management Company hereunder are the corporate obligations of the Management Company and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Management Company and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Management Company hereunder.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, any Staff and Services Provider agrees not to institute against, or join any other Person in instituting against, the Management Company any bankruptcy, reorganization, arrangement, insolvency, moratorium or liquidation proceedings, or other proceedings under United States federal or state bankruptcy laws, or similar laws until at least one year and one day (or, if longer, the then applicable preference period plus one day) after the payment in full all amounts payable in respect of any Indebtedness incurred to finance any portion of the Portfolio; provided that nothing in this provision shall preclude, or be deemed to stop, the Staff and Services Provider from taking any action prior to the expiration of the aforementioned one year and one day period (or, if longer, the applicable preference period then in effect plus one day) in (i) any case or proceeding voluntarily filed or commenced by the Management Company, or (ii) any involuntary insolvency proceeding filed or commenced against the Management Company by a Person other than the Staff and Services Provider.

(d) The Management Company hereby acknowledges and agrees that the Staff and Services Provider's obligations hereunder shall be solely the corporate obligations of the Staff and Services Provider, and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Staff and Services Provider and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider hereunder.

(e) The provisions of this Section 8.03 shall survive termination of this Agreement for any reason whatsoever.

Section 8.04 Governing Law.

(a) This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The Parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

(b) The Parties irrevocably agree for the benefit of each other that the courts of the State of Texas and the United States District Court located in the Northern District of Texas in Dallas are to have exclusive jurisdiction to settle any disputes (whether contractual or non-contractual) which may arise out of or in connection with this Agreement and that accordingly any action arising out of or in connection therewith (together referred to as "Proceedings") may be brought in such courts. The Parties irrevocably submit to the jurisdiction of such courts and waive any objection which they may have now or hereafter to the laying of the venue of any Proceedings in any such court and any claim that any Proceedings have been brought in an inconvenient forum and further irrevocably agree that a judgment in any Proceedings brought in such courts shall be conclusive and binding upon the Parties and may be enforced in the courts of any other jurisdiction.

Section 8.05 WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY IN RESPECT OF ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

Section 8.06 Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the Parties shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the Parties.

Section 8.07 No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any Party may be waived only upon the written consent of the Parties. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other Party. Any failure by any Party to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

Section 8.08 Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written or electronic form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any Party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the Parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

Section 8.09 Third Party Beneficiaries. This Agreement is for the sole benefit of the Parties hereto and their permitted assigns and nothing herein express or implied shall give or be construed to give to any Person, other than the Parties hereto and such permitted assigns, any legal or equitable rights hereunder. For avoidance of doubt, this Agreement is not for the benefit or and is not enforceable by any Shared Employee, CLO or Account or any investor (directly or indirectly) in the Management Company.

Section 8.10 No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the Parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the Parties, no Party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other Party.

Section 8.11 Independent Contractor. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the Staff and Services Provider shall be deemed to be an independent contractor and, except as expressly provided or authorized herein, shall have no authority to act for or represent the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity in any manner or otherwise be deemed an agent of the Management Company or any CLO or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity.

Section 8.12 Written Disclosure Statement. The Management Company acknowledges receipt of Part 2 of the Staff and Services Provider's Form ADV, as required by Rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act, on or before the date of execution of this Agreement.

Section 8.13 Headings. The descriptive headings contained in this Agreement are for convenience of reference only and shall not affect in any way the meaning or interpretation of this Agreement.

Section 8.14 Entire Agreement. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the Parties with respect to such subject matter.

Section 8.15 Notices. Any notice or demand to any Party to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows:

Appendix A

The Management Company shall pay to the Staff and Services Provider a Staff and Services Fee for the services for the CLOs or Accounts in an amount equal to the aggregate management fees that would be received by the Management Company for such CLOs or Accounts if such management fees were calculated in exact conformity with the calculation of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, except that the management fee rates applied in such calculation were replaced by the fee rate set forth in the following table. Such fees shall be payable promptly (or at such time as is otherwise agreed by the parties) following the Management Company's receipt of management fees for such CLOs or Accounts, it being understood that none of the foregoing shall prohibit the Management Company from waiving or entering into side letters with respect to management fees for such CLOs or Accounts; provided that any such waived or reduced amounts shall not be recognized for purposes of calculating the fees payable by the Management Company hereunder. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties may agree to a different allocation from that set forth during any period in order to reflect the then current fair market value of the Services rendered.

1 cost, $70 million of notes get forgiven? How is that
2 possible? How is that possible? It doesn't pass the good
3 faith test. The Court should deny the motion.

4 Thank you, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Morris, in all of your listing of 6 allegedly problematic things, one trail my brain was going
7 down is this: Is this adversary going to morph even further
8 to add fraudulent transfer allegations? I mean, if notes --

9 MR. MORRIS: Here's the --

10 THE COURT: -- were forgiven or agreements were made 11 --

12 MR. MORRIS: Yeah, I --

13 THE COURT: -- that they would be forgiven if, you
14 know, assets are sold at a dollar more than cost, is the 15 Debtor going to say, well, okay, if this is an agreement,
16 there was a fraudulent transfer?

17 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, that is an excellent 18 question, one which I was discussing with my partners just 19 this morning. You know, we have to -- we're balancing a 20 number of things on our side, including the delay that that 21 might entail; including, you know, what happens if we go down
22 that path. You know, the benefit of suing under the notes, of 23 course, is that he's contractually obligated to pay all of our 24 fees.

25 And so we're balancing all of those things as these -- as

1 these defenses metastasize. But it's something that we're
2 considering, and we reserve the right to do exactly that, as
3 these defenses continue to get -- and it would be fraudulent
4 transfer, it would be breach of fiduciary duty against Nancy
5 Dondero, it would be breach of fiduciary duty against Jim
6 Dondero. I'm sure that there are other claims, Your Honor.
7 But if they want to -- if I'm forced to go down that path, I'm 8 certainly going to use every tool that I have available to 9 recover these amounts from the -- for the Debtor and their 10 creditors. This is just an abuse of process.

11 How do you -- how does one enter into agreements of this
12 type without telling your CFO, without telling your auditors,
13 without putting it in writing? And I asked Mr. Dondero, what 14 benefit did the Debtor get from all of this? And you know
15 what his answer was, Your Honor? Because it's really -- it's 16 appalling. It was going to give him heightened focus on 17 getting the job done because of this agreement that he entered
18 into with his sister, Nancy, acting on behalf of the Debtor,
19 with no information, with no documents, with no notes, with no
20 advice, with no corporate resolutions. The Debtor was going
21 to get Mr. Dondero's heightened focus to sell MGM, Trussway,
22 or Cornerstone for one dollar above cost.

23 I think the fraudulent transfer claim is probably a pretty 24 solid one. But why do we have to do this? Why do we have to 25 do this?

1 THE COURT: Well, one of the reasons I'm asking is I
2 would not set the motion to withdraw the reference status
3 conference on an expedited basis, which I was asked to do a
4 few days ago in these two adversary proceedings, and I can't
5 remember when I've set it, but now I'm even worried, if I
6 grant this motion, is it going to be premature to have that
7 status conference in a month or so, whenever I've set it,
8 because if I grant this motion I'm wondering, am I going to 9 have your motion to amend to add fraudulent transfer claims?
10 It's -- you know, I want to give as complete a package to the 11 District Court as I can whenever I have that motion to 12 withdraw the reference.

13 All right. Ms. Drawhorn, back to you. As I said --

14 MS. DRAWHORN: Yes.

15 THE COURT: -- before inviting Mr. Morris to make his 16 argument, I know the law is very much on your clients' favor
17 as far as the law construing Rule 15(a). But my goodness, I'm 18 wondering if your client needs -- your client needs to be 19 careful what they're asking for here, after what I've just 20 heard.

21 Anyway, what -- you get the last word on this.

22 MS. DRAWHORN: Yes. Thank you, Your Honor. My 23 response is that Mr. Morris's argument was all on the merits
24 of the defenses, and certainly he is free to argue on the 25 merits, but that's not a determination for today and that's

1 THE COURT: Please upload an order, Ms. Drawhorn,
2 granting your motion with these specific requirements that
3 I've orally worked in.

4 I think clients need to be careful what they ask for. I'm
5 very concerned. And I know it was just argument and I'll hear
6 evidence, but of all of the things that I guess -- well, I'm
7 concerned about a lot of things, but do we have audited
8 financial statements that didn't disclose these agreements
9 with regard to --

10 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: I mean, that's -- I'm just -- you know,
12 there's a lot to be concerned about on that point alone, I
13 would think. But, all right. If there's nothing further, we 14 are adjourned. Thank you.

15 THE CLERK: All rise.
